HISTORICAL INTRODUCTION

LONDON was one of the latest of the great capitals of Europe to provide itself with a University. Why this should be so must remain a curious and profoundly interesting question to which, it may be surmised, no single and no completely adequate answer will be given. There were in the Middle Ages a number of scholastic institutions centred in London, and there was apparently a loose association among these of the kind which elsewhere—e.g., at Paris—developed into a University.

Possibly it is the existence of this federation which explains the references to a University in London which are met with from time to time. In the appendix to Stow's Annals, 1615, for instance, there is what purports to be, in three parts, an account of the “three famous Universities of Oxford, Cambridge, and London.” The author of the third of these treatises, Sir George Buck, enumerates the Gresham Foundation, the Divinity Schools at Westminster and St. Paul's, the Inns of Court and Chancery, the College of Heralds, the School of Civil Law at Doctor's Commons, and St. Paul's School, which had been founded by Dean Colet in 1510, as forming collectively a complete academic system, and “lacking nothing but a common government and the protection of an honourable Chancellor” to give to it the unity and repute of a University.

The ancient Inns of Court and Chancery themselves are also referred to on more than one occasion as Universities (e.g., by Fortescue and Stow) and indeed the existing inns present to-day some of the features of the old Universities.

Various projects for the creation of a University in London had been put forward from time to time. The only one of these which even partially materialised is the College associated with the name of Sir Thomas Gresham, who died in 1579. By his will the rents of the Royal Exchange were, with Gresham House (his town residence), vested in the hands of the Corporation of London and of the Mercers' Company, who were to appoint lecturers in divinity, astronomy, geometry, music, law, medicine and rhetoric. The Professors were required to be unmarried men and each was to be provided with residential accommodation. The College was not very successful, although its early Professors included men such as Isaac Barrow, Hooke, Petty, Dr. John Ball, and Sir Christopher Wren. The great Fire of London destroyed the Royal Exchange and deprived it of its chief source of revenue, and in 1767 the building was sold to the Government. The interesting lectures which are still delivered at the present Gresham College in the City of London are the only surviving link with Sir Thomas Gresham's noble plan.

1825 The movement which, after long delay and much opposition, was finally responsible for the foundation of a University in London was unrelated to any of its predecessors. It drew its inspiration from the same source as that which was responsible for the Reform Bill and for the other changes, political, legal, and social, which are associated with Bentham and the remarkable men whom he gathered around him. The first public pronouncement was contained in an open letter from the poet Thomas Campbell to Brougham in The Times of 9 February 1825, in which the foundation of a great University in London was advocated, and in the same year Brougham introduced into the House of Commons a measure, which met with no success, for the purpose of providing university education at an incorporated College in London for those who could not proceed to the ancient universities.

The appeal initiated by Campbell and his associates was so successful that in 1827 a capital sum of £160,000 was raised by subscribers who made a Deed of Settlement and became "Proprietors of the University of London." Land had been acquired in Gower Street, and on 30 April 1827 the foundation-stone of the new building, now known as University College, was laid by the Duke of Sussex. Efforts were made by the "Proprietors" to obtain from the Crown a Charter of Incorporation empowering them to grant degrees; and in anticipation of success the College bore, for several years, the name of "London University."

The same period saw the foundation of King's College, the establishment of which may in one sense be regarded as an answer to the challenge thrown out by the Whigs in establishing University College. Under the leadership of the Duke of Wellington a body of defenders of the established order secured funds for the establishment of "a College in which instruction in the doctrines and duties of Christianity as taught by the Church of England should be for ever combined with other branches of useful education," and a Royal Charter of Incorporation was granted to the College in August 1829. The College was opened on 8 October 1831 on a site in the Strand presented by the Government, but it was somewhat crippled in resources by large withdrawals of support in resentment at the Duke's acceptance of the Catholic Relief Bill.

The application of "London University" for incorporation and degree-giving powers met with bitter opposition. It is not necessary here to dwell with any detail upon the various steps which were taken before a solution was arrived at. In July 1833 Mr. William Tooke and Mr. Romilly moved in the House of Commons "That an humble Address be presented to His Majesty, beseeching him to grant His Royal Charter of Incorporation to the University of London, with such powers and privileges as shall appear to His Majesty to be most effectual for the encouragement of education amongst all classes of His Majesty's subjects." This was withdrawn on the assurance of the Government that the matter was under consideration.

On 26 May 1835 the inaction of the Government and the defeat of a motion to admit Nonconformists to the old Universities caused a further move to be made. Mr. Tooke moved "An address to His Majesty, beseeching him to grant his Royal Charter of Incorporation to the University of London, as approved in the year 1831 by the then Law Officers of the Crown, and containing no other restriction than against conferring degrees in Divinity and Medicine." This was carried against the Government by a majority of 110. As a result the Privy Council were asked to report on the matter, and in August 1835 the Duke of Somerset, Chairman of the Council of "London University," received from the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Spring Rice, an outline of the Scheme proposed by Lord Melbourne's Government. The outline is as follows :

It is intended by the Government to take the following steps with a view to provide a mode for granting Academical Degrees in London to persons of all religious persuasions, without distinction and without the imposition of any test or disqualification whatever.

1. The Charter sought for by the Duke of Somerset and others will be granted, incorporating the parties by the title of London University College.

2. Similar Charters will be granted to any Institution of the same kind which may be hereafter established.

3. Another Charter will be granted to persons eminent in literature and science, to act as a Board of Examiners, and to perform all the functions of the Examiners in the Senate House of Cambridge ; this body to be termed the University of London.

4. Pupils from University and King's College to be admitted, on certificates of having gone through a course of study at those establishments, and having obtained a proficiency to pass for a Degree, and having conducted themselves to the satisfaction of the Governing Bodies of those Colleges, to be examined, and to be classed according to their relative merits.

5. Any other Bodies for Education, whether corporated or uncorporated, may from time to time be named by the Crown, and their pupils may be admitted to examination for Degrees.

The Degrees to be granted to be A.B., A.M., B.L., D.L., B.M. and D.M.

In an explanatory letter addressed to the Council in November 1835 Mr. Spring Rice added that "It should always be kept in mind that what is sought on the present occasion is an equality in all respects with the ancient Universities, freed from those exclusions and religious distinctions which abridge the usefulness of Oxford and Cambridge."

It was generally felt that these proposals furnished the best available solution of the problem, which had been so long a subject of anxious controversy. They amounted to a declaration that the business of teaching should be confined to the Colleges ; but that the duty of examining, of awarding prizes, and of conferring degrees should be entrusted to an entirely separate and independent body, to be called the University of London. The friends and supporters of University College cordially welcomed the Government plan, although it gave them far less than they had at first demanded, and although the acceptance of it implied the renunciation of all claim to exercise the full functions of a University, and placed them on a footing of equality with some younger and less important institutions. In a published letter issued by the Duke of Somerset in the name of the Council, and endorsed by the unanimous recommendations of the Professors, the proprietors of the new institution were counselled to accept the proposed compromise.

1836 On the same date as the Charter of Incorporation was granted by William IV to University College (28 November 1836) the Charter of the new University was sealed. (The text of this and the other Charters is set out in the first issue of the Historical Record.) It contains a recital to the effect that "We have deemed it to be the duty of our Royal Office, for the advancement of Religion and Morality, and the promotion of useful knowledge, to hold forth to all classes and denominations of our faithful subjects, without any distinction whatsoever, an encouragement for pursuing a regular and liberal course of Education ; and considering that many persons do prosecute or complete their studies both in the Metropolis and in other parts of our United Kingdom to whom it is expedient that there should be offered such facilities, and on whom it is just that there should be conferred such distinctions and rewards as may incline them to persevere in these their laudable pursuits."

For the purpose of "ascertaining, by means of examinations, the persons who have acquired proficiency in Literature, Science, and Art, by the pursuit of such course of education, and of rewarding them by Academical Degrees, as evidence of their respective attainments, and marks of honour proportioned thereunto" a Chancellor and Vice-Chancellor and a number of eminent persons were appointed to be "Fellows and members of the Senate." The first Chancellor was the Earl of Burlington (afterwards Duke of Devonshire), the first Vice-Chancellor was Sir John Lubbock (father of the first Lord Avebury) and among the first Fellows were Henry Brougham, Sir George B. Airy (the Astronomer Royal), Thomas Arnold, John Austin, Neil Arnott, Francis Beaufort, John Dalton, Michael Faraday, Professor Henslow, Peter Mark Roget, Nassau Senior, and Connop Thirlwall. The Senate were required to hold examinations for degrees "once at least in every year," and all persons were admissible as candidates for the examination on presenting certificates to the effect that they had followed courses of instruction (approved by the University) at University College, King's College, "or from such other institution, corporate or unincorporated, as now is, or hereafter shall be established for the purposes of Education, whether in the Metropolis, or elsewhere within Our United Kingdom" as were authorised by the Crown. The Charter was formally renewed by Queen Victoria in 1837.

Not only was the approval of the Crown necessary for the admission of institutions : the Fellows were appointed by the Crown, the revenue from fees was under the control of the Treasury, and regulations regarding the examinations for degrees had to be submitted to the Secretary of State for his approval. Some of these conditions were subsequently removed, but until its reconstruction at the end of the nineteenth century the University had in many respects the status of a Government Department.

From the beginning the Government accepted the responsibility for housing the University, and at first apartments were provided in Somerset House, which was also occupied by various learned societies ; but in 1853 the Senate were deprived of these and housed in what was described as a "miserable garret in Marlborough House." This accommodation was of a temporary nature only, and in the spring of 1855, the University again removed, this time to Burlington House. In 1870 a new building, which was erected for the University at Burlington Gardens (now occupied by the Civil Service Commission), was opened by Queen Victoria and this was used until 1900. In that year an arrangement was made with the Government by which these premises were vacated, and the University was given the use of those portions of the Imperial Institute at South Kensington which it occupied as headquarters until 1936, and which it still occupies for certain purposes. The administrative offices were removed to Bloomsbury in August 1936.

The first meeting of the Senate of which there was any official record was held on 4 March 1837. A Common Seal was approved in 1838 and, after some correspondence with the Government on the proposed salary, a Registrar was appointed in the same year.

The new Senate had some initial difficulties to overcome before proceeding with the novel task assigned to them, but they proceeded with great care and deliberation with the preliminary work of studying and preparing syllabuses for the examinations. They wisely took the view that, in pursuance of their functions as an examining body, it behoved them to set what was then considered a high standard of requirements. They were able to secure from among their own members men of the highest attainments to act as examiners, and to these others were added from outside, and in 1838 the work of the examining University began. In that year the first Matriculation examination was held, at which there were 23 candidates. In the following year there were 31 candidates for Matriculation, 17 for the B.A. Examination, 3 for the LL.B., 25 for the M.B. and 2 for the M.D. Examinations.*

As an examining body the University was generally admitted to have discharged its duties well, and within the relatively narrow limits of these university activities it acquired a great reputation and influenced in many ways the development of education, not only in the British Isles but in part of the Empire overseas.

One innovation in the traditional practice of Universities in awarding degrees in the Faculty of Arts was adopted from the first in the Matriculation Examination by the recognition of the English language as a necessary branch of study in addition to Latin and Greek. In 1859 special provision was made for including English Philology and Literature in the examinations for degrees and honours in Arts. The University also founded, for the first time in England, a Faculty of Science, and in the year 1860 began to hold examinations for the degrees of Bachelor and Doctor in that Faculty. An Intermediate examination in Arts was introduced in 1859, and the candidate for the degree of B.A. was required to pass two examinations and was no longer permitted to obtain a degree by a single examination two years after Matriculation. Similar arrangements were made on the institution of the Degrees of Bachelor of Science in 1860, and the Bachelor of Laws in 1867, when the University ceased to require that all candidates for this last degree should have previously graduated in Arts. • • •

* In 1899, the last year under the old constitution, the number of candidates for Matriculation was 3,938, and for all other examinations 2,740.

The first Doctor of Science was admitted in 1862, and the first Doctor of Literature in 1868. Degrees in Surgery were instituted in 1863, and in Music in 1877. The University also instituted Special Examinations in the Hebrew Text of the Old Testament, the Greek Text of the New Testament, the Evidences of the Christian Religion and Scripture History (1839), and in subjects relating to Public Health (1876) for which a branch of the M.D. Examination was afterwards substituted.

Just twenty-two years after its foundation a very important ¹⁸⁵³ change was made in the policy of the University. The University, which was intended "to perform all the functions of the Examiners in the Senate House of Cambridge" although limited to the duty of examination, admitted to its examinations only those students who had gone through a course of study at University or King's College or some other "approved institution." The list of these "approved institutions" rapidly expanded. In 1850 a supplemental Charter admitted the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge and their several Colleges, but a number of institutions of varying character and status had also been added by the Crown from time to time. It became apparent that many of the affiliated institutions, several of which were hardly colleges but rather secondary schools of good repute, interpreted studentship in very different ways, and that some of them competed with each other in relaxing the conditions on which the needful certificate for the University was granted. The governing body of the University had no power to reject unsatisfactory certificates or to criticise the regulations under which the Colleges awarded them. It possessed no visitorial authority, and no right to inquire into the methods of teaching, or to effect improvements. The sole means possessed by the Senate whereby the efficiency of the Colleges could be tested was the examination of their students; and its sole means of influencing the course and character of the teaching was to be found in its scheme and regulations for examination.

Affiliation had proved to be an illusory guarantee of the quality of the courses followed by the candidates; and the Charter of 1858, by providing that attendance at approved institutions should not be required for the Examinations (other than in Medicine) formally recognised what was already evident, that the University could not accept responsibility for anything beyond the examination of its candidates. Its degrees were from now onward thrown open to all who presented themselves for examination, not only from London and the British Isles, but from all parts of the Empire.

The Charter of 1858 is also of importance in another respect, since by it the right of the graduates to participate in the government of the University was recognised. This had been a matter of considerable debate for some years. In 1848 an influential committee of the graduates was formed with a view, in the first place, to the protection of their academical and general interests, and to the cultivation of more intimate relations with each other and with the Senate, and also with the ultimate object of securing the recognition of the graduates as members of the corporate body and their representation in Parliament. Before these objects were attained, the graduates' committee evinced an active interest in the affairs of the University, and in particular succeeded in procuring the enactment of an important Statute in 1854 "to extend the rights enjoyed by the Graduates of Oxford and Cambridge in respect to the practice of Physic to the Graduates of the University of London." By this Act the degree of M.B. in the University became recognised as a licence to practise. Four years later the new Charter admitted the graduates as part of the corporate body of the University, and gave to them the right to assemble in Convocation. Convocation has ever since been an integral part of the constitution of the University.

The Charter of 1863, under which the University was governed until its reconstruction, differs from that of 1858 only in one particular, viz., that it authorised the conferment of degrees in Surgery.

In 1867 a cautious experiment was made in the direction of conferring academic distinctions upon women. Some years previously the Senate had taken legal opinion on the question whether they could confer degrees upon women, and had been advised that they had no power to confer degrees on persons "other than persons . . . such as those on whom University and Academical degrees have been habitually conferred, i.e., persons of the male sex." The Law Officers were now approached with the question whether Certificates could be granted to women, but they advised that such power, like that of conferring degrees, was not within the scope of the University Charter. A Supplemental Charter was accordingly obtained (1867) empowering the Senate to hold a special Examination for and grant Certificates to "Female Candidates." No male person was to be admitted to the examination. Very few candidates presented themselves for this examination, and after much discussion the Senate and Convocation agreed in 1878 to accept from the Crown a Supplemental Charter, making every degree, honour and prize awarded by the University accessible to students of both sexes on perfectly equal terms. The University was thus the first academic body in the United Kingdom to admit women as candidates for degrees.

By the Representation of the People Act, 1867, the University became entitled to representation in Parliament, and the first Member of Parliament to be elected was the Rt. Hon. Robert Lowe, elected in 1868. On his elevation to the peerage he was succeeded by Sir John Lubbock, who sat until 1900, when he became Lord Avebury. Subsequent members were Sir Michael Foster (1900–06), Sir Philip Magnus (1906–22), Sir Sydney Russell-Wells (1922–24), and Sir Ernest Graham-Little (since 1924).

During many years proposals were made and discussions took place in the Colleges and learned societies with a view to the establishment of a scheme for the more complete organisation of the academic resources of the Metropolis. It was urged that the compromise arrived at in 1836, whereby the examining authority was completely detached from the teaching bodies, had often the effect of imposing upon professors and others engaged in the instruction of candidates, uniform lines of study and the use of special books, thus interfering injuriously with the legitimate freedom of the teachers. The Senate and Convocation had become partly convinced of the need for a closer relation between it and its examiners on the one hand and the authorities of the great teaching institutions on the other, and resolutions having this object in view had been proposed for discussion on more than one occasion. Moreover, it was contended that the main business of a University was not only to examine and to confer degrees, but also by other means to promote the interests of learning. It was especially desired that the Colleges should once more become, but in a truer sense than at first, constituent parts of the academic body, and that London should possess a teaching University with power to regulate higher education and the means of becoming a great seat of learning corresponding in its size and resources to the wealth and imperial position of the largest city in the world.

Some of those who advocated this view believed that the problem could best be solved by the establishment in London of a second University, composed of Colleges only and recognising none but bona fide students in those Colleges, the present University remaining an imperial institution granting degrees and honours to all comers on condition of examination only. Others urged that some confusion and overlapping would occur if there were two Universities in the Metropolis, and that the present University might be so modified and reconstructed as to take a substantial share in teaching, and yet continue the more general and cosmopolitan work in which it had been so long engaged.

University College and King's College joined in a petition for a Charter for a new "teaching University of London." The Royal Colleges of Physicians and Surgeons, who were dissatisfied with the conditions under which the medical degrees of the University were conferred, applied for powers to confer degrees in medicine and surgery. These proposals not unnaturally gave rise to counter-proposals, and the Government set up a Royal Commission, under the presidency of the Earl of Selborne, "to inquire whether any and what kind of new University or power is or are required for the advancement of Higher Education in London."

The report of the Commissioners was issued in 1889. The Commissioners were of opinion that the general case for a teaching University in London had been proved. They did not approve of the proposal of the Colleges of Physicians and Surgeons. They stated that it was no part of the original conception of the present University that it should be a mere examining body without direct connection with any teaching institution; but they did not consider the combination of the existing University with a new teaching University to be impossible. They recommended that a reasonable time should be allowed to the University (which had submitted proposals to the Committee) to consider whether it would apply for a Charter extending the functions of the University to teaching on general lines suggested by them. In the event of such a Charter being obtained the Commissioners were of opinion that no other University should be established in London.

The University did not, however, apply for such a Charter, the scheme which the Senate had incorporated in a draft Charter having been rejected by Convocation. The Government thereupon set up a second Royal Commission in 1892, under the Chairmanship of Earl Cowper. To this Commission a draft of a proposed Charter for a "Gresham University" was referred (on which account the Commission is sometimes known as the "Gresham Commission") and they were instructed to submit a scheme for the establishment under Charter of an effective teaching University for London. The Commission reported in 1894. They put forward a number of recommendations, including the following:—

(1) We are of opinion that there should be one University only in London, and not two; and that the establishment of an efficient teaching University for London will be best effected by the reconstruction of the existing University, on such a basis as will enable it, while retaining its existing powers and privileges, to carry out thoroughly and efficiently the work which may be properly required of a teaching University for London, without interfering with the discharge of those important duties which it has hitherto performed as an examining body for students presenting themselves from all parts of the British Empire.

(2) In view of the failure of previous attempts to settle this question, and of the difficulty and delay which must inevitably attend an alteration of the constitution of the University through the action of the University itself, we are of opinion that, in accordance with the precedents followed in other cases of university reform, the changes which we recommend should be effected not by Charter, but by legislative authority, and by the appointment of a Commission with statutory powers to settle, in the first instance, arrangements and regulations in general conformity with the recommendations which we are about to submit to Your Majesty.

The Senate on more than one occasion urged the Government to set up a Statutory Commission for carrying into effect the recommendations of the Royal Commission, and Bills were introduced to this end in 1895 and 1896. It was not, however, until four years later that the first University of London Act was passed. The Act appointed a body of Commissioners, under the Chairmanship of Lord Davey, charged with the duty of making Statutes and Regulations for the University "in general accordance" with the report of the Gresham Commission, but subject to modifications specified in the Act, and to any other modifications which appeared to them expedient after considering changes which had taken place in the meantime and representations made to them. After the expiration of the powers of the Commissioners the Senate of the reconstructed University were given power to make statutes and regulations.

The new Statutes were sealed in February of 1900 (for text ¹⁹⁰⁰ see first issue of the Historical Record, ed. 1912). In the report which accompanied the Statutes the Commissioners stated that while they had endeavoured to follow as closely as possible the recommendations of the "Gresham" report, they had in two important instances departed from them. They had not included among the Schools of the University any of the four Schools of Music mentioned in their report, and they had not succeeded in forming a Faculty of Laws. The two principal Colleges of Music were not willing to become Schools of the University, except upon conditions which it was not in the power of the Commissioners to accept. The four Inns of Court declined to take any part in the University. The Commissioners, however, included among the recognised teachers some of the teachers in Music and Laws, and Faculties in both branches of study were created.

No attempt is made here to summarise the provisions of the Statutes or to indicate wherein they differed from the proposals of the two Royal Commissions, which after such long delay led to the reconstitution of the University, so that it might be a teaching as well as an examining body. Such a task would go far beyond the scope of this Introduction.

The new Senate met for the first time on 24 October 1900, and in July 1901 appointed the first Principal of the University, Sir Arthur Rücker, F.R.S. Steps were at once taken to set up the new machinery for carrying on the work of the reconstituted University. This fell into three main divisions, viz., (1) that connected with teaching and research, (2) the continuance of the examinations conducted by the old University (now limited to "External Students"), and (3) University Extension Work, and for each of these divisions Advisory Committees were set up under the Statutes : the Academic Council, the Council for External Students, and the University Extension Board.

It was provided that the teaching work of the reconstituted University should be carried on in Colleges which were designated as "Schools of the University," and a number of institutions were admitted under the Statutes for this purpose. These included University College and King's College, six Colleges in the Faculty of Theology, two women's Colleges (Holloway and Bedford) in the Faculties of Arts and Science, the Royal College of Science in the Faculty of Science, the South-Eastern Agricultural College, now Wye College (in Agriculture only), ten of the Medical Schools of the great London Hospitals, the Central Technical College in the Faculty of Engineering, and the London School of Economics in the Faculty of Economics. The original list of "Schools" has been added to from time to time by the Senate, in some cases for a term of years, in others without time limit. Westfield College (for Women) was admitted in the Faculty of Arts in 1902, the London School of Tropical Medicine (Faculty of Medicine—Tropical Medicine) in 1905, East London College (now Queen Mary College) (Faculties of Arts, Science and Engineering) and University College Hospital Medical School (Faculty of Medicine) in 1907, King's College Hospital Medical School (Faculty of Medicine) in 1909, the Institute of Education (formerly the London Day Training College) (Faculty of Arts—Pedagogy) in 1910, the Royal Dental Hospital School (Faculty of Medicine—Dentistry) in 1911, Birkbeck College (Faculty of Arts and Science—evening and part time students) in 1920, the College of the Pharmaceutical Society (formerly the School of Pharmacy) (Faculty of Medicine—Pharmacy) in 1925. The Royal Army Medical College (1908)* and the Royal Naval Medical School (1913)* were also admitted in the Faculty of Medicine for

* The Royal Army Medical College and the Royal Naval Medical School ceased to be Schools of the University in 1932, on account of officers of the Royal Army and Royal Navy Medical Corps respectively.

The Statutes also provided for the admission of institutions for the purpose of research, and in this category the following have been admitted as Schools : the Lister Institute (Faculty of Medicine—Hygiene and Pathology) in 1905, the School of Oriental and African Studies (Faculty of Arts) in 1918, the Maudsley Hospital and Bethlem Royal Hospital * (Faculty of Medicine—Psychological Medicine) in 1924, the Royal Cancer Hospital (Faculty of Medicine—Pathology and Radiology) in 1927, and the Postgraduate Medical School (Faculty of Medicine) in 1934.

All the Schools of the University are open to visitation by the University at any time, and the Senate are required to make arrangements for inspecting and obtaining reports at regular intervals on their efficiency.

Shortly after the reconstitution of the University, University College expressed itself willing to be incorporated in the University by handing over the land, funds and buildings which belonged to it, and by placing itself under the complete control of the University. To facilitate this arrangement, the Worshipful Company of Drapers undertook the responsibility for the College debt of £30,000, and sums amounting in all to £200,000 were received from that Company, Sir Donald Currie, and other donors, of whom two of the most munificent were anonymous.

The Act, entitled University College London (Transfer) Act, 1905, empowering the transfer of University College, London, to the University, received the Royal Assent on 11 July 1905. Under this Act the College and the property and trust funds of the College, except such as belonged to or were held in trust for University College Hospital and the Medical School attaching thereto and the boys' school carried on by the College on the appointed day (1 January 1907), were transferred to the University. The College is managed by a Committee appointed by the Senate.

A similar Act, entitled King's College London (Transfer) Act, 1908, providing for the incorporation of King's College in the University, received the Royal Assent in August 1908. In this case the transfer on the appointed day (1 January 1910) of power, duties, and property was confined to matters connected with Faculties of the University other than the difficulties, arising from their position as Service Institutions, in complying with certain sections of the Statutes made under the University of London Act of 1926.

* Bethlem Royal Hospital ceased to be a School of the University in 1946.

Faculty of Theology. The College is also managed by a Committee (the Delegacy) appointed by the Senate, but the Council of King's College remains and is the Governing Body of the Department of Theology, which Department is by the same Act constituted a School of the University.

Even before the reconstitution, the University had received endowments for various Scholarships and prizes. Since 1900 a number of valuable gifts and benefactions have been received for these purposes and the establishment of Chairs, Readerships, and Lectureships. Particulars of those given to the University in respect of its incorporated Colleges, will be found in the Calendars of these Colleges (University College and King's College) and others are referred to at length in the following pages (under the heading of "Trusts and Benefactions").

1926 In 1909 another Royal Commission on the University was appointed. Although the immediate cause of its appointment was the question of the relationship which should exist between the University and the Imperial College of Science and Technology, the terms of reference were very wide. They were "to inquire into the working of the present organisation of the University of London, and into other facilities for advanced education (general, professional, and technical) existing in London for persons of either sex above secondary school age; to consider what provision should exist in the Metropolis for University teaching and research; to make recommendations as to the relations which should in consequence subsist between the University of London, its incorporated Colleges, the Imperial College of Science and Technology, the other Schools of the University, and the various public institutions and bodies concerned; and further to recommend as to any changes of constitution and organisation which appear desirable; regard being had to the facilities for education and research which the Metropolis should afford for specialist and advanced students in connection with the provision existing in other parts of the United Kingdom and of our Dominions beyond the Seas." The Rt. Hon R. B. Haldane (afterwards Viscount Haldane) was appointed Chairman.

The Final Report of the Commissioners was published in 1913, and in the same year a Departmental Committee was set up "to inquire and report after consultation with the bodies and persons concerned as to the steps by which effect shall be given to the Scheme of the Report of the Royal Commission. . ." Soon after the outbreak of the 1914-18

War the Committee was, however, obliged to abandon its labours.

In October 1924, another Departmental Committee was appointed "to consider the Final Report of the Royal Commission on University Education in London dated 27 March 1913 and having regard to present circumstances and after consultation with the persons and bodies concerned, to indicate what are the principal changes now most needed in the existing constitution of the University of London, and on what basis a Statutory Commission should be set up to frame new Statutes for the University." The Chairman of the Committee was Lord Ernle, who was afterwards succeeded by Mr. Hilton Young (later Lord Kennet).

The Report of the Committee was published in March 1926. They put forward a number of recommendations and concluded by recommending that Statutory Commissioners should be appointed by Parliament to make new Statutes for the University in accordance with their recommendations. Parliament accordingly passed the University of London Act of 1926. This Act appointed a body of Commissioners, under the Chairmanship of the late Mr. Justice (afterwards Lord) Tomlin, to make Statutes for the University "in general accordance with the recommendations in the Report of the Committee, subject to any modifications which may appear to them to be expedient" and subject to certain reservations.

The Statutes made by the Commissioners came into operation on 21 March 1929. The most important constitutional changes made were the creation of a new body known as the Court, to control the finances of the University ; of a new Council of the Senate, the Collegiate Council, consisting of the heads of the Schools of the University, whose duties include the co-ordination of the work of the Schools and the organisation and extension of social facilities for students ; and the grouping of Matriculation and School Examinations, which had hitherto been dealt with by the Matriculation Board and the University Extension Board respectively, under one Council. A number of changes dealing with other matters were also made. It is not easy to summarise these and reference should be made to the Statutes themselves. The last meeting of the Senate as constituted under the old Statutes was held on 15 May 1929, and the first complete meeting of the re-constituted Senate was held on 3 July 1929.

The first meeting of the Court was held on 10 July 1929, when Lord Macmillan was elected Chairman. Since its constitution one of the most important tasks of the Court has been in connexion with the development of the Bloomsbury Site, the history of which is outlined on pages 27-35.

The oldest of the Research Institutions of the University, the Brown Animal Sanatory Institution, owes its origin to a bequest made in 1858 of a sum of over £22,000 under the will of Mr. Thomas Brown for founding an Institute for "investigating and endeavouring to cure diseases of animals." In 1871 Dr. J. (later Sir John) Burdon-Sanderson, F.R.S., was appointed Professor-Superintendent. Much valuable research work has been carried out in this, one of the pioneer research institutes in England. The building was destroyed by air attack in 1944, and the Institute is at present closed.

In 1905 the Worshipful Company of Goldsmiths, who have been generous benefactors of the University, presented to the University their Institute at New Cross, together with 4½ acres of unoccupied land. The Institute, which, after its transfer to the University, was named Goldsmiths' College, is governed by a Delegacy appointed by the Senate, and is not only a large and successful training College for teachers, but also a flourishing Art School, and provides evening instruction in various subjects.

In 1921 a sum of £24,000 (of which £20,000 was contributed by Sir John Power) was raised for the establishment of an Institute of Historical Research, and in July of that year a temporary building was opened. A new building on the Bloomsbury site was erected in 1941 to be occupied by the Government during the war. The Institute moved in in 1947. The Institute is a centre for specialisation in the various branches of history and is intended for post-graduate and advanced students of history. It is managed by a Committee appointed by the Senate.

In 1930 the great generosity of Mr. Samuel Courtauld and Sir Joseph Duveen enabled the University to proceed with plans for the creation of an Institute of Art, to be known as the Courtauld Institute of Art. In February 1932 Mr. Courtauld's generosity was further exemplified by his offer to hand over to the University his magnificent Adam house at No. 20 Portman Square for the purpose of the Institute. The offer was most gratefully accepted and made it possible to open the Institute as a place of teaching and research in October 1932. It is proposed that the Institute shall eventually be housed on the Bloomsbury site.

The Institute of Archæology was established in 1934 and in 1935 a benefactor gave £10,000 towards the cost of housing the Institute and the Petrie Palestinian Collection presented to the University by the British School of Archæology in Egypt.

The Teachers of the University are : (1) Teachers appointed by the Senate ("Appointed Teachers"), and (2) Teachers appointed by the authorities of the various institutions and recognised by the Senate ("Recognised Teachers"); the first category consisting of the Professors and Readers, and the second, for the most part, of lecturers. University Chairs and Readerships in a great number of subjects have been established in almost all the Schools of the University either from general university funds, or from gifts and benefactions to the University for the purpose, or from funds provided by the authorities of the Schools. The building up since 1900 of a University Professoriate has made very great progress, and was rendered possible by the co-operation of the Schools which in most cases voluntarily gave up the right of conferring the title of Professor and Reader. There are now (1949) 321 Professors and 216 Readers of the University and 888 Recognised Teachers.

The Senate were also charged with the duty of prescribing courses of study, after consultation with the Boards of Studies, for the guidance of Internal Students, i.e., matriculated students following courses under Teachers of the University. The number of such students, which was about 2,000 in 1902, had in 1939 risen to over 14,500. In the early years of the 1939–45 war the number of students fell to under 9,000, but the increasing need for specialists, particularly in the Faculties of Science and Engineering, for the Services and industry led to a gradual rise, and by 1946 numbers once more approached pre-war levels. The greater part of these are students who have in view a first degree of the University; but in recent years, owing to a growing recognition of the unique advantages of London for postgraduate study and research work, there has been a very large accession of postgraduate students, drawn not only from various parts of this country, but from all countries in the world.

The University continues, in the words of its first Charter, to reward "by Academical Degrees, as evidence of their respective attainments, and marks of honour proportioned thereunto," students who satisfy the test of its examinations, but who are not Internal Students of the University. The number of External Students, i.e., matriculated students other than Internal Students, has grown steadily. The new Statutes made under the University Act of 1926 (see below) by imposing registration upon External Students, brought them into closer contact with the University, and in 1939 there were over 10,000 registered students. During the war of 1939–45 the external side met the very special needs of large numbers of students serving in the Armed Forces, British, Dominion and Allied, or held as Prisoners of War by the enemy, and the number of students rose to over 16,000 in 1945.

In 1924 the Senate instituted the Advisory Service for External Students. By means of this Service students who would otherwise be without advice are provided by teachers of the University with complete schemes of reading. In 1925, the first year of the operation of the scheme, 100 students were advised. By 1938 the number had grown to 1,395, and in 1944-45 nearly 6,000 students were given general advice as to their studies, while nearly 2,700 received study schemes or academic advice from teachers of the University.

In addition to the degrees conferred before the reconstitution a number of new degrees have been established. Degrees in Engineering and Economics were added in 1903, Agriculture in 1905, Horticulture in 1918, Commerce in 1919, Household and Social Science (Internal Students only) in 1920, Estate Management (External Students) in 1921, Dental Surgery in 1921, Pharmacy in 1925, and Estate Management (Internal Students) in 1939. Various new branches of the B.A. and B.Sc. degrees have also been established. The new Statutes also allowed degrees to be awarded on the results of research and most of the doctorate degrees, including the Ph.D. Degree (first established in 1920), are Research Degrees. In 1938 the degree of Master of Theology was instituted.

Prior to the reconstitution of 1900 there had been a Special Examination in the Art, Theory, and History of Teaching, with a view to encouraging persons who intended to adopt the teacher's profession to acquire special training for their work. No candidate was eligible for the diploma who was not already a graduate. To the theoretical part of the Examination a practical exercise in teaching a class in the presence of the Examiner was always added. This Examination was held for the last time in 1903, and was superseded by the Examination in Pedagogy. In 1910 the title of this Examination was changed to the "Examination for the Teacher's Diploma," and the diploma is awarded to Internal and External Students.

Diplomas in the following subjects have also been instituted :—Clinical Pathology, Geography, Public Administration, Public Health, and Theology for Internal and External Students ; Anthropology, Archaeology, Archive Administration, Bacteriology, Comparative Philology, Dietetics, Fine Art, History of Art, Librarianship, Medical Radiology, Military Studies, Phonetics, Psychology, Slavonic and East European Studies, Town Planning and Civic Architecture, Town Planning and Civic Engineering (Internal Students) ; Biology and Social Studies (External Students).

On 1 October 1902 the University Extension work, which had been carried on for over twenty-five years by the London Society for the Extension of University Teaching, was handed over by the Society to the University, and was placed under the direction of the University Extension Board. The vigour and success of the work has been fully maintained since its transfer to the University, and the scheme has undergone important developments. The University Extension Board also conducted the inspection and examination of schools, and awarded school and other certificates and diplomas in various subjects, and was responsible for organising Courses of Study for Foreign Students in the Long Vacation. The School Examinations work was, however, transferred to the Matriculation and School Examinations Council under the reconstitution in 1929 (see page 19 above).

In July 1909 the Senate constituted the Joint Committee for the Promotion of the Higher Education of Working People (consisting of an equal number of members nominated by the University Extension Board and the Workers' Educational Association respectively), under whose direction the scheme of University Tutorial Classes for Working People was developed. By the reconstitution in 1929 the work of the Extension Board and the Joint Committee became the concern of the University Extension and Tutorial Classes Council.

The following Diplomas are awarded on the recommendation of the University Extension and Tutorial Classes Council :—Humanities (History, Literature, Economics, Economics and Social Science, History of Art, Literary, Historical and Comparative Study of the Bible), Dramatic Art, Nursing, Psychological Medicine, Public Administration, Sister-Tutor's, Theory and Practice of Physical Education, Social Studies, Theology.

On the outbreak of war in September 1939 many of the Schools and Institutions of the University were evacuated to other university centres under a pre-arranged scheme which had been drawn up on the advice of the Government. The central administration, with the exception of the library and the maintenance department, also vacated the Senate House, which was occupied by the Ministry of Information throughout the war. University and College buildings in London suffered severe damage from enemy air attack, and several Colleges lost part or the whole of their libraries.

The dispersal of the component parts of the University throughout the whole country raised many problems of organisation, and administration. While in some Faculties the numbers of Internal Students diminished, in others, such as Medicine, Science, and Engineering, the numbers remained at practically pre-war levels, since increasing numbers traigned in these subjects were required for the war effort. Members of H.M. Forces were encouraged to study in their spare time, and the number of External Students of the University rose rapidly. External examinations were held throughout the war in all parts of the world. Certain concessions and adaptations were made in existing regulations to meet war-time conditions, but the actual scope of the degree courses and the standard of examinations remained unchanged.

One of the many difficulties which had to be faced was the problem of carrying on the central administration of the University. War-time conditions and the dispersal of Colleges made the regular meetings of Committees almost impossible. By the Universities and Colleges (Temporary Provisions) Order, 1939, which was made as a result of the passing of the Chartered and Other Bodies (Temporary Provisions) Act, 1939, the University was empowered to make emergency statutes giving authority to Chairmen of Councils and Committees to act on behalf of their Committees, and to the Vice-Chancellor, after consultation with the Principal, to act on behalf of the Senate.

In the later stages of the war such Colleges as were able to do so returned to their own buildings in London, in view of increasing difficulties of accommodation, etc., at the receiving Universities. The administrative departments returned to the Senate House in December 1945.

During the war years there were few new developments, but two new Central Activities were established in 1945. The Warburg Institute was transferred to the University by the family of the Founder, the late Professor A. Warburg of Hamburg. This Institute, which has a large library and collection of photographs, provides facilities for research on the character and history of the Classical Tradition. The Institute works in close co-operation with the Courtauld Institute of Art, the Institute of Historical Research, etc., and it is proposed that eventually it should be housed with the Courtauld Institute in a new building on the Bloomsbury Site.

The Institute of Child Health was established in connection with the Nuffield Chair of Child Health, the endowment for which was provided through the generosity of the Nuffield Foundation. The Institute, which is at present housed in the Hospital for Sick Children, Great Ormond Street, will promote the study of problems relating to the health of children and will provide facilities for training in all aspects of child health and welfare.

A further gift of £106,858, from the Province of Natal, will be used to provide accommodation for the study of the normal healthy child, in association with a welfare clinic to be operated by the London County Council.

The Institute is to form part of the British Postgraduate Medical Federation, which is now a School of the University and will co-ordinate and develop all the general and specialised facilities for postgraduate medical education in London. A Charter was obtained for the Federation in March 1947, together with a Supplementary Charter for the British Post-graduate Medical School, which has been renamed the Post-graduate Medical School of London. Steps are now being taken for the setting up and admission of the specialised Institutes which, together with the Postgraduate Medical School, will comprise the Federation. The Federated Institutes are at present the Institutes of Psychiatry, Child Health, Ophthalmology, Laryngology and Otology, and Obstetrics and Gynaecology.

The establishment of another Central Activity, the Institute of Advanced Legal Studies, meets a long-felt want to which attention was drawn in the Report of the Atkin Committee on Legal Education in 1934. The Institute, which was formally opened by the Lord Chancellor on 11 June 1948, provides teaching for postgraduate and research students, and aims at becoming a centre for legal research in the United Kingdom and the countries of the British Commonwealth. A library is being formed, and the Nuffield Foundation have made a grant of £10,000 for the provision of books on Dominion and Empire Law.

The Institute of Education Area Training Scheme has been brought into existence in accordance with Scheme A of the McNair Report. It will work in collaboration with training colleges and education authorities in London and the Home Counties for the advancement of the study of education and for the co-ordination and extension of training for teaching.

An Institute of Commonwealth Studies has been founded, and it is hoped that an Institute of Germanic Studies will be brought into being during the present session. Accommodation for these Institutes is being provided in temporary premises on the central site.

ARMS

The Arms of the University, granted in 1838, are :— Argent, the Cross of St. George, thereon the Union Rose irradiated and ensigned with the imperial crown Proper, a Chief Azure thereon an open book also Proper clasps Or.

CHANCELLOR'S MACE

Sir Henry Roscoe, who was Vice-Chancellor from 1896 to 1902, presented the University on his retirement with a mace for use on ceremonial occasions.

The mace was made by Alwyn Carr, of the firm of Ramsden and Carr, goldsmiths and silversmiths, who subsequently (1940) bequeathed to the University the original design. The following is a note and description of the design furnished by the artist :—

The University mace has a distinct character of its own, being descended or evolved from a wand or staff of office and not, as in the case of the municipal mace, having the ancient fighting weapon as its prototype. Consequently it is much longer and more elegant in form.

The maces of Oxford and Cambridge have the two ends almost but not quite of the same weight, the larger and crowned end being carried uppermost when borne before the Chancellor, and the reverse end being uppermost when preceding the Vice-Chancellor. On the occasion of a visit by the sovereign to the University, the mace is laid in a horizontal position at his feet on entering.

In designing the present mace we have founded the size and proportions upon ancient examples, but otherwise it is modern in character as befitting a modern university.

It is executed in hand-beaten, wrought and repoussé silver, champlevé and translucent enamel, and a lapis lazuli orb on top.

It is strengthened with an oak core. Underneath the crown, fitting as a lid, are the royal arms, to signify the deputed royal authority.

The head itself is formed of four winged figures holding shields. These figures symbolise the triumph of Light and Education over Darkness and Ignorance, as typified by the four bound figures in the knot immediately underneath. The arms of the University are in champlevé enamel, as is also the obverse side. The other two shields contain inscriptions, one commemorating the foundation of the University and the other setting forth the gift of the mace.

The silver staff is overlaid with four twisted cables of silver wire, giving a firm but pleasant grip, relieved at intervals by three knots, each containing panels of translucent enamel protected by projecting silver straps. The finial bears in rich repoussé the crowned rose, the special emblem of the University, and ends in a fluted solid spike for resting upon the floor.

BLOOMSBURY NEW UNIVERSITY BUILDINGS

Among the questions dealt with in the report of the "Haldane" Commission was that of suitable quarters for the Senate House and the administrative staff. The Commission reported that the University should have for its headquarters "permanent buildings appropriate in design to its dignity and importance, adequate in extent and specially constructed for its purpose, situated conveniently for the work it has to do, bearing its name and under its control." They criticised the situation of the Kensington buildings which had never become associated with the University in the mind of the public and which, being the property of the Government, put the University in the position of not being master in its own house.

In 1912 efforts were made to acquire for the use of the University a site north of the British Museum, a considerable sum of money being raised for the purpose. For various reasons, however, the scheme fell through, and no further action was taken until 1920, when the Government offered the Senate for the use of the University and of King's College a site of about 11½ acres in Bloomsbury, and on its acceptance purchased the site. The offer was subject to a condition that King's College should vacate its present buildings in the Strand, the greater part of which is held on a Crown lease at a nominal rent. The authorities of King's College were unable to agree to this proposal, and as the condition could not be fulfilled the offer lapsed, and the site was re-sold to the vendor by the Government.

The Senate were in a position of some difficulty, as, in the expectation that the site would eventually be the property of the University, some University Institutions, including the Institute of Historical Research, had been erected on it. Vigorous efforts were accordingly made to safeguard the position of these institutions, and if possible to acquire the site for the University, and in 1927 the Senate, with the assistance of a splendid gift of £400,000 from the Rockefeller Foundation and £125,000 from the Treasury grant of £212,500 for "improved accommodation," were enabled to purchase the site free of any such conditions as accompanied the earlier offer of the Government. Since the time of its purchase, the question of the development of the site for University purposes has been under constant consideration, first by the Senate and more recently (since the reconstitution of the University) by the Court.

Architectural Design

In 1928, with the help of the London County Council, parliamentary powers were obtained for the closing of certain roadways, thus securing for the central University area in London a self-contained estate. In order to avoid inconvenience to the public and the congestion of thoroughfares, the stipulation was made that before these powers were exercised certain other roadways should be widened. The main part of the work of widening and of closing, the cost of which is in each case borne by the University, has been completed.

With regard to the actual building programme the steps taken have been as follows :—

In the first place, various University institutions and activities were approved, in some cases provisionally, for inclusion in the general plan of the site.

Secondly, in 1929, Mr. H. V. Lanchester, F.R.I.B.A., was appointed to act as consultant in regard to the general lay-out of the site. Mr. Lanchester completed his task in 1931.

Thirdly, it fell to the University Court to select an Architect for the new buildings. In approaching this task the Court were fully conscious of their responsibility not only to the University, but to the citizens of London, to all interested in the architecture of the capital city, and to posterity.

In 1931, after many consultations, formal and informal, they appointed Mr. Charles Holden, F.R.I.B.A., the creator of some of the most significant buildings of our time. Approval of their choice was very widely expressed.

Mr. Holden's first task was to prepare a design for the general lay-out of the site, which should have regard both to the immediate and future needs of the University, which should preserve on the site at least as much open space as now exists, and which should not be out of harmony with the other buildings adjoining the site. This task he duly accomplished and his design was generally approved both by the Court and the Senate and by various outside bodies such as the London County Council, the Holborn Borough Council, the Royal Fine Art Commission, the Trustees of the British Museum, and the Trustees of the Bedford Estate.

In 1937, however, when plans for Birkbeck College and the School of Oriental and African Studies were under consideration, events occurred which required a departure from the original design. In view of the funds available to both Schools, it became necessary to plan the buildings as economically as possible. In particular it was decided that they should be faced with brick instead of Portland stone. This involved reconsideration of the general design for the buildings as a whole.

The Architect therefore worked out a new scheme, under which the Senate-House block and Tower, including the Institute of Education and School of Slavonic and East European Studies, the Institute of Historical Research, and the new University Hall to be built on the Russell Square frontage, will form a group in Portland stone occupying roughly two-fifths of the site.

To the north of this, but quite separate, the School of Oriental and African Studies has been built on the east and Birkbeck College is being built on the west, in brick, leaving the Torrington Square gardens area between, with a vista from the north on the direct line of the Tower. Sites are also allocated for the Students' Union, and the Courtauld and Warburg Institutes.

The University conferred the honorary degree of D.Lit. upon Mr. Holden in 1946.

Financial Resources

In June 1932 the Court, under the Chairmanship of Lord Macmillan, issued an illustrated brochure descriptive of the Bloomsbury building programme, in which it was pointed out that the completion of the building scheme would necessarily be a task of years, that the total sum required to finance it would not be small, but that the University were in a position to make a substantial beginning when the detailed plans had been finally settled. The different sources from which financial assistance has been received or promised are as follows :—

Treasury.—In 1927 the Government made a capital grant of £212,500 for improved accommodation for the University at South Kensington or elsewhere. With the consent of the Treasury £125,000 of this amount was used towards the purchase price of the Bloomsbury Site and the remainder applied towards meeting the cost of the new buildings.

In 1938 the University Grants Committee made a non-recurrent grant of £35,000 towards the cost of a central Students' Union ; and the National Fitness Council offered £25,000 on certain conditions towards the cost of the physical training side of the Union's activities. Owing to the outbreak of war, the former grant is in abeyance and the latter grant lapsed.

London County Council.—The London County Council made the following grants :

- (i) £250,000 to the General Building Fund.
- (ii) £200,000 for the erection and equipment of new buildings for the Institute of Education (formerly the London Day Training College) and towards the new buildings for Birkbeck College.

*Home County and County Borough Councils.—The Middlesex County Council contributed a sum of £100,000 in ten annual instalments towards the cost of new accommodation for the University Libraries, on condition that the central library building was associated with the name of the County of Middlesex. Two beautiful rooms have been built—the “Middlesex Library South” and “Middlesex Library North.”

£75,081 10

The Goldsmiths' Company gave £50,000 towards the building and equipment of a room to house the Goldsmiths' Company's Library of Economic Literature presented to the University in 1903.

The Glaziers' Company presented a stained glass window.

Business Firms and Banks.—Through the good offices of Lord McGowan generous sums were received over a number of years towards the General Building Fund from business firms and banks.

The total granted by London business firms is £117,110, in addition to £15,000 received from Mr. Marks and his family, set out under "Personal Gifts" below.

The gifts from banks total £1,860 10s., as follows:— Westminster, £750 ; Barclays, Lloyds, Midland and National Provincial, £250 each ; Martins, £50 ; Glyn Mills and Williams Deacon's, £25 each ; National, £10 10s.

Other Grants.—The Czechoslovak Government gave a substantial sum for a permanent home for the School of Slavonic and East European Studies, and between 1931 and 1939 they contributed £25,060 7s. 8d.

The Rhodes Trustees in 1928 promised £5,000 towards the cost of a building for the Students' Union, provided the University set apart a suitable site on the Bloomsbury Estate and made the necessary arrangements financially and otherwise with the constituent Colleges to ensure its success. They also gave £5,000 towards the £15,000 required for a library devoted to the study of Imperial history at the Institute of Historical Research.

In February 1936 the Masters of the Bench of the Inner Temple voted £210 to the University Building Fund.

The Guardian Assurance Company in 1933 gave £100 which is being applied to the University Hall.

The Public Trustee, in the exercise of his discretionary powers under the will of the late Mr. John William Berry, in 1933 gave £500 to the General Building Fund.

Personal Gifts.—Sums totalling £15,000 were received from Mr. Simon Marks, Mr. I. M. Sieff, Mrs. E. Laski, Mrs. M. Sacher, and Miss M. Marks towards the General Building Fund.

Lord Nuffield in 1938 gave £50,000 for the new Union building.

Donations were also received from:—Mr. Horace Bird, Clerk to the Tylers' and Bricklayers' Company, £5 5s. (towards the University Hall) ; Miss R. A. Clayton, B.A., £3 3s. ; Mrs. E. G. Wilson, £1 1s.

Building

In 1932-33 Mr. R. Travers Morgan, M.Eng., M.Inst.C.E., etc., was appointed Consultant Engineer for structural work of the new buildings ; Mr. Alfred Harris, sole partner of Widnell & Trollope, was appointed Quantity Surveyor, and Mr. Stinton Jones, M.I.E.E., A.M.I.Mech.E., was appointed Consultant Engineer for heating, lighting, ventilation and electrical services.

At the end of 1932 four trial holes were made as a preliminary to the excavations for the foundations for the Senate House and administrative offices. It was then discovered that the lower part of the gravel stratum which is above the bed of London blue clay was waterlogged to a depth of three feet. To avoid any possibility of subsequent settlement the foundations have been taken well down into the London blue clay, by the method known as "piling." This will ensure that whatever may happen to the water level no adverse effect will be felt in the building.

In March 1933 several selected firms were invited to submit tenders for the excavations, the work of piling and construction of retaining walls and foundations for the Senate House block. The lowest tenders received were accepted. These were from John Mowlem & Co., Ltd., for the general work and from the British Steel Piling Co., Ltd., for the special work of piling. Work was started by the Contractors on 4 April 1933, and was completed in June 1934.

On 26 June 1933, King George V, accompanied by Queen Mary, laid the foundation stone for the new buildings. There was a large and distinguished gathering of 3,000 persons at the ceremony, including representatives of most of the principal Universities and learned societies of the world.

In June 1934 tenders were received from seven selected firms for the erection of the superstructure of the Senate House and official headquarters. The lowest tender was received from Holland & Hannen and Cubitts and this was accepted. Work began on 9 July 1934. A condition of the contract was the use throughout of materials obtained from sources within the British Empire. In 1935 the contract was extended to include the buildings for the Institute of Education, the School of Slavonic and East European Studies, the completion of the section of the library in the Senate House block, and the tower.

Contracts were placed with G. E. Wallis & Sons for the wing to the Senate House which accommodates the Institute of Historical Research and for the School of Oriental and African Studies ; and with Prestige & Co. for the foundations of the University Hall.

In recognition of the great services rendered to the University first by Sir William Beveridge in connection with the purchase of the site and, later, by Lord Macmillan in raising the funds necessary to carry out the first part of the building scheme, two halls in the Senate House have been named "Macmillan Hall" and "William Beveridge Hall."

Occupation

On Monday, 17 August 1936, the Administrative Staff (with the exception of the Library Staff) began their move from South Kensington to Bloomsbury. The move was completed on Friday, 21 August. The Tower and Library were still under construction, and on 27 November 1936 there occurred an accident which injured several people and resulted in the death, three days later, of the Principal, Sir Edwin Deller.

The Tower was completed and the University flag was flown for the first time on 6 October 1937.

The Library was transferred in part in the long vacation of 1937, and the South Kensington rooms were finally cleared in 1938 and the Library established in its new home.

In the same year the Institute of Education was transferred from Southampton Row, and the School of Slavonic and East European Studies, occupying the second floor of the south wing of the Institute block, took possession of its new quarters in January 1939.

The wing for the Institute of Historical Research was completed for the use of the Government during the war, but further work on it was needed afterwards. The Institute, which had been housed in a bungalow structure from 1922, occupied, in 1938, rooms in the Senate House, and, later, rooms in the B.M.A. House, Tavistock Square. It finally came to its own home in 1947.

War

During the war the official headquarters of the University were moved out of London, the main part going first to the Royal Holloway College (1939-41) and then to Richmond College (1941-45). The buildings forming the Senate House block, with the Institute of Education, the School of Slavonic Studies and (when completed) the Institute of Historical Research, were taken over by the Ministry of Information. The only University departments remaining throughout the war were the Library and the Maintenance department.

The Library, though closed to readers in person, maintained its services to borrowers by post, and full use was also made of the library and its staff by Government Departments, and other bodies engaged on war work, for reference and research.

The Maintenance department carried on, for the Ministry, the maintenance services, e.g., attendance, electricity, works, catering (24-hour service), etc. A warm appreciation was received from the Ministry after the occupation was ended.

The new building for the School of Oriental Studies was completed during the war, and, though part of it was taken over by the Ministry of Information, the work of the School (mainly for the Government, e.g., intensive courses in eastern languages for officers, translating and censoring in uncommon languages) was continued at greatly increased pressure in the remainder of the building.

SECTION I

GRANTS FROM TREASURY AND LOCAL AUTHORITIES

I. Treasury Grant-in-Aid

Before 1900

Until the reconstitution of the University in the year 1901 all Examination Fees received by the University were paid to the Exchequer, and the cost of Salaries, Examinations, Library and incidents was provided by an annual vote of Parliament. Representations were made to the Treasury by the University that this arrangement should cease, that an annual grant-in-aid should be voted, to be expended at the discretion of the Senate, and that in fixing the amount of the grant-in-aid regard should be had not only to the expenditure of the University as hitherto constituted, but also to the great extension of its functions under the provisions of the University of London Act.

Reconstitution of 1900

In a Treasury Minute of 21 February 1901 it was agreed that the existing financial arrangements were "incompatible with the altered position of the University and somewhat derogatory to its independence," and an arrangement was made by which the University should retain the revenue from fees, and the Exchequer should defray the following expenses :—

(1) The Building occupied by the University, representing a rent of (say)	2,200
(2) Contribution in lieu of rates	2,000
(3) External maintenance and repairs	500
(4) Superannuations	1,000
	<hr/> £5,700

In addition, the University was to receive an annual grant-in-aid of £8,000, "out of which the University would defray the cost of internal maintenance and repairs, fuel, light and water, stationery and printing, estimated for the future at £4,800, leaving a sum of £3,200 towards the cost of the salary of a Principal Officer, additional examining Clerical and other Officers, and incidental expenses." The Treasury therefore until 1921, made a grant of £8,000 annually, and in addition they gave a special war grant towards loss of income due to the war.

The University Grants Committee, appointed to advise the Government as to the distribution of grants for University Education, raised this grant in 1921–22 to £16,000, and, in addition, granted £1,000 to the Galton Laboratory, and £2,000 to the Institute of Historical Research. In 1925 the Committee granted £18,000 to the University, to include provision for the Institute, provision for the Galton Laboratory being included in the increased grant to University College.

Until 1930 the grant made by the Government for University Education in London was allocated quinquennially by the University Grants Committee to University Headquarters and to various Schools individually.

By the Statutes made for the University in 1928, under the University of London Act, 1926, the custody, control and disposition of all the property, funds and investments of the University are vested in the Court, to which body is also entrusted the responsibility of allocating all funds at the disposal of the University.

From 1930, therefore, the Government grant for the University as a whole has been made as a block grant to the Court by the University Grants Committee and its allocation has been carried out by the Court.

Quinquennium 1930–35 and year 1935–36.—For the quinquennium 1930–35 the University Grants Committee allocated £556,000 to London, an increase of about £60,000 on the total individual grants for the previous quinquennium. For 1935–36 they continued the grant at the same figure.

Quinquennium 1936–41 and War Period.—The University Grants Committee had allocated to the University £621,000 a year for the quinquennium 1936–41, a sum which was increased in 1939 by £49,000 when the British Postgraduate Medical School became a grant-receiving School of the University and by a further £1,250 a year for the encouragement of Meteorology at Imperial College.

During the war, several changes were made in the block grant. Briefly recorded, they consisted of a reduction of £29,000 a year (following a reduction of the same amount by the London County Council) for the Government years 1942–45. An increase of £10,000 was made when the Warburg Institute became an activity of the University, and certain special grants were made between 1943 and 1945 totalling £161,629.

Post-War.—For the year 1945–46 the University received a welcome addition to its resources in the share allotted to it from the increased Treasury grant for universities. The block grant was increased by £500,000, and an additional grant of £331,000 was made for medical education. Further, from a sum at the disposal of the University Grants Committee for distribution to teaching hospitals towards recurrent expenses incurred by them in providing facilities for medical education and research, the University received £220,734 in 1945–46.

For 1946–47 further increases were made, the grants being £1,475,000 for general purposes, £610,000 for medical education (in addition to the pre-war share of the general grant), and £30,000 for dental education; and the aid to teaching hospitals was increased to £248,350. The University Grants Committee also made capital grants of £557,000 in 1945–46 and £461,500 in 1946–47.

Quinquennium 1947–52.—The University Grants Committee fixed the general purposes grant for the quinquennial period 1947–52 at £1,790,000 rising by £90,000 a year to £2,150,000. Earmarked grants for certain special purposes have now been assessed as follows for the remainder of the quinquennium :— Social Sciences, £73,000 in 1948–49 rising to £128,650 ; Agriculture, £30,000 to £40,500 ; Oriental, African and Slavonic Studies, £107,500 to £162,000. Additions to the block grant have also been made of £6,930 rising to £9,700 for meteorology, geometrical optics and applied entomology at Imperial College.

The earmarked medical and dental grants for 1948–49 were £1,071,000 and £74,000 respectively. For 1949–52 these grants have been fixed at £1,260,000, rising to £1,594,000 and £87,000 rising to £112,000. The grant for teaching hospitals has been discontinued.

The Committee also made capital grants totalling £1,887,195 for 1948–49.

[Bloomsbury.—For Treasury grants for new buildings, see Bloomsbury, p. 29 above.]

2. London County Council

In 1902 the London County Council gave an annual grant of £10,000 in aid of the teaching work of the University, which was known as the Technical Education Board Grant. The Council at various times increased this, and for the triennium 1926–29 and for 1929–30 granted an annual sum of £36,000 (in addition to maintenance grants totalling £21,833 to six Schools of the University). The grant provided for the maintenance of Professorships and Readerships in Economics, Engineering, Mathematics, Chemistry, Zoology, German, French, Russian, Italian, History, including the History of London, and Geography, at various Schools of the University. The remainder of the Grant was allocated to Household and Social Science at King's College for Women ; Libraries ; Advanced Lectures ; University Extension Lectures and Tutorial Classes ; the Evening School of English at King's College ; the Evening Schools of History, Geography and Phonetics, the Department of Applied Statistics, the Bartlett School of Architecture, Scandinavian Studies, and the School of Librarianship at University College. The Council also gave capital grants to certain Colleges.

The London County Council decided that, after the reconstitution of the University under the Statutes made in 1928, their grant should be made in the form of one block grant to be allocated by the Court to the University and its Schools. The Council decided further that its grants, hitherto triennial, should be in future for five years, to run concurrently with the grants from the Treasury (see above), and for this purpose the Council continued for 1929–30 the annual grant made during 1926–29.

Quinquennium 1930–35.—For the year 1930–31 the Council made an interim grant of £105,000, an increase of about £24,000 on the total individual grants during the previous triennium. The grant for the remainder of the quinquennium 1930–35 was raised to £125,000. In view of national emergency, the Court in 1931 offered to forgo, for half the Council year 1931–32 and the whole of 1932–33, one-tenth of the annual grant; and this offer, amounting to £18,750 in all, was gratefully accepted by the Council. The Court later extended their offer, representing a reduction of £12,500 a year in grant-income, up to the end of the quinquennium (i.e., to 31 July 1935) and the Council expressed their appreciation of this action on the part of the Court.

In 1930 the Council made a capital grant, to be allocated by the Court, of £150,000 towards the capital requirements of Schools not connected with the Bloomsbury Site.

Quinquennium 1935–40 and War Period.—For the quinquennium 1935–40, the Council made an annual maintenance grant of £129,000, this being equivalent to the original annual grant for 1931–35 (£125,000) together with a sum of £4,000 a year on account of the transfer in 1932 of the Institute of Education from the Council to the University. The Council decided to continue the grant for 1940–41 in order that the L.C.C. quinquennial period in future might continue to coincide with that of the University Grants Committee. They also again made a capital grant of £150,000 towards the requirements of Schools unconnected with the Bloomsbury Site, most of which was claimed before 1940.

The Council reduced their maintenance grant by ten per cent. from December 1940 to July 1941 and then reduced it further to £100,000 for the duration of the war. It was restored to its pre-war figure of £129,000 from April 1945 to July 1947.

Quinquennium 1947–52.—For the first two years of the period the Council made an annual grant of £175,000, but they have now agreed to return to the quinquennial basis of assessment and have increased their grant to £200,000 for the period 1949–50 to 1951–52.

[Bloomsbury.—For London County Council grants for new buildings in Bloomsbury, see p. 30.]

3. Home County and County Borough Grants

In 1921 the University approached certain Home Counties and County Boroughs for grants-in-aid, and for about twenty-five years approximately £13,000 a year was received from this source. In 1948 the scale on which financial aid should be received from the Home Counties in the post-war period was reviewed, and for the Council year 1948–49 the combined grants-in-aid for the work of the University amounted to £133,481.

5. Goldsmiths' College.
6. Institute of Advanced Legal Studies.
7. Institute of Archaeology.

[For benefactions to Library, see Library, page 483.]

1. Brown Animal Sanatory Institution

This Institution originated in a Bequest by Mr. Thomas Brown, of Rosey Park Hill, Dublin, but a citizen of London, who died in December 1852, “of Twenty Thousand and upwards of Three per cent. Consolidated Government Annuities . . . and all residue of personal property . . . for the founding, establishing, and upholding an Institution for investigating, studying, and without charge beyond immediate expenses, endeavouring to cure, maladies, dis tempers, and injuries, any Quadrupeds or Birds useful to man may be found subject to ; for and towards which purpose of founding, establishing, and upholding such Animal Sanatory Institution within a mile of either Westminster, Southwark, or Dublin . . .”

The Will provides for the appointment of a Superintendent or Professor, with residence and a salary, and for the delivery by him of five free Public Lectures annually on the business of the Institution ; and that “ kindness to the animals committed to his charge shall be a general principle of the Institution.”

[Particulars of the Trust are set out in the Second Issue of the Historical Record, pp. 4-6.]

The validity of this Bequest was contested by Mr. Brown’s executors and next of kin, mainly on the ground that such an Institution as Mr. Brown proposed to found would not properly be a Charity ; but the Master of the Rolls decided in favour of the University (13 November 1856). An appeal made at the instance of the University of Dublin was dismissed with costs.

Upon an order from the Master of the Rolls, the executors in April 1858 transferred to the University a Stock Warrant for £22,600 Three per cent. Consols, and a draft for £113 8s. 9d. The fund was allowed to accumulate at interest and by reinvestment of dividends until the spring of 1871 (the nineteenth year after Mr. Brown’s death), when the value of the stock amounted to £33,781 14s. 11d. The Senate then proceeded to execute the Trust by establishing the Institution, drawing up a scheme of management in accordance with the Will, and appointing an administrative Committee and a Professor-Superintendent.

A question having arisen as to whether the Mortmain Act would allow any part of the Trust Fund to be applied to the purchase of land, the difficulty was removed by a munificent gift to the Trust of £2,700 by Mr. John Cunliffe, of Lombard Street. By means of this gift an eligible site was purchased in Wandsworth Road and the requisite buildings forthwith erected. Subsequent gifts were a legacy of £516 left to the Institute by the late Mrs. Pappacalo, a donation of £500 by the Executors of the late Reymes Hurrell, Esq., in 1901, and a second (reversionary) gift by Mrs. Pappacalo of £661 in 1903. In addition, an order of the High Court of Justice, Chancery Division, in May 1921, allotted Stocks to the nominal value of about £3,800 to the University for the benefit of the Institution, these funds forming part of the residuary estate of the late Miss F. J. Wedgwood. A further sum of £560 was afterwards received from the Wedgwood Trustees.

The property was destroyed by air-raids in the war of 1939–45 and the future of the Institution is under consideration.

2. Commerce Degree Bureau

A sum of over £140,000 was raised by subscribers in the City and elsewhere in 1918 and subsequently for the promotion of the Scheme for Degrees in Commerce. This fund was allocated by the General Committee for Degrees in Commerce, who gave £75,000 to the University for the provision of buildings and equipment at the London School of Economics. In 1920 the General Committee again gave a sum of £50,000 for the purpose of founding the Commerce Degree Bureau, and in 1924 a further sum of £7,500 was handed to the London School of Economics subject to certain conditions.

In 1939 it was decided that it was no longer necessary to retain an Appeal Fund “Reserve” of £1,000, which had been kept in hand. The sum was transferred to the Commerce Degree Bureau, and the accumulated interest was divided equally between the Bureau and the London School of Economics.

3. Connaught Hall

In May 1928 H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught offered to the University (subject to certain conditions) the Duchess of Connaught Memorial Hostel in Bedford Place as a Hall of Residence for men students. The offer was accepted and in September 1928 the Hostel was transferred to the University. It was removed to larger quarters at 16–20 Torrington Square in September 1930.

Lady Drummond, who died in Canada in 1942, bequeathed £500 to the Connaught Hall “which has replaced the Duchess of Connaught Memorial Hostel.” The money was invested and the income is used for the benefit of students resident in the Hall.

4. Courtauld Institute of Art

In January 1929, Lord Lee of Fareham laid before the Senate, through the Vice-Chancellor, a Memorandum (drawn up in co-operation with Sir Robert Witt, Sir Martin Conway, Mr. W. G. Constable, and Professors Ernest Gardner, Richardson and Tonks) outlining a scheme for an Institute of the History of Fine Art which should provide facilities for the education of students in the history of art and for the training of art critics and experts.

The funds required for the scheme were put at £200,000, viz., £60,000 for building and equipment, and £140,000 for endowment; and Lord Lee offered, if the site were granted, to endeavour to raise this sum.

The University welcomed the project and agreed to allot the necessary site-area in Bloomsbury.

In September 1930 Lord Lee was able to communicate to the University the success of his efforts, due to the great generosity of Mr. Samuel Courtauld and Sir Joseph (now Lord) Duveen. Mr. Courtauld undertook to provide for the cost of the building (up to £70,000); and he further guaranteed £30,000, if needed, towards the Endowment Fund, Sir Joseph Duveen expressing his willingness to contribute £20,000. A donation of £1,000 was also received from Sir Herbert Cook.

In recognition of Mr. Courtauld's munificent benefaction, it was decided to call the Institute the "Courtauld Institute of Art."

In February 1932 Mr. Courtauld transferred to the University for the purpose of the Institute his house at 20 Portman Square, which is a unique example of the work of Robert Adam; the temporary offices in Adelphi Terrace, where the preliminary work of organisation was being carried on pending a permanent building, were vacated and it became possible to open the Institute to the public in October 1932, instead of waiting till the new buildings could be erected in Bloomsbury.

Mr. Courtauld also executed a Covenant to provide, from 1937, £1,500 annually for seven years, on certain conditions, towards the maintenance and upkeep of the Institute.

A promise of an annual grant of £1,000 for ten years was received from Alderman J. G. Graves of Sheffield in the autumn of 1932 "to enable the Director to defray the cost of certain additional features and attractions which would be calculated to increase the prestige of the Institute in its initial and formative stage, but which could hardly be made a charge upon its own or University funds." At the wish of the donor, to enable the administration to be kept informal and elastic, the money was dealt with by three Trustees (including the Director) and therefore did not pass through the University accounts.

The Universities' China Committee in London in the same year granted £1,050 a year for ten years, and have continued it since, for a University Chair of Chinese Art and Archæology, the Chair being tenable at the Institute. In 1946 the grant was increased to £1,200.

In 1934 a department (now known as the Department of the History of the Technology of Art) was planned for the study of the physical constitution and conservation of works of art, the garage of the house occupied by the Institute being adapted for the purpose. Towards the initial expenses of the department Sir Percival David gave £2,500 and a private benefaction of apparatus worth some £1,000 was received.

It was decided to use, for this department, the income to be received from a bequest by Mr. Norman Wilkinson, of Wilkinson & Riddell, Ltd., Birmingham, who died in February 1934 and left his estate to the Institute in the following terms :—

I bequeath all my estate both real and personal and wheresoever situate to the Courtauld Institute of Art at the University of London upon Trust for sale and after payment thereout of my just debts and funeral and testamentary expenses . . . to hold the residue thereof UPON TRUST for the said Courtauld Institute of Art to be disposed of solely in connection with the Institute in such manner as they shall deem fit and I hereby declare that notwithstanding the trust for sale hereinbefore declared that portion of my estate which is at present invested in Wilkinson and Riddell Limited of 42 Cherry Street Birmingham shall remain in its present state of investment during such period as my brother Geoffrey Howard Wilkinson shall remain Chairman of the Board of Directors of that Company.

The capital received was of the value of about £68,000.

From 1936 to 1940 an anonymous donor presented £360 a year for the institution of a Lectureship in Indian Art.

The Institute has received many gifts in kind, one of the most valuable being Lord Conway's collection of photographs and reproductions of works of art which is in active process of expansion and development.

Pictures and Books have also been received from the National Art-Collections Fund, Mr. Pierpont Morgan, Mr. George Eumorfopoulos, and other donors.

On the death of Professor Roger Fry in 1934 his executors presented, in accordance with his known wishes, his valuable collection of books, photographs and lantern-slides. A large part of his collection of pictures and other works of art is also on permanent exhibition at the Institute.

Sir Robert Witt in 1944 gave to the University for the Institute his unique library of several hundred thousand photographs of pictures and drawings of Western Art, and has promised further gifts of money for the extension of the library and its upkeep. The following is the declaration of Trust :—

THIS TRUST DEED is made the Twenty-eighth day of November 1944

by THE UNIVERSITY OF LONDON of The Senate House in the Borough of Holborn in the County of London.

WHEREAS :—

The University shall entrust the custody control and management of the library to the Donor during his life so long as he is ready and willing to undertake the same and shall not whilst the library remains with him be concerned to see to the safe custody thereof or be liable for any loss or damage that may happen thereto from any cause whatsoever.

5. Upon the library ceasing to be in the custody control and management of the Donor the University will make such provision as in its discretion it shall think necessary or desirable for the housing custody insurance protection of or otherwise in relation to the same or any part thereof and for rendering the library available for use pending provision of permanent accommodation as hereinafter provided.

8. The University will provide a printed account of the library dealing with its scope arrangement and special features which shall be available at the Courtauld Institute for users of the library.

9. Subject to Clause 4 hereof the University shall have the absolute management and entire control of the library and the Trust Fund and may make rescind and alter such regulations (not being inconsistent with this Deed) as the University may think fit with respect to the purpose for which, the manner in which, the terms and conditions on which and the times when the library shall be used and otherwise as the University shall think necessary for the purposes of this Deed or in connection with the execution of any of the trusts or powers herein contained.

10. The contents of the library shall be arranged as nearly as possible on the same general scientific principles and in the same order as explained in the catalogue of the library which already exists.

11. The University shall appoint and maintain an adequate library staff consisting of a Librarian and such other officers or servants as may be deemed expedient for the purpose of maintaining and carrying on the library or for any other purpose connected with the trusts of this Deed and may at any time remove any such officials or servants. But any Librarian specially familiar with the arrangement and working of the library and employed by the Donor at the time of his death or of his handing over control shall with a view to preserving continuity be offered a similar post on such death or handing over.

12. The University will pay the costs of insurance repairs and any alterations or outgoings in respect of the library or the premises in which the library shall from time to time be located and the salaries and wages of all officials and servants and other expenses of and incidental to maintaining and carrying on the library or the management of the Trust Fund or any purposes connected with the trusts of this Deed.

13. The University may at any time appoint or make provision for the appointment of any persons as Governors or committee-men or otherwise for the purpose of discharging such functions in connection with the library or the management of the Trust Fund or otherwise in relation to the execution of the trusts of this Deed and in such manner and subject to such regulations as the University may prescribe.

14. The University may from time to time maintain a banking account or accounts with such bank or banks as it shall from time to time decide and may pay any moneys forming part of the Trust Fund to the credit of any such account or place the money on deposit with any banker and any moneys at any time subject to the trusts of this Deed and requiring investment may be invested at the discretion of the University in any investments for the time being permitted by law for the investment of Trust Funds with power for the University at its discretion from time to time to vary any such investments for or into others of a like nature.

IN WITNESS whereof the University of London has caused its Seal to be hereunto affixed the day and year first above written.

Lord Lee, who had been a generous benefactor to the Institute during his life-time, died on 21 July 1947, leaving his pictures, etc., to the University under the following codicil to his Will :—

Codicil (No. 6)

This is a Supplementary Codicil to Codicil (No. 2) of the Will of me, Arthur Viscount Lee of Fareham, of Old Quarries, Avening, Gloucestershire : the said Will bearing date 25 July 1938

I.—Previous to the execution of the said Codicil (No. 2) I had originally planned to bequeath the whole of my Collection of Pictures, Drawings and Sculptures, as well as my Library of Art Books and Photographs, to the "Courtauld Institute of Art" (now forming part of the University of London).

When, however (in the year 1940), it seemed possible that the said Institute might not survive the War, or that the University of London might not wish, or be in a position, to implement the scheme for incorporating and adequately housing and maintaining the Institute, the aforesaid Codicil No. 2 was drafted so as to permit of an alternative destination or distribution of the Collection, at the discretion of the Trustees nominated therein. This latter provision, which then seemed appropriate to the circumstances of the moment, I now wish to cancel, and do hereby cancel, in favour of the original plan referred to above, in accordance with which I hereby bequeath (subject to my wife's life interest therein) the whole of my Collection of Pictures, Drawings and Sculptures (as existing at the date of my death) as well as my Library of Art Books and Art Photographs, to the University of London for permanent exhibition at the "Courtauld Institute of Art" (in new Gallery rooms to be specially built for the purpose) and subject to the conditions specified in Clause II below.

II.—(a) On the assumption, and provided, that the University of London accepts the gift of the "Lee Collection" and undertakes to provide for it adequate and in all respects suitable Gallery accommodation, in a separate building, the design and plans of which will have been submitted to and approved by Mr. Courtauld and myself, or the survivor of us, for the housing under the same roof of both the "Courtauld" and "Warburg" Institutes, I wish to lay down the following detailed provisions to be implemented and observed by the University as an essential condition of the gift.

(b) The Gallery rooms, which should be situated on the uppermost storey of the building, shall in all cases be top-lit and, so far as practicable, the lighting (by day as well as night) shall be arranged on a system similar to that installed at Old Quarries, Avening. The general colour (if not the covering) of the walls upon which the pictures are to hang shall also approximate in tone to that adopted at Old Quarries.

(c) The Gallery containing the "Lee Collection," whilst primarily reserved for the educational and other purposes of the Courtauld and Warburg Institutes, shall, at such times and under such conditions as the Director of the Courtauld Institute may approve, be accessible to the general Public, who should be enabled to reach it from the street by a separate entrance and staircase. Admission should be free to all Members of the University, but it might be desirable to charge a small entrance fee (say sixpence) to outside visitors.

(d) A simple but scholarly Catalogue of the Collection (compiled by the Institute) should be on sale in the Gallery, at a price not exceeding one shilling.

(e) The Gallery shall at all times be kept adequately warmed and guarded against fire or theft, and not less than one responsible and qualified warden shall always be in attendance whenever the rooms are open. (Lord Lee to have the right to nominate the first holder of the post of Chief Warden, or Curator, who will be under the orders of, and responsible to, the Director). All such expenses of running to be defrayed by the University.

(f) Whilst it is the desire of the Donors of the "Lee Collection" that it shall be kept together, and permanently on exhibition at the Courtauld Institute, they would not wish to prohibit the occasional loan to important Exhibitions of Old Masters in London (not elsewhere, or abroad) of a few selected pictures, at the discretion of the Director and with the previous approval of the University obtained in each case.

(g) No picture, or other object, forming part of the Collection must be sold, or detached on permanent loan to any other Institution. Any picture which, for any reason, the Director does not wish to exhibit on the walls of the Gallery, should be kept in a Reference storeroom accessible to students.

No addition of any picture or other work of art shall at any time be made to the "Lee Collection," after it has been transferred to the University, unless such addition has been either made, or approved in writing, by Lord or Lady Lee, or, if they be not living, by their Executors.

(h) In the event of any picture requiring cleaning, restoration, or treatment of any kind, such work shall only be carried out under the advice and supervision of the Director of the National Gallery and by such restorer as he may recommend for the purpose.

(i) In the event of the University being unwilling, for any reason, to accept the gift of the "Lee Collection" under the foregoing conditions; or, if, at any time in the future the University should find itself unable or unwilling to continue maintaining and financing the Collection in accordance with the said conditions, the University will undertake to hand back, free of charge, the whole Collection to the Trustees mentioned in Clause II Sections (b) (c) and (d) of Codicil (No. 2) to my Will, who will then proceed to allot and distribute all items contained in the said Collection in accordance with my wishes as expressed in Clause II Section (b) of the said Codicil (No. 2).

(j) In the event of the death of both my wife and myself before the new Courtauld Building is completed and available for the display of the "Lee Collection," the latter shall remain preferably at Old Quarries, in the custody and care of the Trustees mentioned in Codicil (No. 2) of my Will, until such time as the new Galleries are ready for its reception.

IN WITNESS whereof etc.

Lady Lee has expressed her intention of handing over the collection to the University unreservedly as soon as the galleries of the new Courtauld building are completed.

Mr. Samuel Courtauld died on 1 December 1947 and the following extracts from his Will were communicated (26 April 1948) by Pennington & Son, solicitors, to his executors :—

We have been instructed by the Executors of the late Mr. Samuel Courtauld to give you formal notification of the bequests under his Will in favour of the Home House Society. We think that perhaps it would be as well to quote you extracts from the Will insofar as they relate to the bequest to the Home House Society and the relative clauses are as follows :—

" 4. I Give free of all death duties to the Trustees for the time being of Home House Society (which was constituted by me in memory of my wife Elizabeth Theresa Frances Courtauld) the leasehold Garage and premises known as No. 10 Portman Mews North for all the residue which may be unexpired at my death of the term for which the same premises are held subject to the apportioned part of the rent reserved by and the covenants and conditions contained in the said Lease to be held by the said Trustees upon the like trusts and subject to the like powers and provisions as are by and in the said Trust Deeds constituting the said Society and which are dated the 16th day of December 1932 or any modification thereof declared and contained or such of the same trusts powers and provisions as shall be subsisting and capable of taking effect.

5. I Hereby Direct that all Duties (if any) payable on my death and the interest on such Duties and the costs of raising the same payable on my death in respect of any of the property then subject to the Trusts declared by the said Trustees constituting the Home House Society and the bequest contained in the last preceding clause hereof or in respect of any gift made by me during my lifetime which may be payable under Section 47 of the Finance Act 1946 or any statutory modification thereof shall be charged on and be made payable out of my Residuary Estate in exoneration of the said property or gifts including any additional duties (if any) payable by reason of this direction.

8. I Give free of Legacy Duty the pictures, drawings and other articles set out in the lists Nos. 1 to 5 inclusive which I have already signed and which bear date the 3rd day of April 1947 to any persons, societies or corporations whose names are specified in the said lists and I declare that these gifts shall take priority to any other gifts of chattels contained in any other clause of this my Will and in case of any conflict between the gifts in this clause and the gifts in any other clause the gifts in this clause shall prevail."

The only list referred to in Clause 8 quoted above which affects the Society is list III, and we are enclosing a copy of the same herewith.

With the above information and the enclosed copy list of paintings, drawings and prints bequeathed to the Society, you have full details of all the bequests contained in the Will which affect the Society.

Should there be any further information which you require from us please let us know.

PENNINGTON AND SON

This is in effect a gift to the Courtauld Institute though the legal title to the pictures is vested in the Home House Trustees, who number seven and include the Vice-Chancellor and Principal ex officio together with the Chairman of the Management Committee of the Courtauld Institute (at present Professor Lionel Robbins). It is in the Home House Trustees that the lease of 20 Portman Square is vested, and it was to the Trustees that Mr. Courtauld transferred the pictures which are now exhibited at the Institute.

Some of the paintings bequeathed constitute an invaluable addition to the works of art at the disposal of the Institute.

An anonymous gift of £2,000 was received in 1947 and a further gift of £1,000 in 1949, the income therefrom to be used in assisting students to travel in England and abroad for the purpose of studying the History of Art.

5. Goldsmiths' College

The Goldsmiths' Company in 1905 presented to the University their Institute at New Cross, together with 4½ acres of unoccupied land, valued at £100,000, to be held "for such Charitable uses as the University shall with the consent of the Goldsmiths' Company from time to time or at any time by Deed appoint and subject to such appointment and so far as any such appointment shall not extend then for the extension and diffusion of knowledge in connection with and under the control of the University."

[The Indenture is set out in the Second Issue of the Historical Record, pp. 14-15.]

The Company further gave a sum of £10,000 in the Session 1904–05 and £5,000 in each of the following years to 1912 for the maintenance of the Institute, which after its transfer to the University was named Goldsmiths' College. In addition to these grants, the Company have given £1,558 towards sanitary improvements in the buildings and £8,000 towards new buildings, and (in 1912) provided two hostels for Students attending the Training College Department.

In 1931 the London County Council made a grant of £1,500 towards the cost of re-conditioning the rooms left vacant by the transfer of the Engineering and Building Department to the S.E. London Technical Institute, for the purposes of the Literary Department.

6. Institute of Advanced Legal Studies

The Institute was founded in 1947. The Senate decided to house therein the Huberich bequest of legal books (see Section III, Huberich, below). Other gifts to the Library include a set of the English and Empire Digest (49 vols.) from Sir Samuel Gluckstein.

The Nuffield Trustees in the same year made a grant of £10,000 for the purchase of Dominion and Empire statutes, case reports and legal treatises. The section of the library dealing with Commonwealth and Empire Law is named the Nuffield Library to commemorate the benefaction.

7. Institute of Archaeology

As a result of a private appeal by persons interested in the establishment of an Institute of Archaeology on the Bloomsbury site, £6,745 was transferred to the University in 1934–35. Pending the raising of further funds and the erection of the proposed building, accommodation for 21 years from January 1936 was secured in St. John's Lodge, Regent's Park. The late Mrs. Mary Woodgate Wharrie gave £10,000 under the following Deed of Gift (22 January 1935) :—

The Donor hereby gives the sum of Ten Thousand Pounds (£10,000) now on deposit to the above Appeal Committee the intention primarily being that the Donation shall form a contribution to a Fund for the re-conditioning and occupation of St. John's Lodge, Regent's Park, by the University of London and in particular for the housing of the Petrie Palestinian Collection in that Building.

Mrs. Wharrie made it clear that no obligation was imposed on the University to continue in the building for the full term of the lease should conditions or circumstances make it impracticable or inadvisable for any reason to remain there.

To this gift Mrs. Wharrie later added two further donations of £2,500. For the expenses of the photographic laboratory Sir Robert Mond gave £300 and Sir Alfred Wood guaranteed for a period of three years to make good any deficit up to £100. Sir Robert Mond added to this gift a further donation of £100 for the expenses of the Hon. Lecturer in Geo-Chronology. Another generous contributor to the general purposes of the Institute was Mr. A. L. Reckitt, who, by a gift of £250 and a loan without interest of a similar amount, enabled the initial equipment of the Institute to be carried out without delay. Sir Percival David, by making a generous contribution to the Antioch Exploration Fund through the Institute, has put it in a position to claim a share in the finds of the expedition.

Palestinian Collection of the British School of Archaeology in Egypt.—This, the most valuable teaching collection of its special kind outside Palestine, has been handed to the University, and is now housed at the Institute where it provides both unique material for teaching purposes and an exhibit of especial interest to the public.

Gifts of Archaeological Collections.—A further valuable gift has been made by Lady Marston of the archaeological collections of her late husband, Sir Charles Marston, and Dr. W. L. Hildburgh has presented an important collection of Scandinavian antiquities.

8. Institute of Historical Research and Victoria County History

The Institute of Historical Research was founded as the result of an Appeal by the University in 1920. This raised a sum of £24,000, of which £20,000 was provided by Mr. J. C. Power (later Sir John Power, Bart.) for the erection and equipment of a temporary building upon a plot of ground in Malet Street. This building was demolished in 1938.

An Appeal Fund was opened in 1934 to provide a permanent building on the Bloomsbury site. This forms a wing of the Senate House and cost approximately £70,000. Grants of £7,000 and £5,000 were made by the Treasury and the Rhodes Trustees respectively, and about £4,600 was received from other donors.

In 1941 Mr. H. P. H. Biggar transferred 500 National Savings Certificates (value £537 10s.), which his father had collected in Canada originally with the hope of raising enough to endow a lectureship on Canadian history, upon trust to apply the interest for the purchase of books for the Canadian history section of the Institute Library.

Miss Eliza Jeffries Davis, University Reader in the History of London, to whom, with Professor A. F. Pollard, the foundation of the Institute of Historical Research was largely due, died on 30 October 1943 and left to the Institute the first choice (after her family) from her collection of books relating chiefly to the history of London.

In 1945 the University received a bequest by M. Seymour Montefiore Robert Rosso de Ricci of his collection of notes and indexes relating to a survey of manuscripts in the British Isles. Before the war, the Institute of Historical Research had agreed to sponsor this work, which was to have been produced on lines similar to M. de Ricci's Census of Medieval and Renaissance Manuscripts of the United States and Canada, already published, and the collection is being housed at the Institute.

[See also under Bloomsbury, p. 34.]

Victoria County History

Dr. William Page in July 1932 offered to the University the copyright, etc., of the Victoria History of the Counties of England, subject to the conditions specified in a letter,* dated 12 July 1932, and an accompanying Memorandum.

Dr. Page's offer was accepted, and the University without delay embarked on a scheme for the issue of further volumes of the History. This scheme was in its early stages financed by the Pilgrim Trust who in February 1933 granted £1,500 for the purpose. Since the exhaustion of this sum, funds have been provided by the University from its own resources.

The work is carried on under the supervision of a committee, called the Victoria County History Committee, of not more than twelve members, appointed by the Institute of Historical Research Committee, consisting partly of members of that Committee and partly of other persons expert in the sources of local art, archaeology, history, and architecture and persons prominently connected with such institutions as the Public Record Office, the British Records Association, the Society of Antiquaries and the English Place Name Society.

The general objects of the Committee are (i) the collection of material for, and preparation of, new volumes of the Victoria County History, and the revision of old volumes;

(ii) the editing and publication of such material, or such volumes, as may be gradually rendered feasible by financial support.

Dr. Page died in February 1934 and was succeeded as Chairman of the Victoria County History Committee by Sir Charles Peers and as General Editor of the History by Mr. L. F. Salzman, M.A., F.S.A., who entered into office on 1 January 1935. By agreement with Dr. Page's executors and Mrs. Page, the latter's life interests in the proceeds of sales of volumes published before the transfer to the University was surrendered in return for a fixed annuity, terminated by the death of Mrs. Page in May 1947. These proceeds are now used towards the financing of new publications. The guarantors mentioned in Dr. Page's memorandum transferred the benefit of their guarantees to the University, and Mr. Granville Proby further released to the University his interest in the sales of the Huntingdonshire history. This history and that of Rutland have been completed and Sussex III and IX have been published with the help of guarantors. Sussex VII, Northamptonshire IV and Oxfordshire I have been produced with guarantors, and Cambridgeshire 1 with funds subscribed by Colleges of the University of Cambridge. Warwickshire III and IV have appeared recently, and the completion of this county has been partially financed by advance subscriptions from the Warwickshire County Council and the City Councils of Birmingham and Coventry. The County Council has in addition made an outright grant of £200 towards increased costs of production. Volumes V, VI and VII of Warwickshire are in active preparation, and so are Cambridgeshire II, III and IV, and Oxfordshire III (financed by donations from the Oxford City Council and Colleges of the University of Oxford). A Wiltshire scheme has been launched, with the aid of grants from the Wiltshire County Council and the Borough of Swindon. A project to complete the Leicestershire history has received considerable financial support in the county. The Oxford University Press publish all volumes of the History.

Dr. Page's own set of 100 volumes was presented to the Institute, after his death, by his daughter, Lady Gregory.

9. Observatory

In 1926 Mr. J. G. Wilson offered to the University a 24-inch Reflector Telescope. Certain Schools of the University undertook for a specified period to contribute to the maintenance of a University Observatory, and the Senate accepted Mr. Wilson's offer and made a capital grant from general funds of £5,000 for the building and establishment of the Observatory. A site was acquired at Hendon on a 999 years' lease at a nominal rent ; a Director and Observer were appointed ; and the Observatory was opened in 1929.

In 1930, University College accepted an offer from Mr. H. R. Fry, F.R.A.S., of an 8-inch Refracting Equatorial Telescope and £50 for its reconditioning and erection at the Observatory.

In 1935 a 24-inch telescope was presented by the Radcliffe Trustees, together with a dome and scientific apparatus. A building to house this telescope was formally opened in 1938.

10. School of Slavonic and East European Studies

The School of Slavonic and East European Studies received from the Czechoslovak Government, in addition to a grant of some £25,000 towards the new School building, sums amounting to about £10,000 between 1932 and 1946 for a Masaryk Chair of Central European History. The School also received about £5,000 in the same period from the Jugoslav Government for a Reader in Serbo-Croatian Language and Literature, together with £400 for a Scholarship and Publications ; about £8,000 between 1935 and 1946 from the Polish Government and £2,500 from the Hungarian Government ; and in 1941 £366 from the Roumanian Government, all in aid of teaching at the School.

Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co., Ltd., covenanted in 1939 to give the School 25 guineas a year free of tax for seven years.

The Rhodes Trustees gave £200 a year for two years, 1939-40 and 1940-41, towards the salary of the Librarian.

In 1943 Lord Melchett, on behalf of Imperial Chemical Industries, Ltd., gave £250 to help publication of works in connection with some of the languages taught in the School. A further contribution to this publication fund was made by F. W. Hampshire & Co., who gave £50 in 1943.

In 1945, the University accepted on behalf of the School £1,000 from Mr. J. Roston, Director of the Linguaphone Institute, to provide a £200 Scholarship for five years to enable the holder, who must be British, to make an intensive study of phonetics and the colloquial use of one of the languages taught at the school.

Imperial Chemical Industries, Ltd., in 1946 sent £50 and promised the same amount annually for a further four years.

Britt Bequest for Physics, English, and Modern Languages

[C.M. 536 of July and 42 of Oct. 1942]

In 1942, the University received £3,500 under the Will of Mr. George William Britt, as set out in the following letter (3 June 1942) from his executors' solicitors :—

We act for the Executors of the above-named George William Britt, who directed payment to the University of London of the following sums of money free of duty to be held by the University upon trusts to be agreed by the Executors in collaboration with the Senate of the University for the purposes stated below :—

- (a) the sum of £1,500 to establish a scholarship in memory of my mother to be known as the "Mary Ann Britt" Scholarship.
- (b) the sum of £1,000 to establish a scholarship in memory of my father to be known as the "George William Britt, Senior" Scholarship.
- (c) the sum of £1,000 to establish a scholarship in my memory to be known as the "George William Britt" Scholarship.

The conditions and manner of award, terms of tenure and other details connected with the establishment of these scholarships are left to the Senate of the University of London to prescribe with the approval of my Trustees. It is my intention that work of an advanced character shall be undertaken by the holders of these Scholarships, and it is my wish that these bequests may, if possible, confer benefits on King's College, London, where I was once a student.

In a letter addressed by Mr. Britt to the Rev. J. P. R. Rees-Jones, M.A., one of the Executors, the deceased states :—

In the bequest to establish Scholarships, the details of award, etc., are left to be prescribed by the Senate of the University of London with your approval. Work of an advanced character involves research. Without imposing any obligation I should like the scholarship bearing my name to be awarded for Physics, and the other two for English Language and Literature and Modern Languages respectively. It is left, however, to the discretion of the Senate. There may be some way of avoiding undue confusion in the names given to these Scholarships arising from the fact that my father and I had the same Christian names.

The Executors are now in a position to pay the total amount of these legacies, and we shall be obliged if you will kindly let us know the Bank to which the Senate would like the sum paid and also give us the name and address of the person who will sign the receipt for this. Perhaps you can also let us know the manner in which it is proposed to establish these three Scholarships and the terms thereof so that we can submit the details to the Executors for approval.

A scheme for carrying out the wishes of the testator was discussed with the Executors and it was agreed that post-graduate Studentships should be offered, the income from the bequests being pooled and the three Studentships for English, Modern Languages and Physics, each to the value of about £100, offered in rotation. Other things being equal, preference is given to students of King's College.

Joseph Memorial for Social Studies

[C.M. 532 of July 1945]

The friends of Mrs. Madge Waley Joseph raised a memorial fund which they presented in 1945 to the University for the purpose set out in the following letter (5 July 1945) from Mrs. Eva M. Hubback, Chairman of the Fund :—

I think you are aware that the friends of the late Mrs. Madge Waley Joseph have raised a Memorial Fund of £1,000 "to found an educational endowment at a University for women wishing to devote themselves to social service in the widest sense."

The Committee has decided to offer the Fund to London University. They wish to leave the University entirely free to decide both the college or colleges at which the Scholarship or Bursary should be held, from time to time, and—within the terms of reference of the endowment—the degree or diploma course each holder of the scholarship should follow. For instance, whether this should be a diploma in the Social Studies or an Economics Degree.

They would wish, however, that the name of Madge Waley Joseph should be definitely associated with the endowment and that the scholarship or bursary should be called the Madge Waley Joseph Scholarship (or Bursary) the scholar being called the Madge Waley Joseph Scholar (or Bursar).

The Committee also expresses the wish that the first Scholarship should benefit a student wishing to attend a course in the Social Studies Department at Bedford College.

The Senate instituted a Scholarship of about £40 for an undergraduate working for a degree in Economics, Sociology or Social Studies at Bedford College or the London School of Economics.

Dr. T. H. Sanderson-Wells, who was specially interested in food problems in relation to health and disease, founded, during the years 1939–42, prizes and a Lectureship to encourage study in this subject, and supplemented the latter by an endowment towards the cost of publishing the Lectures. The benefactions, made in the form of investments transferred to the University, were of the value of about £1,430 for the prizes, £1,020 for the lectureship and £420 for the publication fund.

His letters, which constitute the Trusts, are as follows :—

Sanderson-Wells Prizes

Letter of 8 December, 1939.—Having in recent years devoted much attention and work to food problems, and having come to regard food as the foundation of health, I desire to found two prizes for students in order to direct their attention to this vital subject.

I am therefore transferring to the University 400 Provincial Insurance 25% 4s. Preference shares and 50 Phoenix Assurance £1 fully paid shares, as an endowment UPON TRUST for two prizes to be awarded in accordance with the following scheme :—

The Junior Prize shall be open to students who have passed the second examination for the M.B., B.S., not more than twelve months previously. The Prize shall be awarded for a paper or essay, as the examiners may determine, on some subject relating to human nutrition. The examiners shall be the Professor of Dietetics in the University of London, and one of the examiners in Physiology at the second examination for medical degrees, appointed by the Board of Examiners in Physiology.

The Senior Prize shall be open to students who have passed the final M.B., B.S., examination not more than twelve months previously. The Prize shall be awarded for a paper or essay, as the examiners may determine, on some subject bearing on the relation of diet to disease. The examiners shall be the Professor of Dietetics in the University of London and one of the examiners in Medicine in the current year, appointed by the Board of Examiners in Medicine.

The income from the capital, after providing for payment to the examiners, will permit of an award of £10 for the Junior Prize and £20 for the Senior Prize.

I wish the University to make every attempt to conserve the capital and income, by investing any bonuses or surpluses, and even by cutting down or withholding the prize for this purpose.

The University may vary the investments for the purpose of procuring a higher yield (but during my life-time only with my consent).

The University may vary the terms of the award (but during my life-time only with my consent) provided always that the prizes shall for ever be called the Sanderson-Wells Prizes and be awarded on some subject relating to nutrition or to the relation of diet and disease.

I shall be glad to have your formal acceptance of my offer on these terms, this letter thereby constituting the Trust.

Sanderson-Wells Lectureship

Scheme (30 June 1940)—1. The Lecture to be known as the Sanderson-Wells Lecture, and to be on some subject of moment bearing upon “The Nature, Causes and Cure of Human Ailments, with special reference to Soil Fertility, Tissue Resistance, Food, Health and Disease.”

2. The Lecture to be given at such intervals as the University may decide, when discoveries of investigators make some pronouncement desirable and the income of the fund has accumulated to provide for a suitable fee for the Lecturer and for other expenses.

3. The Lecture to be published either as a reprint from any Journal in which it may appear or as a pamphlet or leaflet, and a number of copies (the number to be settled by the University) to be distributed without charge to workers and general practitioners.

4. The University to use every opportunity to increase the capital of the trust and for this purpose to withdraw the Lecture for a period during which income shall be invested and become capital.

Sanderson-Wells Lecture Publication Fund

Letter of 7 March 1942.—I wish to create a fund the income of which shall be applied towards the expenses of publishing and distributing the Sanderson-Wells Lecture, as provided in Clause 3 of the Lectureship Trust Deed.

In consequence of the creation of this Publication Fund, no cost of publication is to fall on the Lectureship Fund, notwithstanding Clause 3 of the Lectureship Trust Deed.

I therefore propose to transfer to the University £250 2½% Consols and £200 L.M.S. Railway 4% Debenture Stock, the income from which is to be applied to publishing and distributing the Lecture.

Clause 3 of the Lectureship Trust Deed notwithstanding, the University may at its discretion withhold publication of any lecture and add the income of the Publication Fund to the capital of the Publication Fund.

Dr. Sanderson-Wells further wrote (3 Sept. 1942) :—

Without in any way hampering the freedom of action of the University, I desire to express certain personal hopes and opinions, viz. :—

1. To emphasise the desirability of taking every opportunity to increase the capital of the several Funds, either as opportunity occurs by re-investment of surplus income, or should need arise, by suspension for short intervals.

2. That the Junior Prize shall increase knowledge of the physiological processes by which the body builds its structures on food, and likewise maintains it thereon in that perfect balance which is health.

3. That the Senior Prize shall increase knowledge of the pathological processes by which ill-feeding produces disease.

4. That the Lecture shall illustrate the connection between soil fertility and health and soil starvation, or malnutrition, and disease ; and shall epitomize the best current methods of maintaining soil fertility, which I believe will prove to be based on natural processes.

Scharlieb Bequest for Research

[C.M. 267 of Jan. 1931]

Miss Mary Ethel Sim Scharlieb, who died on the 31 May 1926, bequeathed to the University a legacy of £4,000 payable on the death of her mother. The terms of the bequest are :—

Robert Lowe, Viscount Sherbrooke, first Member of Parliament for the University and Fellow from 1860–1892, gave to the University a sum of £1,000 to be used at the discretion of the Senate. Until 1932, the income, supplemented from general University funds, was devoted to a Sherbrooke Scholarship in Mathematics. It was then decided to award a Sherbrooke Post-graduate Studentship in Mathematics. The present income of about £40 is supplemented from University general funds to provide a studentship of £200.

Simmons Prizes for Geography.

[S.M. 3744 of June 1923]

In 1923 teachers and other friends of Mr. Arthur Thomas Simmons provided a fund for the establishment, as a memorial of his work as Inspector of Schools for the University for seventeen years from 1904 to 1921, of two Prizes in Geography to be awarded on the results of the Midsummer General School Examination. Each prize consists of books to the value of about £2.

In 1903 Mrs. George Smith and her children gave to the University a sum of £3,800 for the purpose of founding, in memory of Mr. George Smith, a Studentship and Prize of books, open to Internal Students of the University, to encourage Historical and Biographical research. The income (now about £180) is supplemented from University general funds to allow of a Studentship to the value of £200, with a Prize of £5 to be expended on books.

Soames Bequest for Phonetics

[S.M. 46 of Oct. 1924 and 1372 of Jan. 1925]

In October 1924 the University took over from the surviving trustees the Trust which they had accepted under the Will of Miss Laura Soames which was proved on 19 February 1895, and £113 was transferred to the University as the Capital of the trust.

By direction of the Trustees the income is to be used for the purpose of founding a prize to be known as the "Laura Soames Prize" to promote the study of phonetics, or alternatively for the purpose of propagating a knowledge of phonetics by any means which may appear to the Senate to be the best for that purpose.

Until the income reaches £10, when the regulations will be reconsidered, an annual prize of the value of £5 is awarded to a student in the Department of Phonetics at University College for the most distinguished piece of research work dealing with the phonetic structure of a living language.

Stevenson Chairs of International History

[S.M. 1262 of Dec. 1925; 997 of Dec. 1930 and 1559 of Jan. 1931]

In 1926 Sir Daniel Stevenson gave to the University funds for the establishment of a part-time Chair of International History, and at the same time gave to the Royal (then British) Institute of International Affairs funds for the appointment of a Director of Studies.

In 1930–31 the terms of the gift were varied so as to provide for the establishment of a part-time Research Chair of International History and of a whole-time Chair of International History.

[The first Indenture is set out in the Second Issue of the Historical Record, pp. 45–48.] The second Indenture is as follows :—

THIS INDENTURE made the seventeenth day of February, 1931 between Sir Daniel Macaulay Stevenson, Baronet, of 12, Waterloo Street, Glasgow (hereinafter called "the Founder") of the one part and the University of London (hereinafter called the "University") of the other part with the approval and concurrence of the Royal Institute of International Affairs and of Mr. Arnold J. Toynbee in so far as their interests are involved

WHEREAS the Founder being desirous of furthering amity and good understanding among all Nations and being persuaded that the study and teaching of History as hitherto practised in this and other Countries have not been conducive to this end, that on the contrary in practically all Countries the teaching of History and the Class-books used therefor have had a strong Nationalist bias creating among the peoples from childhood onwards a spirit of antipathy, ill-will and even hatred of other peoples and being convinced that the teaching of History internationally and as far as practicable without bias would tend to substitute for this spirit a spirit of international co-operation peace and goodwill came to the conclusion that such teaching could be undertaken satisfactorily and carried on efficiently by the University of London working in co-operation with the British Institute of International Affairs and accordingly such co-operation was effected by means of two agreements made on the 26th day of November, 1925, between the Founder on the one part and the University of London and Trustees for the British Institute of International Affairs, now incorporated by Royal Charter under the name of the Royal Institute of International Affairs (and hereinafter so referred to) of the other part respectively

AND WHEREAS the Founder agreed to bind himself by an irrevocable deed to pay to the University of London half-yearly for six and a half years the sum of One thousand five hundred and thirty-eight pounds nine shillings and two pence amounting in all to the sum of Twenty thousand pounds to the intent that out of said instalments and (when sufficient) the net income arising from the investment of the balances thereof the University should apply the sum of five hundred pounds per annum to defraying the stipend of a Professor of International History in the said University and also apply the surplus income to the development of a Department of International History and also agreed to pay to the Trustees for the Royal Institute of International Affairs a further sum of same amount One thousand five hundred and thirty-eight pounds nine shillings and two pence Half-yearly for six and a half years in all Twenty thousand pounds to the intent that out of the said instalments and (when sufficient) the net income arising from the investment of the balances thereof Five hundred pounds per annum should be applied to increase the above-mentioned stipend of the said Professor in respect that he should concurrently and ex-officio perform the duties of Director of Studies in the said Institute it being understood and agreed that the said Professorate and Directorate should form jointly a single Scheme for the better education and instruction of Students in the history and progress of International Affairs and the training of the said Students in such a way as to fit them for becoming Teachers of International History on the above lines in all parts of the world and that the whole income arising from the investment of the Founder's said payments should be exclusively devoted to the purposes of the said Scheme

AND WHEREAS the Founder holding that no one could satisfactorily and efficiently carry out the proposed duties without keeping himself in constant touch with leading opinion abroad further agreed to pay to the said Trustees half-yearly for six and a half years the sum of One hundred and fifty-three pounds sixteen shillings and eleven pence whereof at least Fifty pounds a year should be applied in defraying the expenses of annual visits by the Professor-Director to foreign countries and that any balance not so applied in any year should be invested and exclusively devoted to building up a fund for the defraying out of the revenue therefrom of such expenses as might be incurred in the future by the Director and/or his Assistants referred to in the said agreement between the Founder and the Trustees

AND WHEREAS the said agreement between the Founder and the University prescribed the method of appointment of the Professor, his qualifications and duties, and provided that the first holder of the Chair should be Mr. Arnold Joseph Toynbee

AND WHEREAS it has proved impracticable for one person to perform adequately the duties attaching to the joint Professor-Directorate provided under the said agreements and it has therefore been deemed expedient to vary the terms of the said agreements, and in addition to the Stevenson Professor of International History to provide for the appointment by the University of a Stevenson Research Professor of International History, the holder of which Chair shall be the Director of Studies at the Institute and shall receive the emoluments attached to that office

AND WHEREAS the written consent of the Founder is essential to such variation

NOW THIS INDENTURE WITNESSETH and it is hereby agreed and declared as follows :—

1. In addition to the Professorship created in pursuance of the agreement made between the Founder and the University on the 26th day of November, 1925, a Stevenson Research Professorship of International History shall be created. The University will appoint the said Arnold Joseph Toynbee as the first holder of the said Research Professorship. On the conclusion of his tenure of the said professorship his successor as the Stevenson Research Professor of International History shall be elected and appointed by the Senate upon the recommendation of a Board of Advisors constituted as follows and reporting through the Academic Council, viz., the Vice-Chancellor, the Principal, three External Experts appointed in accordance with the General Regulations of the University, three persons appointed by the Council of the R.I.I.A., one person appointed by the School of the University to which the professorship is with the consent of the School for the time being attached, provided always that no such appointment and election shall be made by the Senate without the concurrence of the Royal Institute of International Affairs. The tenure of the Professorship on each appointment shall be for five years the person appointed being eligible for reappointment. Sex shall not be a disqualification for appointment or reappointment.

2. The Stevenson Research Professor of International History shall until the Senate of the University otherwise direct be attached to the London School of Economics. His teaching duties as Stevenson Research Professor will be limited to advising and assisting at the Royal Institute of International Affairs students sent to him by other teachers of the University but he will be free in so far as is compatible with the carrying out of his duties and obligations as Director of Studies to the Royal Institute of International Affairs to give public and other lectures from time to time if willing[•]to do so upon subjects connected with his studies. He will retain until the Senate otherwise direct his membership of Boards of Studies and other University bodies.

3. The University shall invest the said sums paid to them or the balances thereof in any investments authorised by law with power from time to time to change the same or any of them for others of a like nature and shall stand possessed of the said sums or investments (all of which are hereinafter included in the expression "the Trust Funds") upon and with and subject to the trusts powers and provisions hereinafter declared and contained.

4. When the Fund arising from the investment of the said payments of One thousand five hundred and thirty-eight pounds nine shillings and two pence shall after providing for such administrative or other expenses and outgoings incidental to the administration of this Trust as the University in its uncontrolled discretion may incur produce a sufficient annual income or when sufficient funds shall be provided from other sources the University will as soon as possible appoint a whole-time Professor to be known as the Stevenson Professor of International History in the manner and subject to the conditions and with duties as hereinafter prescribed. The University will apply any surplus arising from the funds to better carrying out the desires of the Founder as set out in the Preamble more particularly by the development of a Department of International History in the University and the appointment of Assistants to the Professor.

5. The Professor shall be elected and appointed by the Senate upon the recommendation of a Board of Advisors constituted as follows and reporting through the Academic Council, viz., the Vice-Chancellor, the Principal, the Principal (or Chief Executive Officer) of and three other persons representing the College or School to which the Chair is for the time being attached and three External Experts appointed in accordance with the General Regulations of the University. The tenure of the professorship shall be for five years in the first instance, the person appointed being eligible for reappointment either for a limited period or until the age of retirement. Sex shall not be a disqualification for appointment or reappointment.

6. The person recommended for appointment as Professor shall satisfy the Board of Advisors that he has a good working knowledge of German, French and English, and that he is in sympathy with the aims of the Founder set out above. As a condition of reappointment the Professor shall further satisfy the Board of Advisors that he is competent to teach in two of these languages.

7. It shall be the duty of the Professor to conduct classes and give lectures or other teaching on the subject of International History since the end of the fifteenth century, to undertake the direction and supervision of special and advanced Students and to do all in his power to promote the Study of his subject free as far as possible from national prejudice bias or prepossession. His work shall form part of the Course of Instruction in History at the University. It is the Founder's desire that Students coming under the influence of the Professor in this or other ways may become trained and fitted to promote amity and good understanding among the Nations and to become themselves Teachers of International History in the same spirit all over the world.

8. A Committee shall be appointed jointly by the School to which the Stevenson Professor of International History is attached and the Institute consisting of three representatives from each body with powers to co-opt additional members which shall be convened by the Council of the Institute once each year, or more often as may be found desirable, for the purpose of considering reports by and minutes of the Council of the Royal Institute of International Affairs and the University, and advising as to the best means of securing co-operation in the work of the two bodies and furthering all the objects of the Foundation. Such reports and minutes shall be sent to the members at least seven days before the respective meetings and the Council undertakes that full minutes of such meetings and of the decisions come to thereat shall be made and preserved.

9. The University may at any time (but during the lifetime of the Founder only after his consent in writing shall be first had and obtained) vary the trusts hereinbefore declared in such manner as the University may think desirable for better carrying on the Study of International History with a view to the furtherance of amity and good understanding among the Nations provided that in any such case the name of Stevenson shall be retained and preserved in connection with the said trusts and that the intentions of the Founder as declared in the Preamble shall be respected.

IN WITNESS whereof, etc.

Story-Miller

[See Miller]

Trinity College of Music—King Edward Chair
 [S.M. 1878 of May 1902]

In 1902 the members of Trinity College of Music, London, gave to the University a sum of £5,000 for the endowment of the King Edward Chair of Music. The fund provided until 1943 an honorarium of £200 to the King Edward Professor of Music, whose duty it is to do all in his power to promote the study of music in the University. Since 1943 the income (now about £150) has been supplemented from general funds to bring it up to £200.

Turner & Newall Research Fellowships
 [C.M. 34 of Oct. 1945]

In 1945, Turner & Newall, Ltd., entered into a covenant with the University to provide £1,200 a year for seven years for the purpose of establishing Research Fellowships in Engineering, Inorganic Chemistry or Physics. The Fellowships, normally two in number of a value of £600 a year, are to be used to promote by means of scientific research an increase of knowledge in Engineering, Inorganic Chemistry or Physics or in any allied science which the University may suggest and which Turner & Newall, Ltd, may agree has some direct relation to the manufacturing interest of the Company. In addition to research the Fellow is to engage in University teaching.

Venables Gift
 [C.M. 416 of Feb. 1947]

Mr. Basil M. Venables, B.Sc. (Eng.) (Lond.), entered into a Deed of Covenant to pay the University £25 annually for seven years from December 1946, and has approved the proposal that it should be added to the Vice-Chancellor's Discretionary Fund for Students.

Wallas Memorial Scholarship

[C.M. 319 of May 1934]

In 1934, the University accepted the Trusteeship of £310, collected as a memorial to the late Professor Graham Wallas, who died on 9 August 1932, to which was added £240 raised when he retired from his University Chair in 1923. The purpose of the fund is set out in the accompanying letter from Sir William Beveridge :—

On behalf of the Consultative Committee of the Fund, I now write to invite the Senate of the University of London to accept the combined sum of £550 in trust for the foundation of a scholarship in commemoration of the name of Graham Wallas.

We wish the scholarship to be available for a student who, having passed the Intermediate Examination or its equivalent, shall be working as an Internal student of the University of London for the B.Sc. degree in Economics (with the special subject of Political Science or Sociology), the B.A. degree in Sociology or Psychology, or the B.Sc. in Psychology. The purpose of the award should be to assist a student better to carry on, whether in England or abroad, his studies in the field of work of the late Professor Graham Wallas.

We should like the scholarship to be awarded by a specially constituted Awards Committee consisting of the Director of the London School of Economics (ex officio) (Chairman), and one member elected by each of the three Boards of Studies in Economics, Sociology and Psychology. The Awards Committee should be allowed to determine the procedure of the award, but no award should be made unless a candidate of sufficient merit presented himself.

At the same time the University accepted the trusteeship of a Graham Wallas Prize Fund, under the conditions set out in the following letter (1 Dec. 1933) from Sir William Beveridge :—

I write on behalf of the London School of Economics, and with the consent of the donors of the Graham Wallas Prize, to convey to you our willingness, should the University accept the trusteeship of the Graham Wallas Fund for the purpose of founding a memorial scholarship, to augment during a trial period of six years the sum of money thus provided by the annual amount of 10 guineas, the value of the Graham Wallas Prize at present awarded to the most meritorious student of Political Science at the School.

Such an agreement would mean the discontinuance of the award of the Graham Wallas Prize, and the School would reserve the right without prejudice to reconsider the arrangement at the conclusion of the trial period.

The Graham Wallas Scholarship is of the value of about £40 a year, tenable in the first instance for one year, but renewable.

[C.M. 313 of Feb. 1937]

Mrs. Florence Joy Weldon, who died on 18 October 1936, bequeathed her residuary estate to Trustees, the income therefrom (subject to a life interest of £200 a year) to be paid to the University for a Chair of Biometry in memory of her husband, Walter Frank Raphael Weldon, Jodrell Professor of Zoology at University College from 1890 to 1900 and collaborator with the late Professor Karl Pearson. The following are the relevant clauses of her Will :—

Extract, comprising Clauses 13, 14 and 15, from the Will, dated the 10th July, 1936, of Mrs. Florence Joy Weldon, of No. 3, South Parks Road, Oxford, Widow.

“ 13. As to all the residue of my estate both real and personal not hereby or by any Codicil hereto otherwise disposed of I DEVISE AND BEQUEATH the same unto my Trustees UPON TRUST that they shall sell call in and convert into money such parts thereof as shall not consist of money or trust securities with power at their discretion to postpone such sale calling in and conversion of the whole or any part or parts of the said property and to retain the same or any part thereof in its existing form of investment without being responsible for loss for such period as they shall think proper and shall out of my ready money and the monies to arise from the sale calling in and conversion pay my funeral and testamentary expenses and debts and the pecuniary legacies bequeathed by this my Will or by any Codicil hereto and all death duties payable out of my general personal estate.

“ 14. “ 15. MY TRUSTEES shall out of the income of the Trust Fund pay to my sister Beatrice Hewetson Tebb an annuity of Two hundred pounds free of duty during her life to commence from my death and to be payable by equal quarterly payments the first payment to be made at the expiration of three calendar months from the date of my death And subject thereto my Trustees shall hold the Trust Fund UPON TRUST to found and endow in memory of my late Husband a Professorship of Biometry that is a Professorship for the higher statistical study of Biological problems AND I give to my Trustees full power in their absolute discretion to determine the terms and conditions of the Trust Deed by under or subject to which such Professorship shall be founded and endowed AND I DIRECT my Trustees to offer such Professorship in the first place to the University of London in the desire that it may be associated with University College and in the hope that the close friendship of my late Husband and the late Sir Francis Galton may be perpetuated in the active association of the Weldon and Galton Professors AND if the Professorship cannot be instituted at University College then at such other College of the University of London as my Trustees shall at their absolute discretion think fit AND should the Professorship not be accepted by the University of London then my Trustees shall offer the Professorship to such other University as they shall in their absolute discretion think fit AND I DESIRE that the University accepting such Professorship should in nominating their first Professor submit his name for the approval of my Trustees believing that they having a just appreciation of my late Husband’s work would only approve of a candidate who combined the knowledge of an enthusiasm for Biometric Science especially requisite to create a tradition for the new Professorship.”

IN Clause 15 of the Will Mrs. Weldon defines a Professorship of Biometry as a "Professorship for the higher statistical study of biological problems". The science of Biometry indeed the word itself is associated with the work of Francis Galton Walter Frank Raphael Weldon and Karl Pearson While much of the inspiration came from Galton who in his "Natural Inheritance" published in 1889 showed that he had grasped the important part that methods of statistical analysis might play in the solution of problems of inheritance and of evolution the rapid development of the subject was largely due to the collaboration of Weldon and of Pearson These two men became colleagues at University College upon Weldon's appointment in 1890 to the Jodrell Professorship of Zoology and though Weldon moved to Oxford in 1900 their friendship and scientific collaboration continued without a break until his early death at the age of 46 in 1906.

Breaking from the tradition in which he had been trained Weldon was one of the first biologists to realise the great opportunities that lay in the application of statistical methods to living forms. His completed contributions to science are contained in the publications of the Royal Society in Biometrika and other scientific journals while an account of his life and personality with its keen enthusiasm that characterised all his actions will be found in a Memoir by Karl Pearson, Biometrika V, 1906, pages 1-52.

During the 23 years of their married life, Florence Joy Weldon made many real contributions to her husband's work. She was his constant companion on the expeditions that he made both in England and on the Continent in search of zoological and botanical material for the study of evolution She herself undertook a large part of the work of counting measurement and arithmetical reduction of this biological data ; and she would often refer in later years to the days she spent with her husband in the tossing of coins and dice or the sorting of cards in connection with his research into the theory of probability After his death in 1906 she spent some two or three years on the reduction of his unfinished work and during thirty years up till her death continued to show an interest in Karl Pearson's Biometric Laboratory and in the journal of Biometrika which had been founded in 1901 by Galton Weldon and Pearson.

Ever since her husband's death Mrs. Weldon has had in mind the endowment of a chair of Biometry in commemoration of his work. Though the Will is only dated a few months before her death it is the repetition of earlier wills and the Trustees know that she consulted Karl Pearson on many occasions with regard to the subject ; she also discussed it several years ago with one of their number.

Knowing that the terms of the Will repeat those of an earlier Will, the Trustees would not feel themselves bound to adopt an interpretation that ignored subsequent extensions of the field of or changes in the attitude towards Biometry on the one hand or changes in the University arrangements on the other. In the latter connection the Trustees recall that in 1911 Galton left the residue of his estate to endow the Galton Chair of National Eugenics at University College, London ; that the first Professor was Karl Pearson who also continued to carry on his Biometric Laboratory already established there ; and that in 1933 on Pearson's retirement the University of London on the advice of University College decided to set up separate departments of Eugenics and Statistics but made no special reference to Biometry. The Trustees do not consider that Mrs. Weldon meant by her reference to "the active association of the Weldon and Galton Professors" (Clause 15) that she wished to tie those professorships together and they are therefore anxious that the wording of the Will should not give the University the impression that the Trustees would wish to limit on this point the freedom of the University or any Professor that may be appointed.

Finally, the Trustees think that the University may like to have some slight indication of the view that the Trustees may take as regards the first Professor. While they do not anticipate that any difficulty will arise or that they will be unable to approve a candidate recommended by the University they may mention that bearing in mind that Weldon was a Zoologist who subsequently looked for help to mathematics they themselves would specially welcome the appointment of a biologist who has become mathematical if such a person can be found rather than a mathematician turned biologist.

Wellcome Trustees—Chairs of Pharmacology and Tropical Medicine

[C.M. 32 of Oct. 1945 and 560 of May 1946]

During 1946 the Trustees of the estate of Mr. Henry S. Wellcome transferred to the University £66,660 Redemption 3 per cent. Stock 1986–96 (value at date of transference £74,333) to provide for a Chair of Pharmacology, tenable at the College of the Pharmaceutical Society. The income from the endowment is to be used to extend the opportunities afforded by the Department of Pharmacology for research in Pharmacology.

Impressed by the need for adequate opportunities for research and postgraduate teaching in London on the special problems presented by diseases in the tropics, the Trustees have also provided an endowment of £44,000 Savings Bonds 3 per cent. 1965–75 (value at date of transference £47,905) for a part-time Chair of Tropical Medicine tenable at present at the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine.

The clause defining the fields of research for which the Wellcome Trustees are authorised to make gifts or grants under their Trust is as follows :—

. . . for the advancement of research work bearing upon medicine surgery chemistry physiology bacteriology therapeutics materia medica pharmacy and allied subjects and any subject or subjects which have or at any time may develop an importance for scientific research which may conduce to the improvement of the physical conditions of mankind and in particular for the discovery invention and improvement of medicinal agents and methods for the prevention and cure of disorders and the control or extermination of insect and other pests which afflict human beings and animal and plant life in tropical and other regions and elsewhere. . . .

Westminster Abbey Service Committee

[S.M. 314 of Oct. 1919]

In 1920 the Westminster Abbey Service Committee provided a capital sum of £50 for the annual award of a Prize for Religious Knowledge at the General School Examination held at Midsummer each year. Only those pupils are eligible who take the Examination at a School within a radius of thirty miles from the University's Central Offices. The Prize consists of books to the value of £1 15s.

White Sociology Fund

[S.M. 2664 of June 1907]

By Indenture dated 21st September, 1907, Mr. Martin White gave the sum of £10,000 for the foundation of a permanent Chair in Sociology.

[The particulars of the Trust Deed and of other benefactions are set out in the Second Issue of the Historical Record, pp. 15–17.]

Zaharoff Chair of Aviation

[S.M. 2318/20 of March 1923]

In 1917 Sir Basil Zaharoff placed the sum of £25,000 at the disposal of the Government for the purpose of founding a Chair of Aviation. The Government transferred this sum to the University, which established a Zaharoff Chair of Aviation, tenable at the Imperial College of Science and Technology, and the income of the fund, now about £1,215, is paid over to the College for the purpose.

REPORT BY THE PRINCIPAL

ON THE WORK OF THE UNIVERSITY DURING THE YEAR 1948-49

INTRODUCTION

It was only natural that, having passed safely through the first year of the first post-war quinquennium, we should have looked forward to a period when the energies of the University could be largely concentrated on the execution of its post-war development plans. To a certain extent this hope has been realised in 1948-49, but it is also true to say that during the past year the University has been occupied in dealing with problems which hitherto had tended to remain in the background—problems largely affecting the relations between the University and the outside world.

Of these, perhaps the most important concerns the new school examination which the Minister of Education is introducing in 1951 to take the place of the School Certificate and Higher School Certificate Examinations. The main problem facing the University has been to define the conditions upon which this new General Certificate of Education could be accepted as granting exemption from matriculation requirements, and this in turn has necessitated a reconsideration of matriculation requirements generally which had already come under criticism even before the war. In framing the new requirements we have had the benefit of consultations with representatives of the Schools and of the Associations of teachers. The final scheme probably satisfies no one person or body completely, for it is the result of a compromise in reaching which there has been a fair amount of give and take on all sides. The position will be reviewed after the new scheme has been in operation five years.

If we are partly out of the wood on this matter, the same cannot yet be said about the problem of devising the best arrangements for giving financial assistance from public funds to enable properly qualified students to come to universities. Unlike the question of matriculation, this is a matter which falls primarily within the jurisdiction of the Ministry of Education and Local Education Authorities. In view, however, of the rising cost of a university education and of the changing social and economic conditions in this country, the number of students who can find from private sources the money for a university education is rapidly decreasing. It needs no further argument to show that universities are vitally interested in the methods whereby public funds are made available for this purpose. The matter has been brought to a head by the Report of the Working Party set up by the Minister of Education which recommends, among other things, a large extension of the number of awards made by Local Education Authorities. This, together with the effect of the age bar on eligibility to sit for the new school examination, will necessitate a reconsideration of the arrangements for admitting students to universities, quite apart from the complications which result from the adoption of the period of 18 months as the term of compulsory national service for young men.

The inauguration of the National Health Service has inevitably been attended by teething troubles. Quite apart from the impact on university salaries generally which resulted from the acceptance in principle by the Government of the recommendations of the Spens Committee, a matter to which I shall refer later in this Report, there have been other problems. The list of hospitals designated for teaching purposes has not proved entirely satisfactory in practice and negotiations are on foot with the aim of trying to bring a limited number of additional hospitals under the teaching umbrella. Profound dissatisfaction has been felt on all sides at the regulations governing the appointment of specialists in so far as they apply to teaching hospitals and strict adherence to those regulations when clinical chairs and readerships are being filled raises questions of principle which must be faced. The University and the Ministry of Health do not as yet see eye to eye on other clinical appointments, particularly those of registrars who play a vital role in London teaching hospitals. We sincerely hope that these and other difficulties can be readily cleared up. It seems sometimes to be forgotten that the regional organisation of the hospital system hinges on the teaching hospital and university medical school, and, moreover, that the future of the National Health Service depends largely on the quantity and quality of the doctors who receive their training at university medical schools. There is therefore sound reason for urging that the administrative arrangements relating to teaching hospitals may well have to differ from those governing the mass of hospitals falling under the Regional Boards.

Perhaps the most difficult of all problems with which universities as a whole are faced to-day—and the position in London is more acute than elsewhere—is the proper organisation of technological studies. I do not wish in this Report to enter into the controversy, but even if universities are the proper institutions for teaching the rank and file technologist, which is not admitted, there is a further consideration to be borne in mind. Perhaps I may be permitted to recall a phrase from my Report last year. "There is a natural tendency for universities to be asked to take on additional responsibilities, for the university hall-mark to be much sought after . . . If too many obligations are assumed the quality of the [university] contribution must suffer." In order to accommodate the post-war flood of students, universities generally have stretched their resources to the utmost and need a substantial period in which to consolidate their position, for the increase in their student numbers has not yet been accompanied by a corresponding increase in their buildings and equipment. Any further load thrust upon them cannot but have a depressing effect on university standards generally and once standards are lowered it is practically impossible to restore them. It will be no gain to the country as a whole if the rise in the status of technological studies is achieved, not by improving the standard of existing technological instruction, but by dragging down university standards.

FINANCE

A year ago the main financial pattern for the quinquennium 1947-52 could be described as "reasonably clear" with the settlement on a quinquennial basis of the recurrent block grant for general purposes from the University Grants Committee. The special earmarked grants for medical and dental education, social sciences, Oriental and African studies, Slavonic and East European studies, and agricultural education were, however, fixed only for 1947-48. All these grants, except the last, which has been raised from £20,000 to £30,000 for the present year, have now been assessed for the remainder of the quinquennium. The recurrent grants for medical and dental education, which were £946,500 and £54,900 in 1947-48, have been fixed at £1,071,000 and £74,000 respectively for 1948-49 and rise by instalments to £1,594,000 and £112,000 in 1951-52. The social science grants, which are earmarked for the London School of Economics, Bedford College and University College, rise from £39,750 in 1948-49 to £118,650 in 1951-52. The grant for the School of Oriental and African Studies, which was £50,000 last year, rises to £95,000 in 1948-49 and to £142,000 in 1951-52. In the case of the School of Slavonic and East European Studies, which received £10,000 in 1947-48, the figures for 1948-49 and 1951-52 are £12,500 and £20,000 respectively. Taking all these recurrent grants together, the total received by the Court for maintenance purposes from the U.G.C. last year was £2,912,500; it is £3,209,180 this year and will total £4,146,350 in 1951-52, with a further grant still to be announced for agriculture. In addition, special grants have been promised to encourage work on certain scientific subjects such as mineral dressing, geometrical optics, applied entomology and taxonomy.

As was foreshadowed in my Report last year, the Home Counties and County Boroughs have now agreed to revise completely the scale of their financial assistance to the University. Against a total of £22,140 received from this source in 1947-48, the figure for 1948-49 is £133,000 and next year the grant may rise to £143,000. The University is deeply grateful for this timely assistance which has enabled the Court to make substantial additional grants to a number of schools who were finding that, owing to the steady rise in prices since the quinquennial estimates were drawn up at the end of 1946, additional grants received from the U.G.C. were being used, not for developments, but to meet the increased cost of existing commitments. The London County Council has now agreed in principle to revert to the quinquennial assessment of its block grant. The figure for 1948-49 is the same as for the preceding year, viz., £175,000, but the Court are not without hope that the grants for the remaining three years of the quinquennium may be higher than this.

Despite these notable reinforcements of the University's financial strength, it must not be thought that income is no longer a matter of prime importance. Hitherto, lack of teaching accommodation and, to a lesser extent, shortage of well qualified candidates for the many new posts waiting to be filled, has seriously delayed progress, but I anticipate that over the last three years of the quinquennium the rate of expenditure on teaching developments will rise steeply. The grants now promised, generous though they are, will be barely sufficient to meet the cost of doing all that urgently needs to be done, without leaving a margin for other projected developments of undoubted academic importance.

The acceptance in principle by the Government of the recommendations of the Spens Committee on the Remuneration of Consultants and Specialists under the National Health Service has had its expected repercussions on academic salaries, not merely in the medical field but also in all other departments. The University was most reluctant, in view of the Government's policy for stabilizing wages, to press for a revision of salary scales in the middle of a quinquennium even though it had become painfully clear that the scales adopted by the University in 1946 were no longer adequate. The University Grants Committee and the Treasury have with equal reluctance accepted the representations made by the universities in this matter and it is expected that supplementary grants will be announced shortly which will enable the University to introduce limited increases in salary scales.

The University's programme of capital expenditure has once again received magnificent support from the University Grants Committee, who this year have allocated to the University no less than £1,887,000 for capital purposes. Amongst the larger new projects which have received financial approval are the purchase from the Pharmaceutical Society of their unfinished building in Brunswick Square, the construction of new Physics and Engineering laboratories underneath the quadrangle of King's College, the reconstruction of the Main (Herringham) Block at Bedford College, the addition of a new teaching wing at the Royal Free Hospital School of Medicine, and the erection of a students' block at St. Bartholomew's Hospital Medical College providing residential and refectory facilities, which constitutes the first stage in the reconstruction of the Charterhouse Square buildings. These are only a few of the outstanding instances out of a wide range of projects involving almost every school and every activity of the University.

Progress has been made on many other projects in respect of which capital grants were promised in earlier years. Perhaps the most important is the negotiation of a provisional contract for the acquisition of the remaining interests of the Bedford Estate in the University College rectangle. Agreement has been reached on the purchase of a large block of houses to provide residential accommodation for students of St. Mary's Hospital Medical School. Work on the new Birkbeck building is going on apace and noticeable progress is at last being made on the repair of air-raid damage at University College and the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine. By a remarkable effort on the part of all concerned, the Oliver Block at Bedford College was reconstructed in time for the opening of the October session, thus providing much needed dining-room facilities and extra teaching accommodation.

The problem of residential facilities is still with us. It is gratifying to note that the Lodgings Bureau is finding it easier to provide accommodation of the right type for our students though prices remain high. Plans for more halls of residence are very slow in coming to fruition, but I am pleased to be able to announce that a new university hostel, Nutford House, which will accommodate 125 women students, will be opening next term. Wye College is making steady progress with its new hostel for women students, Swanley Hall, while the London School of Economics has been fortunate enough to find alternative premises for its men's hostel at very short notice after the emergency hostel in Cartwright Gardens had been condemned as unsafe by the District Surveyor.

BENEFACTIONS

The University has continued to receive generous support from both public and private benefactors.

The facilities at the Courtauld Institute of Art have been notably increased under the will of the late Mr. Samuel Courtauld who bequeathed to the Home House Trustees, for the benefit of the Institute, a most valuable collection of paintings, drawings and prints to be added to those which he had already given in his lifetime. The University has also gratefully accepted an offer from Mr. T. H. Gambier-Parry to bequeath his collection of Italian primitives and other works of art for exhibition in the new building of the Courtauld Institute to be erected on the Bloomsbury Site. This collection will be an ideal supplement to that of the late Lord Lee, which, as was reported last year, is to be handed over to the University when the new building is complete.

The Institute of Education has received a further grant of $7,900 from the Carnegie Corporation, in continuation of the grant of $3,000 made for the session 1947-48, to facilitate the secondment to the Institute of an American lecturer experienced in the education of the negro population. The enlarged grant made for the session 1948-49 has made it possible to extend the scope of the project and much valuable work is being done.

The Rockefeller Foundation has shown its continued interest in the work of the University and its Schools by grants to Birkbeck College of $20,000 towards the cost of constructing an electronic computer, to University College of $4,000 for the purchase of books and other materials for the development of Latin-American studies, and to Imperial College and the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine of $27,200 to encourage the development of graduate training in Public Health Engineering. The University has received, in common with other universities, allocations from the Fund of $50,000 placed at the disposal of the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals "for the purchase of foreign books and journals for special programs in humanities and social sciences." This benefaction, $7,500, will be used largely for the purchase of American books which are difficult to obtain owing to currency restrictions.

Two awards of great value to the work of the Schools have been made by the Nuffield Foundation, the first being a grant of £4,000 per annum for five years to Imperial College in aid of expenditure on research work in Extraction Metallurgy, and the second a grant of £20,000 over ten years to the Institute of Psychiatry for the study of student selection.

SCHOOLS AND INSTITUTIONS

In January 1949 the Senate resolved that an Institute of Commonwealth Studies should be established with its headquarters temporarily at No. 27 Russell Square. A Committee of Management has been constituted and steps are being taken to appoint a full-time Director of the Institute. It is hoped that the Institute will act as the focal point of the many activities in the University relating to the Dominions and Colonies of which mention need be made here only of the relationship with University Colleges in the Colonies, which is dealt with in more detail in a later part of this report, and the Devonshire Scheme for the training of officers for the Colonial Civil Service.

Revised Schemes of Management for the School of Slavonic and East European Studies and the Institute of Historical Research were approved during the year. The University was consulted about the terms of a private Bill for the incorporation of Royal Holloway College, which is now under consideration by the House of Lords.

In accordance with the recommendation of the Inspectors appointed to report on the Department of Law at the School of Oriental and African Studies, the School has been admitted, for a period of five years in the first instance, as a School of the University in the Faculty of Laws as providing courses of study for Higher Degrees in the field of Oriental Laws.

The Medical Schools entered on a new chapter of their long history with the coming into force of the National Health Service Act in July 1948. St. Bartholomew's Hospital Medical College and the Royal Free Hospital School of Medicine already possessed charters of their own. The remaining ten undergraduate Medical Schools and the School of Dental Surgery also became separate legal entities on the "appointed day." The legal divorce has not, however, had any effect on the close relations between Medical Schools and Teaching Hospitals which have continued on a most cordial basis. The University is represented both on the councils of its Medical Schools and on the Boards of Governors of each of the associated Teaching Hospitals.

The National Health Service Act has brought many new responsibilities to the University. At the request of the Ministry of Health, names were suggested for membership of the four Metropolitan Regional Hospital Boards. The University is represented on Advisory Committees for the appointment of specialists, on local medical committees for the training of assistants to general medical practitioners and on professional committees set up to advise Regional Hospital Boards on assessment of the status of their existing staffs. As a result a considerable additional burden has fallen on many members of our Faculty of Medicine and for their service as University representatives on these committees the University is deeply grateful.

The British Postgraduate Medical Federation is now responsible for 11 specialised institutes. In addition to the Postgraduate Medical School at Hammersmith, there are two new fully federated Institutes, the Institute of Psychiatry, hitherto a School of the University under the title of the Maudsley Hospital, and the Institute of Laryngology and Otology which is associated with the Royal National Throat, Nose and Ear Hospital. It is anticipated that the Institutes of Ophthalmology and Child Health, which are associated with the Royal Moorfields Hospital and the Hospital for Sick Children respectively, will also reach this stage of development before the end of the present session. The other associated institutes are being built on firm foundations, each of them being attached to specialist hospitals from which wholehearted support has been received since the "appointed day."

An interesting example of co-operation between medical and non-medical schools can be seen in the joint research scheme planned by the Institute of Education and the Institute of Child Health. Premises have been obtained adjoining the existing nursery school in Coram's Fields on the Foundling Estate and an investigation of the mental and physical development of the children who pass through the school is being undertaken. It is hoped that an extensive scheme of "following up" will be brought into operation as the children at present under observation leave the nursery school and go elsewhere.

After negotiations lasting nearly two years, the reconstitution of the College of the Pharmaceutical Society was completed in May. It is hoped that the College, under its new title of the School of Pharmacy, will maintain and in the future extend its well merited reputation for training highly qualified pharmacists. The University has been fortunate enough to be able to purchase the partly completed new building of the Pharmaceutical Society in Brunswick Square on which work ceased in 1940, and it is intended to complete this building at the earliest possible date. A substantial portion of it will be used to provide new premises for the School of Pharmacy, and the remainder for university examinations.

The decennial Senate inspections had, of necessity, to be discontinued during the war years but, since their resumption in 1947, it has been planned to complete the whole programme in approximately four and a half years in order that the reports may be available when the development policy of the University for the quinquennium 1952-57 is being considered. Inspections of Schools by the Senate have therefore continued at an accelerated rate, and 17 inspections were arranged during the year. These inspections included visits to all the Schools of the University in the Faculties of Laws and to the majority of Schools in the Faculties of Arts and Science. The Inspectors have been greatly impressed by the work which is being done in the Schools in spite of the inadequacy of accommodation and the need for additional buildings, and have made many suggestions which are being considered by the University and the Schools concerned.

There have again, most happily, been few changes among the Heads of Schools and Institutions during the year. In my last Report I recorded the death of Professor Saxl, Director of the Warburg Institute. The University has been fortunate in that Professor H. Frankfort, Professor of Oriental Archæology at the Oriental Institute, Chicago, has accepted an invitation to the post of Director at the Institute and the Senate has conferred upon him the title of Professor of the History of Pre-Classical Antiquity. Sir Richard Southwell resigned the Rectorship of Imperial College last summer, and Sir Roderic Hill, who has had a brilliant career in the Air Force both in the operational and administrative spheres, has succeeded him. We extend to both of them a welcome which is all the more warm because they are not entirely strangers to the University. Professor Frankfort was at an earlier stage unofficially associated with the Warburg Institute while Sir Roderic Hill is the son of a former Vice-Chancellor.

During the year the Senate have conferred the title of Professor Emeritus on 18 Professors who have given distinguished service to the University. One of them, Professor Sir Stanley Marchant, died only two months ago, and a reference to his services to the University will be made later in this Report.

Professor A. B. Appleton was appointed to the Chair of Anatomy at St. Thomas's Hospital Medical School in 1934. He was Hunterian Professor of the Royal College of Surgeons in 1944, and President of the Anatomical Society of Great Britain and Ireland.

Professor O. L. V. S. de Wesselow was Professor of Medicine at St. Thomas's Hospital Medical School from 1920 to 1948, and Head of the Medical Unit, St. Thomas's Hospital. He was Croonian Lecturer at the Royal College of Physicians in 1934.

Professor Sir Alexander Fleming, F.R.S., was Professor of Bacteriology at St. Mary's Hospital Medical School from 1928 to 1948. His outstanding contributions to the advancement of learning in his subject have been recognised throughout the world and he holds the Nobel Laureateship in Medicine. The University has already paid tribute to his scholarship by conferring upon him the Honorary Degree of Doctor of Science.

Professor Sir Francis Fraser was Professor of Medicine at St. Bartholomew's Hospital Medical College from 1920 to 1934 and Professor of Medicine at the British Postgraduate Medical School until 1946, when he became the first Director of the British Postgraduate Medical Federation. He has rendered unique services in the development of postgraduate studies in the field of medicine in its widest sense. He still plays a prominent part in University affairs and this session is serving a second term of office as Deputy Vice-Chancellor.

Professor F. E. Fritsch, F.R.S., became Professor of Botany at Queen Mary College in 1924. Among the many distinctions gained in recognition of his work in his particular field are Fellowships of several Foreign Associations as well as his Fellowship of the Royal Society. He took more than his fair share of the burden of University administration and yet he was always willing to give extra help in moments of need. We are not losing his services entirely, for he has agreed to retain his membership of a few university bodies.

Professor D. T. Harris was Professor of Physiology at the London Hospital Medical College from 1932 to 1948. The holder of the Sharpey Scholarship in 1919 and the Beit Memorial Research Fellowship in 1920, he was Senior Assistant and later Assistant Professor in the Institute of Physiology at University College immediately prior to his appointment as Professor at the London Hospital Medical College.

Professor Frank Horton, F.R.S., was Professor of Physics at Royal Holloway College from 1914 to 1946 and was Staff Governor from 1940 to 1946. He has also played a leading part in University affairs over a long period, and was Vice-Chancellor during the war years 1939 to 1945. We are glad still to have the benefit of his wide experience both on the Court and on the Senate.

Professor H. Gordon Jackson was appointed Reader in Zoology at Birkbeck College in 1921 and in 1928 the title of Professor was conferred upon him. During his tenure of office the Department of Zoology at the College has grown both in size and importance. He became Master of Birkbeck College in 1943 and he takes an active part in University affairs, above all as Chairman of the Collegiate Council.

Professor T. B. Johnston, C.B.E., was appointed Professor of Anatomy at Guy's Hospital Medical School in 1919. In his later years he was Superintendent of Guy's Hospital and did much to strengthen the already close relationship between School and Hospital for which Guy's is so renowned.

Professor Hilda Johnstone joined the academic staff of the University in 1913, when she was appointed Reader in History at King's College for Women. In 1922 she was appointed to the Chair of History at Royal Holloway College and was Staff Governor from 1927 to 1930. She also took an active part in the postgraduate work of the Institute of Historical Research.

Professor W. Neilson Jones held the Hildred Carlile Chair of Botany at Bedford College from 1920 to 1948. He joined the staff of the College in 1913 and became Head of the Botany Department in 1916. The study and teaching of his subject were reinforced by an understanding of many parts of the world, the result both of wide travel and of appreciation of literature and the arts.

Professor C. H. Lobban has been associated with King's College since 1920, when he joined the staff as Lecturer in Civil Engineering. In 1935 he was appointed to the Chair of Civil Engineering and became Head of the Department of Civil and Mechanical Engineering at the College in 1937. He was well known in the practical, as well as the academic field, and acted as Consulting Engineer in connection with many buildings, including those of the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine.

Professor T. S. Moore was Professor of Chemistry at Royal Holloway College from 1914 to 1946, and was a Staff Governor for two periods, 1922 to 1925 and 1934 to 1940. He has been a leading member of the Chemical Society and Chairman of its Publication Committee.

Professor J. H. Sleeman was Professor of Classics at Royal Holloway College from 1922 until 1946. He was Staff Governor of the College for the years 1925 to 1928. He served the University well as Chairman of his Board of Studies and of the Board of Examiners in Classics and used his considerable influence to promote high standards of classical scholarship.

Professor M. T. Smiley was Professor of Greek at University College from 1925 to 1948. He is well known among classical scholars for his research on Callimachus and on late Greek epic poetry.

Professor H. A. Smith held the Chair of International Law at the London School of Economics from 1928 to 1946. He had a distinguished career as a university teacher of Law both in this country and in Canada, where earlier he had been Professor of Jurisprudence and Professor of Constitutional Law at McGill University.

Professor Ida Ward, C.B.E., held the title of Professor of West African Languages for only a short period of four years from 1944, but she had been a Reader since 1930. She has made a distinguished contribution to the advancement of learning in her subject and her services have been constantly sought by the various Governments in West Africa and by the Colonial Office.

Institute of Education—Area Training Scheme.—During the past year the Scheme for the enlarged Institute of Education, to which I referred in my last Report, has come into operation. Twenty-six institutions have been admitted as Constituent Colleges and Departments of the Institute, and seven further applications are under consideration. A Provisional Council of the Institute has been set up, consisting of representatives of the University, Local Education Authorities, Heads of Constituent Colleges and Departments of the Institute, Teachers of the Institute, practising teachers, and other interested bodies. The necessary administrative machinery is being built up and it is hoped that the Institute will soon be in a position to make an effective contribution to the training of teachers throughout the Area for which it is responsible. This comprises the Counties of East Sussex, Essex (with the exception of the divisions of Mid Essex and North East Essex), Kent, London, Middlesex and Surrey, and the County Boroughs of Brighton, Canterbury, Croydon, Eastbourne, East Ham, West Ham, Hastings and Southend. In December last about 400 teachers in the Training Colleges associated with the Institute were able to meet together for the first time at the Senate House to discuss the aims and content of teacher training. As part of its programme, the Institute proposes to arrange lectures and courses, including residential courses, for practising teachers to supplement the existing provision made by other bodies which operate within the Area.

The eager interest and willing co-operation which has been forthcoming from all those concerned in the early and necessarily difficult stages of its inauguration promises well for the success of the scheme.

Higher Education in the Colonies.—During the year under review considerable progress has been made in the development of the special relationship between the University and the Colonial Colleges. It will be remembered that Gordon Memorial College, Khartoum, University College, Ibadan, Nigeria, and the University College of the West Indies are already in special relationship with the University, and this year has seen the addition of a fourth, the University College of the Gold Coast. Throughout the year further preliminary negotiations have continued with the Principal and members of the staff of Makerere College, Uganda. The closest co-operation has also been maintained with the Inter-University Council for Higher Education in the Colonies.

The University's responsibilities have increased not only on account of the additional colleges now seeking its assistance, but also by the increase in the range of matters on which advice is sought. For example, discussions have taken place on the development of departments of agriculture, laws and engineering at Gordon College. The recognition of the Medical Schools in West Africa and the West Indies with a view to students from those areas being permitted to proceed to degrees of the University of London in medicine has also received careful consideration. The stage has also been reached when more detailed proposals from the Colonial University Colleges relating to their academic programmes have been considered, and this has in turn meant much work for Boards of Studies and Boards of Faculties. The Colonial Office also asked the University to undertake a detailed review of the plans for the teaching hospital of the University College of the West Indies.

As a natural consequence of this expansion, arrangements have been made for the conduct of further special examinations. I referred last year to the first examination held under the scheme of special relationship at Gordon Memorial College. This examination was a preliminary examination on the results of which successful students could matriculate in the University of London under a scheme already approved by the Senate. This year the first intermediate examinations in Arts and Science were held at that College with satisfactory results. In West Africa the first entrance examination for students wishing to enter University College, Ibadan, was held in March and over 600 candidates presented themselves. In addition, arrangements have been made for the conduct of a first examination for Medical Degrees in the West Indies. In all these examinations members of the academic staff of the colleges concerned shared in the setting of the papers and the marking of scripts under the direct supervision of university examiners.

To develop this scheme of special relationship it has been essential to establish personal contact between the teachers of the nascent University Colleges and members of the University, and every effort has been made to make this possible. In most cases members of the University have acted as assessors in the appointment of senior staff to the Colonial Colleges, and in the Faculty of Medicine of the University College of the West Indies all appointments are made on the recommendation of Boards of Advisors set up by the University. Throughout the session the Principals and teachers of the Colleges have visited London, and whenever possible have attended meetings of the Senate Committee on Higher Education in the Colonies as well as meeting other appropriate senior members of the University. These discussions have always proved most fruitful and many expressions of gratitude have been received from those who by this means have received assistance.

At the same time members of the University have taken the opportunity of visiting the Colleges and discussing local problems on the spot. Professor Penson has again visited Gordon Memorial College, as have Professor S. J. Davies and Mr. Skilbeck. Professor Bellot and Mr. Skilbeck have visited West Africa and Mr. Worsley and Professor Lucas Keene are about to go. Professor Stead will shortly visit Jamaica as one of the examiners for the First Examination for Medical Degrees. Arrangements have been made in conjunction with the Inter-University Council for a visit to East Africa, and Sir Alexander Carr-Saunders and Mr. Worsley have been included in the delegation.

This particular aspect of the work of the University is an enterprise of paramount importance and one in which the University should take a great pride.

Library.—About 19,000 volumes have been added to the Library, bringing the total to over 450,000. These figures do not, however, include Parliamentary Papers, maps and unpublished theses, and the total stock of the Library and Travelling Libraries is therefore approximately 500,000 volumes. The main developments continue to be in the arts subjects but at the same time there is some increase in the additions to the scientific, medical and engineering sections. The policy of making the Library strong generally in dictionaries, encyclopædias, bibliographies and other reference works has been continued by the addition of many notable works of this kind. There have been several gifts of valuable and important books. By the will of the late Mr. Harry Price, who died during the year, the Harry Price library of some 20,000 books on psychic phenomena, magic and allied subjects, which had been held on loan since 1937, was bequeathed to the Library. Mrs. A. Stroud Read has sent to the Library, in continuation of her former gifts accepted by the University in 1941 and 1942, a collection of about 330 volumes from the library of her husband, the late Mr. F. Stroud Read. The collection consists of works on history and travel and includes several volumes in fine bindings. In view of her long-continued generosity to the Library, the Senate resolved that a special expression of the gratitude of the University should be conveyed to Mrs. Stroud Read. Mrs. Rye has given about 400 books on Egyptology as a memorial to her husband, the late Reginald Arthur Rye, Goldsmiths' Librarian from 1906 to 1944.

In all, over 97,000 volumes have been issued on loan and the heavy demands on the reading room continue to emphasise the necessity for additional accommodation for readers. Several exhibitions of rare books have been held and books have been lent for exhibitions elsewhere, notably to the National Book League. A special grant received from the University Grants Committee has enabled some headway to be made in clearing off the arrears of binding which have accumulated during the war years, and further progress has also been made possible by the creation of a small bindery in the Library itself.

A most notable development has been in the work of the Travelling Libraries. Although the increase in libraries supplied to Tutorial Classes was only from 197 to 206, the libraries sent to Extension courses increased from 94 to 204 and a total of 29,541 books was issued.

War damage repairs to the building and re-decoration have been in progress during most of the session, and have necessitated the temporary closing of some of the reading rooms. Work has also begun on the repair and completion of the upper part of the tower, which will be used as book-stacks.

Special Lectures.—A full programme of special lectures was arranged during the year. The number of courses and single lectures was 49, while the total number of lectures delivered was 109. Many distinguished scholars from overseas accepted invitations to lecture and their presence in London afforded opportunities for useful contacts with their colleagues in the different Faculties. Lecturers came to the University from Belgium, Canada, Denmark, France, Holland, Italy, Norway, Portugal, Sweden, Switzerland and the United States of America. Of the lectures established under trust funds, the Creighton Lecture was given by Dr. G. N. Clark on "The Cycle of War and Peace in Modern History." The third Stamp Memorial Lecture was delivered by Professor H. A. Innis on "The Press—A Neglected Factor in Economic Development since 1900." The Semon Lecture was given by Mr. G. Ewart Martin on "Broncho-Œsophagology in Great Britain—The Decline of a Science: a plea for better co-operation and teaching." The Ethel M. Wood Lecture was delivered by Lord Elton on "Some reflections on the Bible in History." The first of the lectures established by Dr. T. H. Sanderson-Wells was delivered by Sir John (now Lord) Boyd-Orr on "Soil Fertility—The Wasting Basis of Human Society." A course of lectures on Linguistic Geography was given by Professor E. Blancquaert, of the University of Ghent, under the scheme for the interchange of British and Belgian Lecturers, sponsored by the Belgian Government and the British Council.

Studentships and Scholarships.—During the year under review the number and value of scholarships and studentships awarded by the University again reached a new record. The policy of devoting funds specially for postgraduate work has been continued and 121 postgraduate studentships and fellowships have been awarded of the total value of over £30,000. Of these, 43 studentships were awarded to candidates at Final Examinations, three for students travelling abroad and 13 special prizes and medals were also awarded. The University is greatly indebted to all those teachers of the University who have given unsparingly of their time in dealing with the large field of applicants for these awards. Under the scheme set up during last year for the exchange with France of postgraduate students in the Faculty of Science, two French students have studied in the University and one English student has been sent to France. During the year an offer was received from the University of Western Ontario of three Fellowships to be awarded annually, one in the Natural Sciences, one in the Humanities or Social Sciences, and one in the Medical Sciences, to be held in the University of Western Ontario by graduates of this University desiring to work in Canada and who are already in receipt of a scholarship or fellowship. It is hoped to recommend students for these fellowships for the session 1949-50. Students came to the various Schools of the University under the scheme whereby graduates of the University of New Brunswick are awarded Scholarships by Lord Beaverbrook for the purpose of studying in London for a period of one year.

Research Grants.—The great amount of individual research carried out in the University is again reflected in the demands made on the Research Fund. During the year over £13,000 was granted to 126 research workers distributed over the different Faculties as follows : Theology 1 ; Arts 58 ; Medicine 17 ; Science 41 ; Engineering 7 ; Economics 2.

Publication Fund.—Facilities for publication have improved during the session and more applications have been submitted than in recent years. Seven publications have been subsidised to the extent of £1,600.

Internal Students.—Again the number of applications for admission to the Schools and Institutions of the University has far exceeded the places available. The Authorities have, however, made every effort to admit as many students as possible. The total number of Internal Students in 1947-48 was 20,405, an increase of over 2,000 on the previous year. While figures for 1948-49 are not yet complete, it is estimated that there will be a further increase and that the final figure should reach 23,000.

The classification of students as "internal students" is not one with which persons outside the University are normally very familiar ; it includes students following degree courses at Institutions with Recognised Teachers, whereas the statistics compiled by the University Grants Committee relate only to students at Senate Institutions and at the 28 grant-receiving Schools. On the other hand, the U.G.C. statistics cover all full-time students taking courses of a university standard whether they are reading for degrees of this University or not, and therefore include, for example, clinical students at London Medical Schools who are registered for degrees at Oxford and Cambridge, and who are therefore not "internal students." As most discussions about student numbers are based on the statistics of the University Grants Committee, it may be of assistance to give the comparable figures for London. The 1947-48 returns, the latest available, show a total for London of 16,612 full-time students, an increase of 1,213 over the 1946-47 total of 15,399 and of 3,421 over the 1938-39 total of 13,191. The number of medical and dental students was, however, only 5,313 in 1947-48 against 5,742 in 1938-39, so that in the other Faculties there has been an increase in students from 7,449 in 1938-39 to 11,299 in 1947-48, or nearly 52 per cent.

The system of reserving a proportion of entry places for ex-service personnel, provided that they possessed the necessary educational qualifications, continued in 1948-49, but the percentage was reduced from 90 to 80 by agreement with the Ministry of Labour. This meant a slight increase in the places available for boys coming direct from school. The extension of the period of National Service from 12 to 18 months will cause considerable difficulty in 1950 and thereafter, for it will mean in many cases a gap of two years between leaving school and entry to the university for those who do their military service before coming up. Efforts to remedy this awkward situation have so far proved fruitless and, in view of the recent relaxation of the conditions upon which deferment will be granted, it is probable that many more boys will come direct from school to the university and do their National Service thereafter. The system of reserving a quota of places for ex-service personnel will be discontinued from the end of this session, but the University of London has given an undertaking, in common with all other universities, to see that justice is done as far as possible in the consideration of applications for admission from ex-service personnel.

External Students.-On the External side, the increase in the number of students has continued. The number of registered students was 27,380, compared with 23,289 in 1947. In addition, 2,532 students sat for Intermediate Examinations at Overseas centres, and as such students are not required to register as External Students at this stage, this figure the grand total of External Students is 29,912, nearly three times the total ten years ago.

Of these students, 3,709 are at provincial University Colleges, 8,800 at Technical Colleges in London and the Provinces, 6,400 study by means of correspondence courses and 2,735 study privately. The remainder are students in Schools, Training Colleges and other Institutions at home and overseas.

The number of candidates for examinations showed a similar increase, the total being 14,998 compared with 11,825 in 1947. Of these candidates nearly 2,000 were from the provincial University Colleges, nearly 6,000 studied at Technical Colleges, about 3,000 studied by correspondence and 1,500 studied privately. The remainder again is made up of students at Schools, Training Colleges and other Institutions at home and overseas. There is no indication at present that the post-war increase of External Students has reached its limit.

Vacation courses for External Students in Latin, French and Experimental Psychology were held during the Easter and Summer vacations, and are becoming a regular feature of the External Department. These courses were all conducted by teachers of the University, and the course on Experimental Psychology was given in the Psychology Department of University College. Plans are being made to hold a vacation course in France in the summer of 1949 under the direction of teachers of the University.

Extra-Mural Work.—The work of the Department as a whole has shown a considerable increase as compared with the previous year and with pre-war years. A significant feature has been the further development of close and cordial relations with the Local Education Authorities which now have a statutory responsibility for fostering all forms of further education within their areas. At the same time widening contacts have been made with other bodies interested in having courses of a University standard.

The number of University Extension Courses has grown by more than 70 per cent. over the previous year, the total of 236 Courses consisting of 117 Diploma, 43 Sessional, 34 Terminal, 38 short and pioneer, and four residential Courses. The range of subjects and the variety of Courses are greater, while the distribution of the work is more evenly spread through the extra-mural area of the University than ever before. An Extension Summer School was organised for the first time. More than 1,200 students entered for Examinations, and over 1,100 Diplomas and Certificates were awarded. The University Extension Association of students and lecturers has been revived during the year, and a number of functions have been held.

The number of Tutorial and Sessional Classes has grown from 180 in the previous year to a total of 187 this year, of which 105 are Three-Year Tutorial Classes. The continuing revival of the Tutorial Class in London has been a gratifying feature, the percentage of Tutorials rising from 27 in 1945-46 to 56 in 1948-49. There has been a corresponding development of residential courses, including Weekend Schools and two Summer Schools. The good quality of the work has been fully maintained. In this connection, a conference of part-time tutors was held in October, followed by a Training Course for the less experienced tutors, conducted by the Academic Advisor for Tutorial Classes, assisted by a number of the Staff Tutors.

The vocational side of the Department's work has continued to be most active. The number of registrations for the various Diplomas and Certificates has remained at the general post-war high level. In co-operation with the National Association for Mental Health, a second course has been arranged for Local Authority officials transferred to mental health duties under the National Health Service Act, and three more courses have been arranged for Local Authority medical officers dealing with educationally sub-normal children and mental defectives. The thirty-fourth Holiday Course in English for Foreign Students was held during the summer vacation and was attended by over 200 students from nearly 30 different countries. A Practical Course for the Natural History Certificate was also held during the summer vacation, at Constable's Flatford Mill, now a Centre of the Council for the Promotion of Field Studies. Inspections of Physical Education Diploma Courses at Colleges at Dartford, Eastbourne, Liverpool and Nonington have been carried out. Advisory Committees are engaged in reviewing the regulations for the Dramatic Art, Nursing, Psychological Medicine, Public Administration and Sister-Tutor's Diplomas.

The Centre for Courses in International Affairs organised a most successful six weeks' residential summer course in Contemporary English Literature, attended by some 150 students, most of whom were drawn from the United States. In addition, courses of evening lectures have been arranged in co-operation with the Institute of Bankers on "The Sterling Area," and "Western Union," and both courses have been well attended. The study group on Parliamentary Government has continued to meet throughout the year.

Two students holding Adult Scholarships awarded by the University Extension and Tutorial Classes Council have gained the Certificate in Social Science and Administration awarded by the London School of Economics and Political Science, and a third student has gained the B.Sc. (Econ.) Honours degree.

Examinations

General.—The University's Examination system has once again been called upon to deal with an increasing volume of work. The total number of candidates at all examinations has increased from 89,225 last year to 99,455 this year. Of these, 79,936 were eligible for the award of a degree, diploma or certificate, and 42,770 were successful. The total number of candidates entering for part or whole of a First Degree Examination was 14,395 ; of these, 7,551 were eligible for the award of a degree, and 5,071 were successful. There were 710 successful candidates for Higher Degrees, compared with last year's total of 479, and the number of postgraduate diplomas awarded was 663. 2,303 candidates entered for Examinations leading to the award of a Certificate or Diploma below postgraduate standard, of whom 1,225 were eligible for the award and 830 were successful.

General and Higher School Certificate.—Candidates from 475 schools took these examinations during the year. The General School Examination was taken by 30,742 candidates at 420 schools in this country and at seven schools overseas, including four conducted by the B.F.E.S. in Germany. The Higher School Examination was taken at 436 schools in this country, at five schools in British Guiana, and the English School at Cairo. 6,637 candidates took the whole or part of the examination, an increase of 11·2 per cent. over the previous year.

Matriculation.—During the year under review the total number of entries for the Matriculation Examination reached a total of 7,244 compared with the figure of 7,262 last year. The Register of Matriculated Students was increased by the addition of 21,458 names. Of this number 3,887 qualified through the Matriculation Examination itself, 652 through Special University Entrance Examinations and 5,990 through the General and Higher School Certificate Examination. The balance of 10,929 is accounted for by those exempted by virtue of qualifications obtained through examinations of other Examining Bodies.

During the year the issue by the Ministry of Education of Circular 168, announcing the introduction of the new examination for the General Certificate of Education to replace in 1951 the present School Certificate and Higher School Certificate Examinations, has caused the University to give careful consideration to the problems of matriculation and examinations in Secondary Schools. Before the war, progress had been made in the revision of matriculation requirements, and that revision is now being carried further in the light of the proposals for the new examination. The general desire that there should exist a large measure of inter-availability of matriculation qualifications among the universities of the country has resulted in a number of conferences with other universities, the outcome of which has been the adoption by a majority of the universities in England and Wales of a common policy regarding the acceptance of the General Certificate of Education as a matriculation qualification.

The University of London, therefore, has framed its entrance requirements in terms of the new Certificate, on the basis that the prospective student should be required to present a certificate which should provide evidence of a general education in the shape of subjects passed at Ordinary Level as well as evidence of more specialised attainments proved by success in subjects at the Advanced Level. As the examination for the General Certificate of Education will, in the main, be taken by pupils at secondary grammar schools, it is clear that there are other important problems which still await solution, in particular, those relating to students who have not received a grammar school education, students from overseas and students of more mature years. One result of the investigation of these problems may well be that the Matriculation Examination itself, which in the past has enjoyed a world-wide reputation, will cease to exist.

STUDENT ACTIVITIES

The past year has been one of the most successful in the history of the University Union and University Athletic Union. Progress has been made in discussions concerning the proposed new building for the University Union, and in the meantime a small amount of additional accommodation has been secured for the use of the Union adjoining its temporary premises in Woburn Square.

It is impossible in the space of this short report to give anything but the high-lights of the activities of the Union, but special mention should be made perhaps of the fact that the B.B.C. arranged two special broadcasts in the Third Programme of debates held under the auspices of the University Union, the one an Inter-University Debate and the other the final of the Intercollegiate Championships. The normal programme of debates has also been carried out successfully.

The annual Presentation Service and Presentation Day Ball proved, as usual, a great success, and were honoured by the presence of the Chancellor and Princess Alice, by the Vice-Chancellor and some Heads of Schools. For the first time the President's Ball this year was held in the Senate House, and was attended by the Chancellor, Princess Alice, the Lord Mayor of London and the Lady Mayoress, and the Presidents of most Student Unions in the country. Receptions were held for students from German Universities, and in addition the Dramatic Society acted as hosts for a visit of Le Groupe du Théâtre Contemporain. Within recent weeks the Union organised a highly entertaining carnival in Hyde Park, at which Their Royal Highnesses Princess Elizabeth and the Duke of Edinburgh acted as judges.

The facilities of the Union have been improved, not only by the acquisition of more accommodation, but by the introduction of a catering service in the Union Hut which provides over 400 lunches daily at cheap rates for students of the University.

The University of London Musical Society has continued its custom of singing Christmas Music in St. Paul's Cathedral in December, and giving a concert in the Central Hall, Westminster, in June.

On the athletics side, mention must first be made of the fact that, in the Olympic Games held in London this year, no less than seven members of the University were selected to represent their countries. Two of our students were chosen to take part in the Olympic Torch Relay, and one of them (J. W. Mark, of St. Mary's Hospital Medical School) was accorded the high honour of carrying the torch on the final lap round the Olympic Games arena at Wembley. For the first time in the history of the University a student obtained an Olympic Title when A. S. Wint (St. Bartholomew's Hospital Medical College) won the 400 metres race in 46·2 seconds, a time which equals the Olympic record.

Although these Olympic honours tend to overshadow the other athletic activities of the Union, I must record that no less than 45 students were selected to take part in national, county and combined universities teams. Friendly relations with the University of Paris have continued; we entertained an association football team at Motspur Park earlier this year and are planning to send an athletics team to Paris in May.

We had hoped to carry out certain improvements at the University Boat-House, but various obstacles proved more difficult to surmount than had been anticipated. The stage has now been reached, however, when the necessary licences have been obtained, and in the very near future the Boat-House should be able to accommodate all those enthusiasts who make such large demands on its limited accommodation.

I had expected to conclude this section of my Report with a reference to the complete rehabilitation of the University Sports Ground at Motspur Park, and to comment on the improvements made in the facilities there. At the end of March, however, a disastrous fire occurred in the Pavilion, and it is not possible at this stage to say what the effect of this will be. It is hoped, however, that the full programme of athletic events envisaged for this summer will be carried out, and emergency measures to remedy the lack of changing and stand accommodation are well in hand.

GENERAL

As is customary, a copy of the Principal's Report on the work of the University in 1947-48 was transmitted to the Keeper of the Privy Purse for submission to His Majesty the King, and a gracious message of thanks was received.

A message of congratulation was sent by telegram by the Chancellor on behalf of the University to H.R.H. the Princess Elizabeth, Duchess of Edinburgh, on the birth of her son on 14 November, and a gracious message of thanks was received in reply.

The Chancellor presided over the annual Presentation Ceremony at the Albert Hall. On Foundation Day, after the customary Dinner, the Chancellor conferred Honorary Degrees upon the Right Hon. Winston Churchill (D.Lit.), Mr. Walter de la Mare (D.Lit.), the Archbishop of Canterbury (LL.D.), Professor Sir Alexander Fleming (D.Sc.), Mr. George Marshall in absentia (LL.D.), and Sir Ernest Pooley (LL.D.). The other recipient, Mr. Mackenzie King, was unable through illness to be present on Foundation Day and the Chancellor conferred the degree of Doctor of Laws upon him at a separate ceremony at the hotel in London at which he was staying.

The University marked the occasion of the holding of the first post-war Congress of Universities of the Commonwealth at Oxford in July by conferring the Honorary Degree of LL.D. on five of the overseas delegates : Mr. Alan Burn, Vice-Chancellor of the University of Tasmania ; Professor J. B. Collip, Dean of the Faculty of Medicine, University of Western Ontario ; Dr. Anna de Villiers, Principal of the Huguenot University College, University of South Africa ;

Dr. Cyril James, Principal and Vice-Chancellor of McGill University, Canada, and Sir Sarvepalli Radhakrishnan, Vice-Chancellor of Benares Hindu University. Among other notable functions this year were the Receptions given by the Vice-Chancellor for members of the International Geological Congress and for members of the International Congress of Applied Mechanics. The 1948 Conference of Home Universities was held in the Senate House last December.

The Senate felt what I may legitimately call paternal pride on the occasion of the granting of a Charter of Incorporation to the University of Nottingham. They were pleased to receive an illuminated address from that University thanking them for the services rendered by London and in turn to convey to Nottingham their good wishes for the future.

The Honours Lists of the year have once again included the names of members of the University. Miss Ethel Strudwick, Dr. Margaret Read and Professor W. Wardlaw have all been honoured by the award of the C.B.E. Professor W. R. Jones, Emeritus Professor of Mining Geology, also received the C.B.E., whilst Mr. J. Wyllie, of Wye College, has received the O.B.E.

Professor E. D. Hughes, Professor Wilson Smith, Professor F. G. Young and Dr. W. T. J. Morgan are among the newly elected Fellows of the Royal Society. The award of the Linnean Medal for 1949 to Professor D. M. S. Watson has just been announced, while Professor L. Dudley Stamp has been awarded the Founders Medal of the Royal Geographical Society and Dr. O. H. K. Spate the Gill Memorial Medal of the same Society.

I would also like to record that during the year Professor Hughes Parry and Professor Barbara Wootton have been appointed members of the University Grants Committee.

I have to record with regret the death of many who have been prominent in the affairs of the University. Professor Sir Stanley Marchant was a member of the Senate to the time of his death and had represented the Faculty of Music since 1938 ; he had served as Chairman of the Library Committee and of Goldsmiths' College Delegacy. The deaths have occurred of three other Emeritus Professors : Abraham Wolf, Professor of Logic and Scientific Method at University College and the London School of Economics, a member of the Senate from 1933-44 ; Beatrice Edgell, Professor of Psychology at Bedford College, a member of the Senate from 1907-11, and Professor C. H. Lander, C.B.E., who held the Chair of Engineering at Imperial College from 1931-46. Professor Randolph Schwabe had been Slade

Professor of Fine Art at University College since 1930. Professor Harry Stobie, Dean of the School of Dental Surgery, Royal Dental Hospital of London, since 1920, had occupied the Chair of Dental Surgery and Pathology since 1939. Professor J. A. Stewart had held the title of Professor of Burmese at the School of Oriental and African Studies since 1944. Dr. A. F. C. Pollard had occupied the Chair of Optical Engineering and Instrument Designing at Imperial College from 1930 to 1943, and Dr. Tancred Borenus the Chair of the History of Art, afterwards the Durning Lawrence Chair, at University College from 1922 to 1948. Dr. A. F. Pollard was the Founder and first Director of the Institute of Historical Research, one-time Professor of Constitutional History at University College and a member of the Senate from 1910 to 1915; he received the Honorary Degree of Doctor of Literature in 1934. Other Honorary Graduates whose deaths I have to report are Professor Johan Hjort, who received the D.Sc. in 1936, and Mr. W. C. Chesterman, on whom the Senate conferred the M.A. in 1947. Mr. Chesterman had been an officer of the University Grants Committee since its creation in 1919, and during those thirty years his sympathetic attitude to, and deep understanding of, the peculiar problems of London had endeared him to all members of the University with whom he came into contact. We shall sorely miss his friendly interest and wide knowledge of university problems.

There has been a series of changes in the Court. Sir Norman Birkett has succeeded Sir George Barstow as Chairman, and we are delighted that we have the best of both worlds for Sir George continues to serve on the Court, of which he has been a Crown Member since 1931 and Deputy-Chairman from 1943-47. Sir Maurice Holmes, the co-opted member of the Court, has been obliged to resign by the pressure of his other duties, and his place has been filled by Sir Alan Barlow, no stranger to the financial problems of Universities in the post-war era. Sir Ernest Pooley's retirement at the end of last session ended a continuous period of 18 years' service as a Senate representative. His place was filled by Dr. P. Dunsheath, whilst Professor Bellot was appointed by the Senate to serve during Professor Penson's term of office as Vice-Chancellor. Professor Hughes Parry has this year resumed his ordinary membership as a representative of the Senate. Sir Robert Pickard was appointed to the Court only during the Vice-Chancellorship of Professor Hughes Parry, but the Court continues to have the benefit of his long experience for, having succeeded Canon Douglas as Chairman of Convocation, he becomes an ex officio member.

The Senate received with great regret the resignation of Sir Ernest Pooley, a member since 1929, Chairman of the Joint Maintenance Committee and one-time Chairman of the Finance and General Purposes Committee. As a mark of the esteem in which he was held, the University conferred on him the Honorary Degree of LL.D. Mr. H. L. Green, Chairman of Essex Education Committee, was co-opted in his place. Canon Douglas ended his long period of service on the Senate covering 41 years on completion of his term of office as Chairman of Convocation. Sir Robert Pickard became an ex officio member of the Senate in his capacity as Chairman of Convocation. He has been succeeded by Mr. Worsley as Chairman of the External Council and by Professor Hughes Parry as Chairman of the Finance and General Purposes Committee. Professor Horton is the new Chairman of the Joint Maintenance Committee of Court and Senate. Dr. Heron has followed Mr. Besant as representative of University College. The Rev. Dr. P. W. Evans has succeeded Dr. Grieve, Lord Piercy has succeeded Lord Beveridge, and Mr. W. W. Hill has succeeded Sir Robert Pickard as Convocation representatives.

Professor Hughes Parry retired from the Vice-Chancellorship last August after having held that office for three critical years. This was the period of immediate post-war reconstruction and the problems which the University had to face were unparalleled in magnitude and complexity. We owe a great debt of gratitude to Professor Hughes Parry for the skill and imperturbability with which he presided over our affairs and for the firmness and dignity with which he maintained the position which London should rightly hold among the universities of this country. It was a striking tribute that he should be chosen in his last year to be Chairman of the Committee of Vice-Chancellors and Principals, in which capacity he had much to do with the successful organisation of the Conference of Universities of the British Commonwealth which was held in this country last July. Professor Lillian Penson was elected to succeed him, the first woman to become Vice-Chancellor in this country, and, as far as can be ascertained, in the Commonwealth. Sir Francis Fraser has been reappointed Deputy Vice-Chancellor for a further year.

There have been several changes among the Higher Administrative Officers. Mr. Oliver Greenwood, our Accountant, has retired after being in the service of the University for 44 years. We shall miss him sadly, not the least for his wide knowledge of, and personal interest in, the members of the Staff, young and old. He has been succeeded by his Assistant, Mr. A. B. Waterfield, who has been with the University 17 years, so that there is no danger of lack of continuity in the Accountant's Department. Mr. A. Clow Ford, Director of the Department of Extra-Mural Studies, has also retired after 29 years on the University Staff, and we are glad that his services in the cause of further education, particularly during the war, have been recognised by the award of the O.B.E. and the Belgian honour of the Chevalier de l'Ordre de la Couronne. He has been succeeded by Dr. A. McPhee, who previously held a similar post in the University of Liverpool. Brigadier T. S. J. Anderson had been with us only since 1946, but he had made many friends and his departure for Sandhurst came as an unexpected blow. He has been succeeded as External Registrar by Mr. L. E. Ball, who for many years had been our Appointments Officer. To fill this vacancy, we have appointed Mr. H. R. Walters, who comes to us with a distinguished record both in the Services and in industry. Finally, Miss Quinn will be leaving us shortly after 31 years on the staff of the Library, 17 of them as Sub-Librarian. She played a leading part in the transfer of the Library from South Kensington to the Bloomsbury Buildings, the dispersal of its treasures on the outbreak of war and its reassembling when peace finally came. Moreover, she has on many occasions been in charge of the Library, during the illness of the late Librarian, Mr. Rye, and during the interval which elapsed between his death and the time when the present Librarian, Mr. Pafford, could be released to take up his duties here. To all these former members of the Staff we offer our sincere thanks for all they have done in the service of the University and our best wishes for their happiness whether in their retirement or in the tenure of their new posts.

CONCLUSION

If the past year has brought us some troubles, there has been a great deal of compensation, particularly in the development of our relations with universities in English-speaking countries overseas. The Conference of Universities of the British Commonwealth which was held last summer, partly in Bristol and partly in Oxford, brought to this country many representatives of dominion universities and, as they inevitably passed through London, we had the privilege of entertaining many of them. The policy of strengthening the bonds which link the universities of this country with those in the dominions has been further developed by the decision to send representatives from the United Kingdom to conferences of universities in the dominions. This has been made possible by a generous grant from the Nuffield Foundation to meet the very heavy cost of travelling expenses.

This year the meeting-place will be Canada, and I am happy to record that the Vice-Chancellor will be one of the four British delegates.

Members of the University will be familiar with the aims of the Fulbright Act, passed by the Congress of the United States in 1946 on the initiative of a former Rhodes Scholar from Arkansas. Under this Act, part of the funds realised by the sale of surplus United States war materials in this country will be devoted to bringing over scholars and research students from America to the United Kingdom. Under a Joint Anglo-American Agreement of September 1948 the United States Educational Commission in the United Kingdom has been appointed to superintend the use of Fulbright money and the Vice-Chancellor is one of the five representatives of the universities of this country on that body.

At the present time there is much critical discussion of the proper function of universities in the world of to-day, a natural result of the emergence in an acute form of those fundamental problems concerning the relationship between universities and the community to which I made reference at the beginning of this Report. There are some who go so far as to lay the blame for many of the difficulties of this age at the door of the universities on the ground that they have not yet taken in hand their rightful task of fashioning a philosophy which can unite the modern world—or at least that section of the world which lives and moves and has its being on this side of the Iron Curtain. It is when we come to grapple with such fundamental questions that first-hand knowledge of what is being discussed and done in English-speaking countries overseas becomes of such vital importance. Herein lies the inestimable value of the development of closer relations with our friends in the universities of the Dominions and the United States and, with such closer relations, a community of interests and a common way of thinking. May this development—in the phrase hallowed by centuries of usage in one of our City Companies—flourish root and branch.

An Act to make further provision with respect to the University of London.

[15th December 1926]

Whereas a Departmental Committee appointed by a Minute A.D. 1926 of the Board of Education dated the eighth day of October, nineteen hundred and twenty-four, to consider the Final Report of the Royal Commission on University Education in London dated the twenty-seventh day of March, nineteen hundred and thirteen, and, having regard to the present circumstances and after consultation with the persons and bodies concerned, to indicate what are the principal changes now most needed in the existing constitution of the University of London and on what basis a Statutory Commission should be set up to frame new statutes for the University, has in its Report (in this Act referred to as "the Report of the Committee") made recommendations with respect to the matters aforesaid and in particular has recommended that Statutory Commissioners should be appointed to make new statutes for the University in accordance with the recommendations in the said Report :

Be it therefore enacted by the King's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

(iii) Satisfied the Examiners in the examination or examinations prescribed for the degree for which he is a candidate ; and

(iv) Fulfilled all other prescribed conditions.

133. The Senate may, by way of special exceptions to the conditions prescribed by or under Statute 132 :

(i) Admit candidates who do not fulfil those conditions to degrees for Internal Students or to examinations leading to such degrees, and for that purpose may grant them the status of Internal Students ; but no such status shall be granted to an individual who does not fall within a class of persons specifically defined by Regulation ;

(ii) In the case of a candidate for a first degree as an External Student, dispense with the full period of three years after matriculation ;

(iii) Accept, in place of the whole or part of the examinations prescribed for any of the degrees of Master or of Doctor, the results of the study or research of any candidate who in the opinion of the Senate has thereby made a distinct contribution to the advancement of learning ; and the approval by the Examiners of such results shall be deemed to be equivalent to satisfying the Examiners in the examination, and these Statutes shall be construed accordingly ;

Provided that :

(a) No exceptions under this Statute shall admit a candidate to any degree in the Faculty of Medicine which is a qualification registrable by the General Medical Council ;

(b) In prescribing or making exceptions under this Statute the Senate shall attach to them such conditions as in their opinion will secure that candidates for a degree or for admission to an examination for a degree, whether as Internal or as External Students, are at least as highly qualified in respect of academic attainments as other candidates.

134.—(1) Subject to such exceptions, if any, as may be prescribed, no person shall be admitted to a first degree of the University as an Internal Student unless he shall have completed an approved course of study in the University comprising all the subjects included in his examination, which course shall be of not less than three years' duration, beginning not earlier than the date of his matriculation, or, if the Senate so permit either generally by Regulation or in special cases, beginning not more than four months prior to the date of matriculation.

(2) The course of study shall be continuously pursued unless the Senate in particular cases on the grounds of illness or other adequate cause shall otherwise determine. The Senate may also by special resolution allow for similar causes a student's course to be shortened by not more than one University term.

135. Every diploma of a degree shall state whether the person obtaining it did so as an Internal or as an External Student.

136. Titles of degrees may be granted honoris causa to members of the Royal Family, to British subjects who are of conspicuous merit or have done good service to the State or to the University, and to foreigners of distinction.

DIPLOMAS AND CERTIFICATES OF PROFICIENCY

137. The University may grant diplomas and certificates of proficiency to persons recommended as fitted to receive them by the Academic Council or by the Council for External Students or by the University Extension and Tutorial Classes Council or by the Matriculation and School Examinations Council ; and shall prescribe the subjects of study in which such diplomas or certificates of proficiency may be awarded, the tests by examination or otherwise and the conditions to be satisfied by candidates therefor, and, subject to any special provisions contained in these Statutes, the Standing Committee within whose purview such diplomas or certificates of proficiency shall fall.

138. Every diploma or certificate of proficiency shall state whether the person obtaining it did so as an Internal or as an External Student or otherwise.

DEPRIVATION

139. The Senate may revoke any degree, diploma, certificate or distinction conferred by the University and all privileges connected therewith, if the holder thereof shall have been convicted in a Court of Law of felony ; and, on good cause shown, restore the same degree, diploma, certificate or distinction, without further examination.

EXAMINATIONS

140. The Senate shall prescribe the conditions of matriculation (including, if they think fit, special conditions for students of mature years, regard being had to the course of study which any such student proposes to pursue), of intermediate examinations and of all examinations for degrees and for diplomas and certificates of proficiency.

141. The Senate may, with the concurrence of the Governing Bodies of the Schools concerned, hold a special intermediate examination for any one School or for any group of two or more Schools.

142. The Senate may, if they think fit, approve for the examinations for any degree or any part thereof and for other purposes, courses of instruction and syllabuses submitted by any School of the University, and may conduct examinations for any degree or for any other purpose in the courses and syllabuses so approved.

143. The Senate may prescribe separate intermediate examinations and separate examinations for degrees for Internal and for External Students respectively ; or they may, at their discretion and after consideration of the views of the Academic Council and the Council for External Students, prescribe that any such examinations or part of such examinations be held in common for Internal and for External Students.

144. The Examiners for all prescribed examinations shall be appointed by the Senate.

(iii) If any other difficulty arise in the initial constitution of any Body under these Statutes, or otherwise in initial procedure, such departure from the provisions of these Statutes may be made as in the opinion of the Vice-Chancellor, after consultation with the Principal, shall be deemed necessary to overcome the difficulty.

155. All Bye-laws, Regulations and Standing Orders of the University existing immediately prior to the appointed day and not inconsistent with the Act or these Statutes shall remain in force until they are altered or repealed.

The Senate will decide after report from the relevant Board of Advisors whether the appointment shall be made in the first instance for an initial limited period, and, if so, what period, or whether it shall be made without time-limit up to the age fixed for retirement.

(iii) In cases where the Senate retain a Professor or Reader after an initial period of appointment, the re-appointment shall be as a rule without time-limit up to the retiring age, except when such reappointment is inconsistent with the terms of a specific Trust governing the appointment.

A candidate who has been absent through illness from part of the Final Examination for a First Degree may apply to the University for the award of an Aegrotat Degree.

A candidate for a higher Doctorate must, as a general rule, have taken the corresponding Master's or Ph.D. Degree. Candidates for a Doctor's Degree, other than the D.Mus. and M.D. Degrees, may enter at any time of the year.

Except in certain cases, the fee payable for entry to an Intermediate or Final Examination is 6 guineas (or for B.A. Honours or B.Sc. Some of the Examinations for External Students are held at Provincial and Overseas Centres as well as in London, but certain examinations involving practical or oral work cannot be held at provincial centres.

The Regulations for Degrees and Diplomas, including the syllabuses for the several subjects of examination, are not printed in the Calendar, but are contained in two special volumes published annually in September, entitled "Regulations for Internal Students" (Red Book) and "Regulations for External Students" (Blue Book) respectively ; the Regulations are published also in pamphlets for the several Faculties, for Internal and External Students separately, which may be obtained post free on application to the appropriate Registrar.

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON: BROWN ANIMAL SANATORY INSTITUTION

[Destroyed in air-raids and not yet re-opened]

This Institution originated in a bequest by Mr. Thomas Brown, of Rosey Park Hill, Dublin, but a citizen of London, who died in December 1852, and of whose Will the leading provisions are printed under "Trusts and Benefactions," on p. 41.

The Institution is under the direction and control of a Superintendent, and is conducted in two departments, the Hospital for the treatment of diseases and injuries of animals, and the Laboratory for the investigation of diseases of animals.

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON: COURTAULD INSTITUTE OF ART

The Institute was opened for the admission of students in October 1932. Its main purpose is :

- (a) To provide instruction for those who desire a knowledge of the history of art as part of their education and as a basis for appreciation ;
- (b) To promote research in the subject and to train and assist students undertaking such work.

Courses are held for the B.A. Honours Degree in the History of Art, for the Academic Diploma in the History of Art, the Academic Diploma in Chinese Archaeology, and for the M.A. and Ph.D. Degrees. The Courtauld Certificate in the History of Art is awarded on the results of an examination based on the lectures open to the public.

Students engaged in, or proposing to undertake research in the History of Art, but who do not necessarily intend to proceed to a Degree in the University, may be admitted as students to the Institute, on submitting satisfactory evidence (such as Degrees, and published or unpublished work) of their fitness to profit from the Institute.

At the discretion of the Director, persons not reading for a Degree or Diploma or engaged in research, may be permitted to use the Library.

The Lectures fall into two main divisions, those open to the general public and those designed for full-time students at the Institute.

The public lectures are in all cases delivered by specialists in the particular subject concerned. They consist of single lectures or short courses so arranged that the individual lectures or courses, though complete in themselves, are complementary and form part of a connected whole. They are delivered at 5.30 p.m., in order to enable those engaged in professional work during the day to attend them.

FEES.—Full-time students (B.A., M.A., and Ph.D., Diploma and Research), £40 a year, excluding the Registration Fee payable to the University. Certificate students (covering all public lectures, use of library and examination fee), £12.

In special cases, and at the discretion of the Director, Research students may be admitted for shorter periods than a year, at a fee of £13 6s. 8d. per term.

Public lectures, single lectures or short courses, 2s. each lecture. .

A limited number of lectures are free.

At the discretion of the Director, readers may be admitted to the use of the Institute Libraries at a fee of £4 a year or £1 10s. a term.

Admission without payment to the Library of the Institute and the lectures may be granted to

- (1) Appointed, Recognised, and other teachers of the University.
- (2) Persons who have assisted in the development of the Institute.

Pending the completion of the Institute buildings on the University site in Bloomsbury, the work of the Institute is concentrated at 20 Portman Square, W.1. Here is housed the library of books, the Conway Library of reproductions and the collection of lantern-slides; the Witt Library, in close proximity at 32 Portman Square, gives special facilities to students. The Department of the History of the Technology of Art, comprising a scientific laboratory for investigation and research into problems connected with the physical condition, conservation and restoration of works of art and the materials used in the arts, is attached to the Institute.

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON: INSTITUTE OF ADVANCED LEGAL STUDIES

The Institute has been set up as part of the post-war expansion of the University of London and occupies premises near the Senate House. It was opened by the Lord Chancellor in June 1948.

The aim of the Institute is to act as a focal point for legal research, and to provide seminar classes for students reading for higher degrees in Law at a School of the University and other research workers.

The Institute's Library, which is in process of being built up, consists at present of over 13,000 books, some 5,000 of which were bequeathed to the University by the late Dr. Charles Huberich. The Institute has acquired sets of practically all the United Kingdom law reports and Statutes and a number of basic works, particularly those most useful for seminar purposes and for students reading for higher degrees. In addition, the Nuffield Foundation have generously made available the sum of £10,000 for the purchase of legal literature relating to the Dominions and Colonies. In making use of this benefaction, the Institute is pursuing a selective policy and is giving priority to material not elsewhere available in London.

The Institute is collating particulars of legal research being undertaken and is in a position to communicate such information to research workers.

Admission to the Institute may be granted, without fee, to :—

Teachers of Law in Universities and University Colleges, both in the United Kingdom and overseas, and to all teachers in Law Schools who are qualified to become members of the Society of Public Teachers of Law ;

Postgraduate students engaged on approved research, and any University students attending a seminar at the Institute ;

Other persons by permission of the Director.

Persons who already hold a research degree or have published the results of their researches, or have had considerable training or practical experience in the Law, may be admitted to the use of the Institute, either on payment of a fee, or without fee, if duly invited and willing to assist in the work of a seminar held at the Institute.

All enquiries concerning admission, seminars, etc., should be addressed to the Director.

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON: INSTITUTE OF ARCHÆOLOGY

The Institute is housed for the present in St. John's Lodge, Regent's Park, the lease of which has been granted to the University by the Commissioners of Crown Lands. Later, when funds become available, it is hoped to erect a building for it on the Bloomsbury site.

The Institute provides equipment for the study of Archæology of the British Isles and of the Near East, particularly of those countries for which Great Britain had special responsibilities, such as Palestine.

Instruction is given for the Academic Diplomas in European Archæology (Western, Prehistoric), Indian Archæology, and in the Archæology of Western Asia. Provision has been made by the Institute for courses in the technique of Archæology, and for research work in British and Palestinian Archæology.

British, Palestinian, Syrian and Cypriot Collections are available for teaching purposes and part are now exhibited in show-cases for the benefit of the general public.

A fully equipped department of Geochronology and Environmental Archæology has been established, and instruction and lectures are given in this branch.

A photographic laboratory is open for the purpose of giving technical instruction to students and of undertaking archæological photography both for the Institute and other Associations and Institutions which may require work of this nature.

A drawing department undertakes scale drawings of archæological objects, particularly pottery.

A technical department gives instruction in the repair and preservation of archæological finds, and undertakes work for outside Institutions in these subjects. Models and dioramas are also prepared.

BIRKBECK COLLEGE

A School of the University in the Faculties of Arts and Science

Birkbeck College was founded by Dr. George Birkbeck in the year 1823, "for the purpose of giving instruction to students in the principles of the Arts they practise and in the various branches of Science and useful knowledge." Dr. Birkbeck had the support and assistance of many leading public men, including Lord Brougham, Lord John Russell, the Earl of Shaftesbury, Lord Playfair, Francis Place and Sir Francis Burdett.

The principal aim of the College is to enable men and women engaged in full-time paid occupations during the day to employ their leisure in reading for first degrees in Arts and Pure Science or to engage in research with a view to higher degrees in these Faculties. The first degree courses are provided for evening and part-time students only.

The College was originally established in Southampton Buildings, Chancery Lane, but was transferred in 1885 to the existing premises in Bream's Buildings. The Faculty of Arts, consequent upon enemy action in 1941, is using accommodation lent by the Institute of Education, the School of Oriental and African Studies and the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine. In order to provide a meeting place for the staff and students of the Faculty, the University has placed 29 Russell Square at the disposal of the College—thus affording facilities for the Library, Senior and Junior Common Rooms, a Refectory and staff rooms for each department.

The Library was destroyed by fire in May 1941, but is being rapidly restored by purchase and by many generous gifts; it already contains about 35,000 volumes. At present the Arts books are housed at 29 Russell Square and the Science Books at Bream's Buildings.

The Laboratories of the Departments of Botany, Chemistry, Geology, Physics, Zoology and Psychology are, notwithstanding difficulties arising from restricted accommodation, well supplied with equipment of the most modern type.

FEES.—Sessional Composition Fees for courses :—

(a) For Undergraduates (part-time only).

Arts : Intermediate, B.A. General or Honours, £11.

Science : Intermediate, B.Sc. General or Special, £13 10s.

(b) For Postgraduates (full- or part-time), from £5 to £22.

TERMS, 1949–50.—Autumn Term : 3 October to 17 December; Spring Term : 9 January to 25 March; Summer Term : 24 April to 24 June.

The corporate life of the College is organised by the Students' Union. The SOCIETIES and CLUBS include :—

The Students' Union, Natural History Society, Physical Society, Chemical Society, Classical Society, Literary Society, French Society, German Society, Geographical Society, Geological Society, Historical Society, Mathematics Society, Psychological Society, Birkbeck Players, Music Society, Photographic Society, Student Christian Movement, Catholic Society, Liberal Society, Socialist Society; Athletic Club, Cricket Club, Association Football Club, Rugby Football Club, Hockey Clubs, Netball Club, Lawn Tennis Club, Squash Rackets Club, Rowing Club, Fencing Club, Mountaineering Club, Table Tennis Club, and International Students' Society.

The College Playing Fields, covering an area of eighteen acres, provide ample facilities for the athletic activities of the College, and are situated at Greenford, Middlesex.

The Lodestone, the College Magazine, is published once a term.

IMPERIAL COLLEGE OF SCIENCE
AND TECHNOLOGYA School of the University in the Faculties of Science and Engineering*

The Imperial College of Science and Technology, incorporated under the Royal Charter of 8 July 1907, is an institution or group of associated colleges with its principal seat at South Kensington. It was admitted as a School of the University in the Faculties of Science and Engineering on 22 July 1908.

The purposes of the Imperial College are to give the highest specialised instruction, and to provide the fullest equipment for the most advanced training and research in various branches of science, especially in its application to industry ; and to do all and any of such things as the Governing Body consider conducive or incidental thereto, having regard to the provision for those purposes which already exists elsewhere.

For these purposes, the Governing Body, subject to the provisions of the Charter, carry on the work of the Royal College of Science and the Royal School of Mines, and may establish Colleges and other Institutions or Departments of Instruction. Any Institution or Department so established, and, subject to the conditions of the Charter, the Central Technical College of the City and Guilds of London Institute, are integral parts of the Imperial College. The Central Technical College is called and known as the City and Guilds College, and is governed by a Delegacy representative of the Imperial College, the City and Guilds of London Institute, the Goldsmiths' Company and the Clothworkers' Company.

The Imperial College provides regular courses of work of three or four years' duration leading on satisfactory completion to a * Diploma of Associateship, and, subject to the fulfilment of the regulations of the University, to the Bachelor's Degree in Science or in Engineering. By arrangement with the University the Diploma and the Degree are obtainable on the same courses and examinations. These courses include Aeronautics, Botany, Chemistry, Chemical Engineering, Civil Engineering, Electrical Engineering, Geology, Mathematics, Mechanical Engineering, Metallurgy, Mining, Mining Geology, Oil Technology, Physics and Zoology.

The Imperial College has certain additional Departments postgraduate in character, and is well provided with laboratories and equipment for research and for postgraduate course work, the courses in which lead to the Diploma of Membership of the Imperial College (D.I.C.) or to the Higher Degrees of the University. Approximately one-third of the total number of full-time students are pursuing work of this kind.

Provided there is room, and they are qualified by previous training to benefit, students are accepted for parts of the above courses.

The following is a list of Imperial College Departments, sub-departments and special courses, those confined to postgraduate work being given in italics :—

Aeronautics (Aerodynamics, Aerostructures and Aircraft Propulsion) ; Botany (Bacteriology, Biochemistry, Plant Pathology, Plant Physiology) ; Chemical Engineering (Applied Physical Chemistry, Electrothermics, Fuel, Refractory Materials) ; Chemistry (Agricultural, Food and Drugs, Inorganic, Organic, Physical) ; Engineering (Civil including Surveying, Concrete Technology, Highways, Hydro-Power, Soil Mechanics ; Electrical ; Mechanical, including Gas Dynamics, Gas Turbines, Heat Transmission) ; Geology (Mining Geology, Oil Technology) ; Mathematics ; Metallurgy ; Mining, including Mine Surveying ; Meteorology ; and Physics (Applied Geophysics, Astrophysics, Technical Optics) ; Zoology and Applied Entomology.

The Imperial College Library consists of a series of departmental Libraries housed in the respective departments, comprising comprehensive selections of technical books and periodicals for the use of members of the College. In addition the Library of the Science Museum (Science Library) is available for use by members of the College during ordinary day hours, and on certain days up to 10 p.m.

Numerous Scholarships and Prizes are open for award to students and intending students of the College, of which particulars may be had on application.

FEES.—Entrance £2. Sessional fees are £60 for all full-time undergraduates. The fee for postgraduates is £30, with a possible addition for exceptionally expensive chemicals, etc.

The Academic Year (or Session) of the College begins early in October and extends till towards the end of June, a period of 30 weeks, exclusive of the Christmas and Easter vacations, and is divided into three terms.

TERMS, 1949-50.—Autumn Term : 4 October to 15 December ; Spring Term : 10 January to 24 March ; Summer Term : 25 April to 23 June.

* Associateship of the Royal College of Science (A.R.C.S.), Associateship of the Royal School of Mines (A.R.S.M.) awarded by the Governing Body of the College, Associateship of the City and Guilds of London Institute (A.C.G.I.) awarded by the Institute.

The buildings of the Imperial College are situated in Exhibition Road, Imperial Institute Road and Prince Consort Road, South Kensington, and comprise—the Huxley Building of the Royal College of Science, the City and Guilds College and the Goldsmiths' Company Extension of the same (Exhibition Road), the main building of the Royal College of Science (Imperial Institute Road), the Royal School of Mines building, the Chemical Technology building, the Botany and Zoology buildings, the Imperial College Union, the Imperial College Hostel, and the Imperial College Office, the two latter comprising the Beit Building (Prince Consort Road). The Biological Field Station is at Silwood Park, near Ascot.

The proximity of the Imperial College to the Science Museum, the Natural History Museum, the Imperial Institute and the Geological Museum is of great advantage to members of the College.

The Imperial College Union building is the home of the several students' Unions, of the College Refectory, and of the various Clubs and Societies of the Imperial College and of its three integral Colleges. The accommodation, originally provided by the College in 1912 and extended in 1931, comprises dining rooms, lounges, a gymnasium or concert room and various other club rooms and offices.

The Imperial College Hostel provides accommodation (bed-sitting-room) for 100 students, board being obtainable at the adjoining Refectory. Applications for rooms should be made to the Hostess. As, however, apart from the Hostel, the Imperial College is a non-residential institution, students are required to make their own arrangements for board and lodging. The University Lodgings Officer will assist students to obtain a suitable residence.

Clubs exist in the College for football, cricket, rowing, etc. There are also Societies for debating, and for mutual assistance in the study of physics, chemistry, natural history, etc., and the subjects of interest to students of mining and metallurgy.

An Appointments Board was established by the Governing Body of the Imperial College in 1912. Associates of any of the constituent colleges or Members of the Imperial College may register their names without fee; and no fees are charged to employers. Further information can be had on application to the Secretary, Appointments Board, Imperial College, S.W.7.

The Royal College of Science and the Royal School of Mines, founded in 1851, owe their origin to the exertions on behalf of Technical Education of the late Sir Henry de la Beche, F.R.S. The original institution was named "The Government School of Mines and of Science applied to the Arts," and it was the outcome of the movement in favour of scientific and technical education, which was one of the results of the establishment of the first Great Exhibition. In 1853, at the time of the foundation of the Department of Science and Art, an attempt was made to enlarge the scope of the school, and it was called "The Metropolitan School of Science applied to Mining and the Arts,"—the "Royal College of Chemistry," which had some years before been founded by private enterprise, being taken over by the Government and made part of the institution. Between 1859 and 1881, however, the school became an almost purely technical one, its title being changed to "The Royal School of Mines." As the want of space in the original building at Jermyn Street became more and more apparent, the several divisions of the College were gradually transferred to South Kensington, and in 1881 a complete reorganisation of the institution was undertaken. Under the name of "The Normal School of Science and Royal School of Mines," a title which was in 1890 changed to "The Royal College of Science, with which is incorporated the Royal School of Mines," a training school for science teachers was established, the technical school for mining and metallurgy being, however, retained as a branch of the institution.

Under the Royal Charter of Incorporation of the Imperial College of July 1907, the Royal College of Science and the Royal School of Mines were continued as integral parts of the Imperial College.

The City and Guilds of London Institute was founded in 1878, incorporated under the Companies' Acts in 1880, and received the grant of a Royal Charter by Her late Majesty Queen Victoria in 1900. It is an association of the Corporation and Livery Companies of the City of London instituted "for the purposes of all such branches of Science and the Fine Arts as benefit, or are of use to, or may benefit, or be of use to, productive and technical industries especially, and to commerce and industry generally, or any branch thereof, and for the utilisation of such means as will promote the several exclusive purposes aforesaid."

One of the objects of the City and Guilds Institute was to establish a College for higher technical education applied to productive industry.

This College, formerly known as The Central Technical College of the Institute, and now the City and Guilds College, forms the Engineering Section of the Imperial College of Science and Technology, and is administered by a Delegacy consisting of representatives of the Imperial College, of the City and Guilds of London Institute, of the Goldsmiths' Company, and of the Clothworkers' Company.

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON :
KING'S COLLEGEA School of the University in the Faculties of Arts, Laws, Medicine, Science and Engineering*

King's College was founded in 1829 by Royal Charter "for the purpose of giving instruction in the various branches of Literature and Science and the doctrines and duties of Christianity as the same are inculcated by the United Church of England and Ireland." The meeting inaugurating the College was held at the Freemasons' Tavern on 21 June 1828, with the Duke of Wellington, who was a strong supporter of the College and one of the first life Governors, in the Chair. The actual work began on 8 October 1831.

Besides the School, the College originally consisted of a Department of General Literature and Science, to which was immediately added a Medical Department. In 1838 the Engineering Department was founded. In 1839 the first Hospital was built. In 1847 the Theological Department was added, and in 1856 the Evening Class Department, for a considerable time among the largest in the College. In 1861 an Oriental section was started, and for some years trained many future Indian Civil servants. In 1881 the Women's Department at South Kensington was founded.

By the King's College London Act 1882, the rights of the original proprietors were extinguished and other changes made in the constitution, and by the Act of 1903 the obligation for Professors and Lecturers and for Members of the Council to be members of the Church of England was removed, except in relation to the Faculty of Theology.

In consequence of the proposed Incorporation of University College in the University, the position of King's College was carefully considered by the Council, and after considerable negotiations a scheme was adopted and embodied in the King's College London (Transfer) Act, which received the Royal Assent on 1 August 1908. By this Act, King's College School (which in 1898 had been removed to Wimbledon Common) became a separate Corporation ; arrangements were made by which the Strand School and other non-University work were removed from the College buildings, and the Corporation of the Hospital and the Advanced Medical School were made completely independent ; the Council remains the governing body of the Theological Department, whilst the remaining departments of the College and the Women's Department were incorporated in the University with the names respectively of University of London King's College, and University of London King's College for Women. By order of the Commissioners appointed under the Act, this incorporation took effect on 1 January 1910.

In 1915 the Arts and Science Departments of King's College for Women were transferred to, and, in effect, absorbed in King's College. Legal effect was given to the absorption by the Statutes made in 1928 under the University of London Act 1926, and University of London King's College for Women then ceased to exist, for, by the same Statutes, the Household and Social Science Department, which was moved to new buildings on Campden Hill in 1915, became a separate college under the title of King's College of Household and Social Science.

Following the changes recorded above, the College now consists of (a) The Theological Department under the governance of the Council of King's College London, and (b) University of London King's College which is governed by a Delegacy appointed by the Senate of the University (p. 202).

The latter includes (1) The Faculty of Arts : In this Faculty special provision is made for Palæography, Spanish Studies, Portuguese, and Mediæval and Modern Greek ; (2) The Faculty of Laws : The classes in Laws are arranged by an intercollegiate scheme with University College and the London School of Economics ; (3) The Faculty of Natural Science : Preparation for Science Degrees and also for the Institute of Chemistry examinations ; (4) The Faculty of Medical Science : Preparation for First and Second Medical Examinations, for which the College is a University centre. After completing their pre-clinical medical studies, students proceed for their clinical studies to one of the associated hospitals—King's College Hospital, Westminster Hospital and St. George's Hospital ; (5) The Faculty of Engineering : Systematic courses in Civil, Mechanical and Electrical Engineering and a postgraduate course in Chemical Engineering.

Evening Classes are held only in the Faculty of Laws and in the Department of Spanish.

All classes are open to women as well as men, including, since 1916, those in the Faculty of Medical Science.

The Department of Education includes (1) a Day Training College under the Ministry of Education, (2) a postgraduate department for training secondary teachers (men and women). Courses in the Faculties of Arts and Natural Science are taken in the College. The Department is a constituent member of the University of London Institute of Education.

There was a large accession of space for almost every Department on the removal of the Strand School from the 43 rooms which it occupied. New Seminar Rooms were provided for the Arts Departments, and new Laboratories for Advanced and Research work in the Faculties of Science and Engineering. Since then the accommodation has been frequently increased. In 1919 a spacious Engineering laboratory and drawing office were erected in the old playground, the cost being defrayed mainly by a grant from the London County Council.

In 1928 the East Wing (five storeys connected with the main College buildings by a short corridor) was erected over the Aldwych Underground Railway Station for the departments of Geology, Geography, History, Education, Journalism and Classics. In 1930 a two-storey building was erected on the northern half of the roof of the main building, to contain the Hambleden Department of Anatomy and to provide accommodation for research in Physiology. In 1931 the lease of No. 21 Surrey Street—adjoining the south-east corner of the College—was purchased to provide research laboratories for the Department of Chemistry, a further extension of this department being built in 1932 above the newly-extended Refectory. In 1933 the Sir Halley Stewart Trustees granted, on nominal terms, the lease of 30 Chesterford Gardens, Hampstead, for an extension of the research facilities of the Department of Physics. In 1947 the East Wing was extended by the incorporation of four floors at the corner of the Strand and Surrey Street. Shortly afterwards the lease of the Chesham Hotel in Surrey Street was purchased and a building thereby acquired which will provide rooms for student purposes and for some of the academic departments. During 1949-50 a two-storied building is being constructed under the quadrangle, between the Strand and the Embankment, which will provide 24,000 square feet of floor space for additional laboratories in Physics and in Civil and Electrical Engineering.

LIBRARIES.—The College Libraries contain about 146,000 volumes. In addition to the General Library, there are :—

(a) The Marsden Library, consisting of books bequeathed by Dr. William Marsden, F.R.S., containing some unique and rare editions of works dealing with languages. The oriental books from this collection have been transferred on loan to the School of Oriental Studies, and in their place books on History, Natural Science, and other subjects have been deposited at King's College.

(b) The Wheatstone Library, bequeathed to the College by Professor Sir Charles Wheatstone, F.R.S.; which consists of valuable books on Electricity and kindred subjects published before the year 1875.

(c) The Skeat and Furnivall Library, formed from the libraries of Professor Skeat and Dr. Furnivall. The books were presented to the English Department by Mrs. Skeat and Dr. Percy Furnivall.

(d) The Ronald Burrows Library of Mediæval and Modern Greek, dealing with Byzantine History and with the language and literature of Modern Greece. This Library has recently been enriched by the gift from Dr. William Miller of some 800 volumes from his own collection.

(e) The Frida Mond collection of books and pictures connected with Goethe.

(f) A valuable collection of Zoological and other works, which formed the private library of the late Rev. T. R. R. Stebbing, F.R.S., Fellow of the College. It is housed in the Zoological Department.

(g) The Maurice Collection from the library of F. D. Maurice, Professor at King's College, 1840-53, presented by Major-General Sir Frederick Maurice.

Besides these special collections there are the following Departmental Libraries. 1. Anatomy and Physiology ; 2. Botany ; 3. Chemical Engineering ; 4. Chemistry ; 5. Classics ; 6. Education ; 7. Electrical Engineering ; 8. Engineering (Civil and Mechanical) ; 9. French ; 10. Geography ; 11. Geology ; 12. German ; 13. History ; 14. Imperial History ; 15. Mathematics ; 16. Laws ; 17. Physics ; 18. Portuguese ; 19. Spanish ; 20. Zoology.

The general Library is open for the use of all Regular students and such Occasional students as have received the permission of the Dean of their Faculty and have paid the Library admission fee ($\text{£}1 1s.$ per session, 10s. 6d. per term) at the following hours : In term, Monday to Friday 9.30-6.45, Saturday 9.30-1. In vacation, Monday to Friday 10-4.30, Saturday 10.0-12 noon. The Library is closed for a week at Easter, during part of August, and for a week at Christmas.

The Anatomical Museum contains the Hughes Collection of specimens and dissections. The Pathological Collection is very complete, and fresh specimens are constantly added ; there are also valuable casts.

For many years the collection of instruments of experimental philosophy formed by George III and presented to the College by Queen Victoria in 1841 was housed in the George III Museum, which had been specially fitted out for its reception. Sir Charles Wheatstone, Professor of Physics from 1834 to 1875, bequeathed to the Museum ~~the~~ apparatus used in his lifetime of prolific research. In 1926 the George III collection was placed on permanent loan in the Science Museum at South Kensington, where during the present year (1949) it has been on special exhibition. The Wheatstone Collection, which has not been displayed since 1926, contains many instruments of historical importance which should be more readily accessible to the general public. The Delegacy of the College have therefore taken preliminary action for the transfer of the Wheatstone Collection on permanent loan to the Science Museum.

LABORATORIES for the practical instruction of undergraduates are situated in each of the following departments : Botany, Chemistry, Geography, Geology, Physics, Zoology ; Civil, Mechanical, and Electrical Engineering ; Anatomy and Physiology.

FACILITIES FOR RESEARCH. All the Departments listed in the preceding paragraph are equipped to receive postgraduate students wishing to undertake original research work under the direction of Heads of Departments.

In the Department of Physics research is divided into four main sections :— Biophysics, Theoretical Physics, Nuclear Physics, and Atmospheric. New research laboratories are now in the course of construction and it will be possible to extend the programme of research in 1952. It is planned to equip the Nuclear Physics laboratory in this new building with a Van der Graaf generator.

Research in the Department of Chemistry is centred in a separate building. A new laboratory for the investigation of problems in Physical Chemistry was opened this year.

A Plant Physiology Laboratory situated in the grounds of King's College Hall at Champion Hill was added to the research accommodation of the Department of Botany in 1948.

The new building that will provide increased accommodation for research in Physics will also contain several Engineering laboratories, and some of these rooms will be equipped for the reception of more post-graduate students in Civil, Mechanical and Electrical Engineering.

In the Chemical Engineering Laboratory courses of instruction are provided for students who have obtained a first degree in Engineering or Chemistry.

The CLASS ROOMS, THEATRES and LABORATORIES, about 120 rooms in all, provide accommodation for about 1,600 regular students.

SCHOLARSHIPS, EXHIBITIONS, AND PRIZES are offered annually to the value of about £1,500.

A Refectory was constructed in the College in 1918, and was considerably enlarged in 1919 and 1933.

There is a Gymnasium in the College. The Athletic Ground, covering 15 acres, and situated at Mitcham, was purchased out of the War Memorial Fund and handed over to trustees to hold on behalf of the students of the College. A permanent Pavilion was erected in 1931 and was opened on 8 October of that year, the 100th anniversary of the opening of the College buildings.

LONDON SCHOOL OF ECONOMICS AND POLITICAL SCIENCE

A School of the University in the Faculties of Economics (including Commerce), Laws and Arts

The London School of Economics and Political Science was founded in 1895 on the initiative of Lord Passfield (then Mr. Sidney Webb) to improve the facilities for the study of the social sciences.

The School was admitted in 1900 as a recognised "School of the University" following the establishment of a Faculty of Economics and Political Science within the University. It was subsequently recognised as a School of the University in the Faculty of Laws (1921) and in the Faculty of Arts for Geography and Sociology (1922) and for History and Anthropology (1924).

The teaching and research of the School is concentrated within the social sciences. More particularly, the subjects taught at the School include : Economics, Commerce, Banking, Industry and Transport ; Statistics ; Political Science and Public Administration ; Sociology, Social Anthropology (including Colonial Administration) ; Social Science and Administration ; Social and Economic History ; Law in all its aspects ; Criminology ; International Relations ; International History ; Geography ; Psychology ; Demography ; Logic, Scientific Method ; and Modern Languages.

FIRST DEGREES, DIPLOMAS AND CERTIFICATES.—Complete courses of instruction are provided for first degrees in the Faculty of Economics (B.Sc. (Econ.) and B.Com.) and for the Academic Diploma in Public Administration, for the Postgraduate Diploma in Anthropology, for certificates awarded by the School in Social Science and Administration, in Mental Health and in International Studies. For first degrees in Laws and Arts (LL.B. and B.A.) and for the Postgraduate Diploma in Psychology, the School co-operates with other colleges of the University, and students of the School working under such inter-collegiate arrangements have access to all the necessary lectures wherever given.

The School provides a number of courses for degrees in some of the other faculties of the University. Persons registered at the College of Estate Management for the B.Sc. (Estate Management) degree may take a substantial part of their training at the School, and courses of lectures on Geography and Cultural Anthropology are provided for the B.Sc. degree in the Faculty of Science.

The School also provides courses in Personnel Management, in Child Care, and in Trade Union Studies for men and women interested in the Trade Union Movement, and a postgraduate course in Business Administration.

HIGHER DEGREES AND POSTGRADUATE RESEARCH.—The School is one of the principal centres of postgraduate research in the Social Sciences in the country. Students are registered for all higher degrees of the University of London in the faculties in which the School is recognised, or they may pursue research in the field of the Social Sciences without preparing for a degree.

REGISTRATION OF STUDENTS.—The facilities of the School are open to men and women, either as day or evening students. Students for first degrees and diplomas are not normally admitted to the School unless they are over 18 years of age, and in the case of candidates for the certificates awarded by the Social Science Department, 19 years of age. Applications to join the School should be sent in not later than the first day of March in the year in which it is intended to enter. Students wishing to read for first degrees and diplomas may be required to sit for an entrance examination which will normally be held during the last week of the Easter vacation. Candidates whose native tongue is not English will be required to show proficiency in that language, if necessary by passing a separate qualifying examination, before being accepted. Many of the courses of lectures are also open to approved students who do not wish to pursue a full University course. A considerable number of entrance scholarships and bursaries are awarded and other scholarships and prizes are available during the course of graduating.

FEES.—The fees for a course for a degree, certificate or diploma vary with each particular course, and according to whether it is taken during the day or evening. Generally, a day course for any of these qualifications costs about £36 a session, and about £22 for an evening course. Fees for higher degrees range between 14 and 21 guineas a session, but there is a considerable reduction for research students who, before graduating, were members of the School. These fees cover all necessary lectures, personal supervision and seminars.

LIBRARIES.—The British Library of Political and Economic Science, founded by public subscription in 1896, serves both as the working library of the School and as a national collection of materials for research.

The scope of the Library is the social sciences in the widest sense of that term ; it is particularly rich in economics, in commerce and business administration, in transport, in statistics, in political science and public administration, in English, foreign and international law, and in the social economic and international aspects of history. As well as treatises and some 5,000 non-governmental periodicals (of which 2,500 are received currently), it contains some 400,000 controversial and other pamphlets and leaflets ; rich collections of government publications from nearly all the important countries of the world, including some 3,500 serials (of which 2,200 are received currently) ; collections which are probably unique of reports of local government authorities, of banks, and of railways ; much historical material ; and miscellaneous manuscript and printed collections of very varied extent and kind. The total amounts to some 297,000 bound volumes, together with materials not yet bound, estimated to be the equivalent of a further 50,000 volumes. In some subjects within its field, the Library is surpassed only by smaller and more highly specialised libraries, and in others it is unsurpassed ; as a whole it is probably the largest library in the world devoted exclusively to the social sciences.

The Library is freely open to students of the School and is extensively used by other workers. Non-members of the School who wish to use the Library must apply on a special form which can be obtained from the Librarian.

The School has also a lending library of duplicate copies of books most in demand by students, and a series of study-room libraries attached to teaching departments. The Shaw Library, founded by Mrs. George Bernard Shaw, is a good collection of general literature for the use of members of the School.

PUBLICATIONS.—The School publishes a quarterly journal, Economica, covering the field of economics, economic history and statistics and including original research undertaken by members of the staff.

Prior to the outbreak of the second world war the School sponsored the publication of works by its staff and students, and the series included over 150 titles. Since the war, however, the School has decided to publish such works in a uniform series, and an arrangement has been entered into with Messrs. Longmans, Green & Co. for this purpose. Two series of reprints of works which by their scarcity are not generally available to students are also published by the School, together with a series of monographs on social anthropology. In conjunction with the University of Cambridge, it sponsors the publications of the London and Cambridge Economic Service. The publication of a new journal in the field of sociology is contemplated.

SOCIAL AND ATHLETIC FACILITIES.—Students joining the School will find wide opportunities for an active social life, which forms so important a contribution to university training. All regular and occasional students automatically become full members of the Students' Union, and as such can participate in its fortnightly meetings, and also join any of the various clubs which exist under its ægis. The Students' Union also publish a terminal magazine, The Clare Market Review and a fortnightly newspaper, Beaver.

The School has extensive playing fields of some 20 acres at Malden, Surrey, which provide athletic facilities for association and rugby football, hockey, tennis and cricket. There are two large pavilions providing changing rooms and shower-baths for both men and women, and a full range of catering and recreational facilities. On the School premises there is a squash court, and a gymnasium. There are men's and women's boat-clubs, which row from the University Boat-house at Chiswick.

SCHOOL PREMISES.—The premises of the School include, in addition to lecture rooms, class rooms and tutorial rooms, two theatres, a refectory and a café, a geography laboratory, statistical machine rooms, numerous study rooms, a Students' Union, common rooms for both undergraduate and postgraduate students, a gymnasium and squash court.

QUEEN MARY COLLEGE

A School of the University in the Faculties of Arts, Science, and Engineering

Queen Mary College originated in a bequest contained in the Will of Mr. J. T. Barber Beaumont, who died in 1841. The College was first established under a Scheme approved by Her Majesty Queen Victoria in Council in 1882. It is now incorporated by Royal Charter, which was presented by Her Majesty Queen Mary in December, 1934.

The College has received generous gifts and endowments from the Drapers' Company, which is strongly represented on the Governing Body.

The College was admitted as a School of the University on the 15 May, 1907, to provide instruction for the Bachelor and Higher Degrees in Arts, Science and Engineering. Students are also prepared for the first M.B. Examination of the University of London and for the Pre-Medical Examination of the Conjoint Board. Admission is open to both men and women.

Entrance Scholarships and Exhibitions are awarded annually by the Drapers' Company and by the College to men and women on the results of the examination conducted by the London Intercollegiate Scholarships Board. These awards are all eligible for supplementation by the Ministry of Education under the University Supplemental Awards Scheme. There are also studentships and prizes.

The Arts Departments are housed in the West Block, which is of modern design, and was opened by the Chancellor of the University in 1938. On the top floor of the same building are modern and well-equipped Zoological laboratories. Other Science Departments are contained in the East Block. The Chemistry Laboratories are housed in a separate building which was completed in 1914 and enlarged in 1936. The Engineering Departments contain modern Civil and Mechanical equipment, High Voltage and Nuclear Physics Laboratories, and a wide range of apparatus for experiments in Aeronautical Engineering.

The founding and equipping of all these laboratories has been made possible mainly by the generosity of the Drapers' Company. Plans are also in progress for the further expansion and development of the College.

Facilities for research are offered in all Departments, and special Research Laboratories are attached to all the Scientific and Engineering Departments. An annual vote is made by the Governors to assist original investigations. The Governors have instituted upwards of five postgraduate studentships tenable by students who have graduated from the College after a three years' course, or who have graduated after two years at the College and have also completed one year's previous study at a recognised University.

There is an excellent Library consisting of 40,000 volumes. The building is modelled on the Reading Room of the British Museum, with seating accommodation for 140 readers. There are also several small departmental Libraries. The main Library is open daily during term from 9.30 a.m. to 7.30 p.m. (12 noon on Saturdays), and during vacation from 9.30 a.m. to 4.30 p.m. Monday to Friday.

A new Hall of Residence for women students attending the College was built at Lynden Hall, South Woodford, on the borders of Epping Forest, and was opened by H.M. Queen Mary in 1938. A Hall of Residence for men students, Elmhurst, is adjacent to Lynden Hall.

In 1937 the Drapers' Company presented to the College £12,000 for the purchase of an athletic ground of 55 acres at Detchleys, near Brentwood.

The College Union Society has for its object the development of the Athletic Clubs and Social Societies attached to the College.

ROYAL HOLLOWAY COLLEGE

A School of the University in the Faculties of Arts and Science

The Royal Holloway College for women was built and endowed by Thomas Holloway. The building was begun in 1879, and completed in 1886, in which year it was formally opened by Queen Victoria.

The COURSES OF STUDY given in the College are such as to enable students to prepare for University of London Degrees in Arts and Science.

The LIBRARY contains over 35,000 volumes. Between 1,800 and 2,000 volumes are added annually. The Transactions and Proceedings of the Royal Society, and the leading English, French and German scientific journals are supplied, as well as some of the more important literary reviews and periodicals.

The Library is open to all members of the College, and, with the exception of certain reference books, any books may be borrowed during term time. Within necessary limitations, books are also lent for the vacations. In all cases the loan of books is entirely free.

LABORATORIES.—The Chemical, Physical and Botanical Laboratories are housed in two buildings in the College grounds. They contain Lecture Theatres, general laboratories for elementary and advanced work, special laboratories for research work, Professors' and Lecturers' rooms, workshops, dark-rooms, etc. Temporary Zoology laboratories have been arranged in the main building.

In 1893 a Botanical Garden was laid out, and a Humus Garden has since been enclosed from the Canada coppice. The grounds, which cover approximately 98 acres, offer exceptional facilities for Botanical work.

FEES.—All students pay an inclusive fee for tuition of £60 a term including residence, or £19 13s. 4d. a term without residence. There is also a laboratory fee of £2 2s. a year for each practical Science subject and a half fee of £1 1s. in the case of an Intermediate subject or Ancillary Biology. No tuition fees are charged for resident postgraduate students. Non-resident postgraduate students are required to pay £16 13s. 4d. a year, or £9 in the case of graduates of the College.

LOAN FUNDS.—The M. E. Bishop Loan Fund was founded in 1897 by past and present members of the College, as a token of affection for the first Principal, whose name it bears.

The Penrose Memorial Fund was created in 1945 by members of the Royal Holloway College Association in memory of the second Principal, Dame Emily Penrose. It is intended to help students of at least three years' standing to prepare for their future careers.

TERMS, 1949-50.—1st Term : 6 October to 14 December ; 2nd Term : 11 January to 22 March ; 3rd Term : 26 April to 28 June.

RESIDENCE.—The College is designed and intended for resident students though non-resident students whose homes are in the neighbourhood may be admitted under special regulations. About 330 students can be received into the College, each being provided with a study-bedroom fitted with all necessary furniture. Common rooms are also at the disposal of the students.

RECREATION.—There is a gymnasium and a swimming-bath. Instruction in gymnastics and swimming is given free to all students. The playing-fields include a full-sized hockey ground (used for cricket during the summer), a full-sized lacrosse ground, five grass tennis courts, three hard tennis courts, a net-ball court, and a squash court. Further facilities for games are being provided ; these will include a second hockey field, five tennis courts and a jumping pit.

The SOCIETIES, etc., of the College include :—

The Royal Holloway College Association formed in 1890 for the purpose of enabling students and lecturers who have left the College to keep in touch with one another and with the resident body of its members. A letter of College news is drawn up once a year and printed for the members of this Association.

Musical, dramatic, literary, debating and scientific clubs and societies exist in considerable numbers. A branch of the Women's University Settlement at Southwark for work in poorer districts of London has existed since 1897. The Students' Union co-ordinates all the various Students' Societies. The annual Theoric fee of £1 10s. covers all games and Union subscriptions.

SCHOLARSHIPS.—Twelve Entrance Scholarships, of £60 or £40 a year, for three years, are offered annually on the results of an Examination conducted in February, and are eligible for supplementation by the Ministry of Education. A certain number of Exhibitions, carrying with them certain privileges in the College but having no monetary value, are awarded to promising candidates who do not gain Scholarships.

At least three Scholarships, of £30 a year for three years, founded by the late Miss Driver, are offered to students of at least three terms' standing.

Several Postgraduate or Research Studentships, of £200 value, are offered annually to past or present students and to graduates from elsewhere ; and the Christie Scholarship for History, of the value of £60 a year for two years, is offered biennially to students who intend to pursue a postgraduate course in History—this may be supplemented to the value of a Postgraduate Studentship.

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON: UNIVERSITY COLLEGE

A School of the University in the Faculties of Arts, Laws, Medicine, Science, Engineering and Economics

University College had its origin in a project, first promulgated in 1825, for founding a University in London by means of public subscription. The promoters had in view three principal objects : to place a University education within the reach of residents in London ; to make such education accessible to those who were not members of the Church of England ; to establish extended and systematic courses of education for the Legal and Medical Professions and for Civil Engineers. The proposal was favourably received and a sum of more than £160,000 in shares of £100 each was quickly raised. The first stone of the present buildings, erected from the designs of William Wilkins, R.A., was laid by H.R.H. the Duke of Sussex¹ on 30 April 1827 ; and lectures in the three Faculties of Arts, Laws and Medicine began in October and November, 1828.

[For further information in regard to the early history of the College see Historical Introduction, pages 6-8 above.]

The original subscribers or proprietors of the College at an early date formally resigned any claim to a pecuniary return on their shares. The proprietary character of the corporation terminated in 1869, when an Act of Parliament was passed which reincorporated the College with extended powers. This Act states that the College is constituted "for the purpose of affording at a moderate expense the means of education in Literature, Science, and the Fine Arts and in the knowledge required for admission to the Medical and Legal Professions, and in particular for so affording the means of obtaining the education required for the purpose of taking the Degrees now or hereafter granted by the University of London."

As the College developed it was found more and more difficult to fall into line with the purely external examinations of the University of London. Out of this and other difficulties grew the movement for a teaching University of London. The result of this movement was represented by the University of London Act of 1898, by which the University of London was reconstituted and the College was given a definite place in its constitution as a "School of the University."

The duty of organising, improving, and extending University education in London was imposed upon the reconstituted University. Those responsible for the management of University College at once realised that the aims of the founders of the College could best be carried out to their full completion by incorporating the College in the University. It was found that the University could not advantageously and easily incorporate the Hospital or that part of the Faculty of Medicine that dealt with Hospital studies (Final Medical Studies) ; hence it was decided in the interests of general University education as well as of medical education to make a separate Corporation for carrying on the Hospital and the School of Final Medical Studies, the University pledging itself, so far as its means and other duties permit, to continue to teach the Preliminary and Intermediate Medical Studies in the College buildings. Thus, for the purposes of government and organisation the Preliminary and Intermediate Medical Studies are controlled by the University, and the Final Medical Studies by the University College Hospital Medical School, as a "School of the University" (see below).

The University College London (Transfer) Act was passed in July 1905, and by the order of the Commissioners appointed under that Act, Incorporation in the University took place on 1 January 1907.

FACULTIES.—The College provides instruction in the Faculties of Arts, Laws, Science, Engineering, and Economics and Political Science. The Faculty of Arts includes the Slade School of Fine Art, the Bartlett School of Architecture (in which are included the Department of Town Planning and the Division of Decoration), and the School of Librarianship and Archives. The Galton Laboratory of Eugenics forms part of the Department of Eugenics, Biometry and Genetics in the Faculty of Science. The College is a University centre for Preliminary and Intermediate Medical Studies (i.e., Chemistry, Physics, Botany and Zoology, Anatomy and Embryology, Physiology, Biochemistry, and Pharmacology). The courses in all Faculties are open to men and women alike.

There are numerous Scholarships, Exhibitions and Prizes, the yearly value of which exceeds £6,500.

LIBRARY.—The College Library contains over 550,000 books and pamphlets. The original Library building was largely destroyed by enemy action in 1940–41, with a loss of some 70,000 volumes. As a result of this damage, the General Library is now housed in Foster Court and about three-quarters of the total book stock of the Library is not available to readers at present owing to the shortage of accommodation.

The Foster Court Library now contains, in addition to a selection of reference works and books suitable for first-year students, the Law Library and nuclei of the libraries in Archaeology (Yates Library), Classics, Economics (Ricardo Library), English, Fine Art, Geography, History (including London History and American History), Modern Languages, Science and Engineering. Parts of the libraries of the Geologists' Association, the Hertfordshire Natural History Society, and the Malacological Society are also housed in Foster Court.

The libraries in Anthropology, Architecture, Egyptology (Edwards Library), Librarianship, Philosophy, Psychology and Town Planning are housed in their respective Departments; some of the books in Chemistry are kept in the Ramsay Reading Room in the Department of Chemistry; and some of the books in Economics are housed in the Department of Political Economy.

The Thane Library of Medical Sciences is situated in the Department of Anatomy and contains works in Anatomy, Biochemistry, Physiology, Embryology and Pharmacology. The library of the Folk Lore Society is also housed in the Thane Library.

The Whitley Stokes Library in Celtic, the Barlow Dante Library, the Carnegie Libraries of American Literature and of International Law, and part of the Graves Collection on the History of Mathematics are temporarily not available to readers. The Mocatta Library in Jewish History was destroyed by enemy action: it is now being reconstituted, but it is not yet available to readers.

The Foster Court Library and the Thane Library are open from 9.30 a.m. until 5 p.m. on weekdays, and from 9.30 a.m. until 12.30 p.m. on Saturdays. In addition, the Foster Court Library remains open until 6.30 p.m. on weekdays during Term.

Registered students of the College, members of the College Staff and College Committee, Honorary Fellows and Fellows of the College, Members of the Court and Senate, University Professors and Readers, University Examiners for the time being, the Principal and Registrars of the University and the Librarians of other Libraries in the University have the privilege of using the College Library and of borrowing books therefrom, subject to the rules for the College Library in force for the time being.

LABORATORIES.—The following departments are provided with LABORATORIES—Anatomy and Embryology, Biochemistry, Biometry, Botany, Chemistry, Chemical Engineering, Engineering (Civil and Municipal, Mechanical, Electrical, Surveying and Photogrammetry), Eugenics, Geology, Mathematics, Pharmacology, Physics, Physiology, Psychology, Statistics, Zoology and Comparative Anatomy.

The FRANCIS GALTON LABORATORY FOR NATIONAL EUGENICS was founded by the late Sir Francis Galton for the study of those agencies under social control that may improve or impair the racial qualities of future generations, either physically or mentally. Its objects are (1) to collect and discuss material bearing on National Eugenics as defined above, (2) to provide from its archives information, under appropriate restrictions, to private individuals and public authorities concerning the laws of inheritance in man, and to urge the conclusions as to social conduct which follow from such laws, (3) to extend the knowledge of Eugenics by professorial instruction, publications, public lectures and experimental or observational work. This Laboratory, forming the Eugenics Section of the Department of Eugenics, Biometry and Genetics, was placed by the University at University College, in the Session 1932-33, on the resolution of the Senate in February 1933. The Department of Eugenics is in the first place a research department, adapted to the needs of postgraduate students and workers training for special investigations.

The Laboratory contains a growing library on Eugenics and hereditary topics, including Sir Francis Galton's own books ; stored material bearing on social, physical and hereditary conditions, including Sir Francis Galton's own anthropometric data, a collection of anthropometric, craniometric and other instruments, and an interesting historical collection of Galton portraits and other Galtoniana. There is a fine bronze bust of the founder by Sir George Frampton, R.A.

The publications of the Laboratory include :—(a) Annals of Eugenics, (b) The Eugenics Laboratory Memoirs, comprising the chief investigations of members of the staff, (c) The Eugenics Laboratory Lecture Series, a popular exposition of conclusions reached, and (d) The Treasury of Human Inheritance, a collection of family pedigrees, illustrating the inheritance of physical, mental and pathological characters in man.

Galton Professor of Eugenics.—L. S. Penrose, M.A., M.D., M.R.C.S., L.R.C.P.

THE BARTLETT SCHOOL OF ARCHITECTURE was established by the combination of the Architectural Schools of University and King's Colleges. The building for the School at University College was provided by the generosity of the late Sir Herbert H. Bartlett, Bart. This building was opened in the Session 1913-14, and the accommodation now includes six Studios for ordinary and advanced students, a Library, a Lecture Theatre and a Class Room. There are also private rooms for Professors and Lecturers, a dark room and cloak rooms. The School is organised so as to give a course of systematic training on a broad basis to students about to enter the architectural profession.

A Division of Decoration, instituted with the co-operation of the Incorporated Institute of British Decorators, provides a three-year course of training, leading to a certificate in Decoration.

The Department of Town Planning, until recently housed in the Bartlett School, is now accommodated in temporary premises at 22 Euston Buildings, where two Drawing Offices, a Lecture Room, a Staff Room, and a Study Room provide working space for afternoon and evening students.

The courses are postgraduate and are open to architects, engineers and surveyors, who study both the technical and the administrative problems of Town and Country Planning.

Professor of Architecture.—Prof. H. O. Corfiato, S.A.D.G., F.S.A., F.R.I.B.A., F.I.B.D.

Professor of Town Planning.—Prof. W. G. Holford, M.A., F.R.I.B.A., M.T.P.I., F.I.L.A.

THE SCHOOL OF LIBRARIANSHIP AND ARCHIVES was established by the Senate of the University on the basis of suggestions received from the Council of the Library Association, and was opened by Sir Frederic Kenyon in October 1919. The Carnegie United Kingdom Trust gave generous support towards the finances of the School for a period of ten years. Since the beginning of the session 1929-30, accommodation has been provided in the Henry Morley building for the library, the Director and staff, and a students' seminar room. The School is organised so as to give a systematic training on a broad basis to students who are already librarians or who propose to adopt librarianship as their profession. It is also available for others who desire to increase their knowledge in one or other of the branches of its work. The course of training leading to the University Diploma in Librarianship for full-time students normally occupies two sessions ; graduates are permitted to complete it in one session ; and the course for part-time students occupies from three to five sessions.

The School also offers a course of training leading to a University Diploma in Archive Administration. This is primarily intended for students to find employment in Record Offices, etc., but is also open to any whose specialised work or studies makes a knowledge of the subject desirable. The normal requirement for admission is a first- or second class honours degrees in Arts of the University of London or other approved University. The course occupies one complete session for full-time students. Part-time students may be accepted ; for these the course will extend over not less than three and not more than five academic years.

Director of the School.—R. Irwin, M.A., F.L.A.

The College possesses the following MUSEUMS—Anatomy, Architecture, Botany, Egyptology, Engineering, Geology and Mineralogy, Johnston-Lavis Vulcanological Collection, Psychological Apparatus, Materia Medica and Chemistry, and Zoology and Comparative Anatomy, besides collections of instruments in the Department of Mathematics.

Facilities are available for postgraduate study and for higher degrees.

For many years the College has been the centre of Agricultural instruction and advisory work in the counties of Kent, Surrey and Sussex, and has made numerous contributions in the field of Agricultural research.

The College buildings were reconditioned in 1946 and 1947 and a scheme of re-equipment is steadily being carried out. Separate units on the College farm have been established for specialised research in Pig and Poultry Breeding. There is a fully equipped Hop Research Department with over 20 acres of experimental and commercial hop gardens. The Economics Department is a centre for the Provincial Agricultural Economics Service. The Veterinary Investigation Centre of the Ministry of Agriculture is accommodated in the College Veterinary Laboratories on the farm, and the S.E. Sub-Provincial Headquarters of the National Agricultural Advisory Service is also located on the College estate.

CHARING CROSS HOSPITAL MEDICAL SCHOOL

A School of the University in the Faculty of Medicine

Charing Cross Hospital was the first of the London Teaching Hospitals to be established with a Medical School as an integral part of the Institution. For over 100 years the School has afforded instruction in all branches of the medical curriculum. At the present time similar facilities are offered and students are admitted for the whole course subsequent to the First M.B., which may be taken at School or at an external institution. Thereafter, the whole course is taken in the Medical School. The opportunity was taken during the restoration of the damage to the school buildings as a result of enemy action in the war, to extend considerably the accommodation available and by this means to provide for full and complete departments of Anatomy and Physiology, which opened at the beginning of the session in October 1947. At that time the annual entry of students was increased to 45, a number still small enough to ensure intimate contact between staff and students. Each student will still be provided with full clinical facilities and will have, during the important periods of clinical clerkship and surgical dressership, the personal supervision of not less than six beds.

Resident Appointments : The number of resident house posts available to students after qualification is greater in relation to total number of students and total number of beds than at any other teaching hospital. All house officers are elected for a period of six months, reside in the hospital where they are provided with free board and laundry, and receive salaries.

Scholarships.—The following are offered annually :—The Thomas Henry Huxley Scholarship of £120 and the David Livingstone Scholarship, £120, both in Anatomy and Physiology ; the Benjamin Golding Scholarship, £120 in Pathology or Biochemistry ; the Edith and Mary Donald Entrance Scholarship ; the George Verity Entrance Scholarship and the Third Entrance Scholarship, each of the value of £200. The examinations for Scholarships are held in May and June each year.

Prizes.—The William Travers Prize of £15 is awarded in obstetrics and gynaecology to a fifth year student ; the Huxley Prize in Physiology of 3 guineas at the end of the second year ; the Pereira Prize, 5 guineas, for Clinical Commentaries ; the Dr. T. H. Green Prize in Clinical Medicine, 5 guineas ; the Llewellyn Prize, £25, for the most distinguished student at the end of his curriculum ; the Llewellyn Certificate of Merit, with £10, for the proxime accessit ; the Dr. H. W. C. Vines Prize in Pathology, £5 ; the Dr. Gordon Holmes Prize in Clinical Medicine ; the Dr. T. Watts Eden Prize in Midwifery ; the J. H. Morgan Prize, £10, for students who have obtained either the F.R.C.S. or the M.S. of the Universities of London, Oxford, or Cambridge ; and the Governors' Clinical Gold Medal for Clinical Medicine and Surgery.

The LIBRARY is commodious, and contains a large number of works of reference, the latest editions of all medical and many scientific textbooks in common use. The chief medical periodicals are also available for the use of the students. It is open daily from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., Saturday, 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The year comprises two sessions during which courses of lectures and demonstrations are given in the following subjects :—Organic Chemistry, Anatomy and Embryology, Physiology and Histology, Pharmacology, including Pharmacy, Bacteriology, General Pathology, Medical and Surgical Pathology, Chemical Pathology, Morbid Anatomy, Pathological Histology, Medicine, Surgery, Genito-Urinary Surgery, Operative Surgery, Anaesthesia, Midwifery, Obstetrics and Gynæcology, Therapeutics and Materia Medica, Hygiene and Public Health, Medical Jurisprudence and Toxicology, Ophthalmology, Oto-Rhino-Laryngology, Dermatology, Orthopædics, Pediatrics, Odontology, Radiology, Physical Medicine, Neurosurgery, Neurology and Psychoneuroses.

The LIBRARY is well provided with Medical and Surgical Works. New works of interest to students are constantly added. The Research Library contains the chief foreign periodicals dealing with Anatomy, Physiology and Pathology. No arrangements are made for the loan of books.

The following LABORATORIES are provided : (1) Laboratories for Bacteriology ; (2) the Hale Clinical Laboratories and the Dunn Laboratories attached to the Medical Unit ; (3) Laboratories for Pathology and Morbid Anatomy in the Bernhard Baron Institute of Pathology which is a department of the College ; (4) A Laboratory for Pharmacology ; (5) Two Laboratories for Physiology and Histology, for general students, fitted with electrical motors, and one for Physiological Research ; (6) Practical Anatomy and Practical Surgery ; (7) A Laboratory for Organic Chemistry and Biochemistry ; for the general class of students, and for Students proceeding to higher examinations, especially those of the University of London.

Facilities for RESEARCH are afforded in the Bacteriological Department, the Physiological Department, the Anatomical Department, the Pharmac-

CLASS-ROOM ACCOMMODATION is afforded in connection with each department in the College, i.e., there are special class-rooms for Anatomy, Physiology, Chemistry, Therapeutics, Materia Medica and Pharmacy, Bacteriology, Pathology, Pathological History, etc.

The Hospital is the largest voluntary hospital in England. Its position in the neighbourhood of the extensive docks, factories, and workshops of the East of London renders it one of the largest accident hospitals in the world. The London Hospital presents a large field for Clinical instruction, and in its Wards and Out-Patient Department exceptional opportunities are afforded for acquiring an extensive and practical experience of all phases of disease.

The Special Departments are attended by a large number of patients and afford to the student the means of becoming experienced in every branch of Medicine and Surgery. The recent additions have greatly increased the efficiency with which the clinical teaching can be given.

The appointments, which are more numerous than at any other Hospital in the Kingdom, are made without fee of any kind, and all Resident Officers are provided with free board and rooms.

ST. BARTHolemew's HOSPITAL MEDICAL COLLEGEA School of the University in the Faculty of Medicine*

St. Bartholomew's Hospital was founded in 1123 by Rahere, who subsequently founded the Priory of St. Bartholomew's. There are 757 beds, including those at the Alexandra Hospital at Luton.

The LIBRARY contains all the standard works of Medical, Surgical, and the allied Sciences, Medical and other periodicals, with a valuable collection of works on Religion, History, and General Literature. It is open daily from 9 to 5, and is in charge of a Librarian who is in constant attendance. Books cannot be taken out of the Library.

The MUSEUM contains the largest and most complete series of Pathological specimens in this country—the growth of considerably more than a century. The actual specimens themselves number some 12,000 and represent almost every known morbid condition. There are, in addition, extensive series of about 2,000 casts and drawings, as well as large collections of specimens illustrating General and Comparative Anatomy and Physiology, Zoology, and Morphology.

There are four LECTURE THEATRES with accommodation for 730 Students, a Dissecting Room with accommodation for 250 Students at work simultaneously, an Anatomical Demonstration Room, a Practical Surgery Room and several large Laboratories.

The Residential and Out-Patient Block, erected in 1902 at a cost of £120,000, contains a Casualty Department, Medical and Surgical Out-Patient Departments, and Eight Special Departments, each complete within itself, namely : Ophthalmic, Aural, Laryngological, Dermatological, Orthopædic, Dental, Gynæcological and Electrical, as well as a Clinical Lecture Theatre, Casualty Wards and Dispensary.

It also contains quarters for the Resident Staff, and a dining hall and common rooms for the students. These are situated in that part of the building facing Giltpur Street.

A new Pathological Department was erected in 1909 at a cost of £30,000. It includes Laboratories for Clinical Pathology, Pathological Histology, Chemical Pathology, Morbid Anatomy, Post-mortem Room, and several Laboratories for special research. The whole is equipped with all the most modern and approved appliances for teaching and research.

A new Surgical Block, containing 10 Wards, accommodation for 250 beds, clinical laboratories for the Medical and Surgical Professional Units and for the Surgical Units, five large operating theatres erected at a cost of approximately £200,000 was opened in 1930, and a new Medical Block was opened in 1937.

In 1933 the College acquired the site and buildings of the Merchant Taylors' School in Charterhouse Square, four minutes walk from the Hospital. Building operations and alterations have been carried out and all the Pre-clinical Departments have now been transferred to this new site from the premises previously occupied on the Hospital site. In addition to the Departmental buildings, Dining Rooms, a Gymnasium and facilities for recreation are provided and a Residential College will be built later.

The Departments housed on this site are :—

Chemistry Department.—This contains laboratories for Inorganic Chemistry and Biochemistry, and research rooms for the Lecturer and his assistants.

Physics Department.—This includes a large laboratory and rooms for research workers, including the Professor's room and private laboratories.

Biology Department.—This is accommodated in close proximity to the Anatomical Department and, like it, is housed in partly new and partly adapted buildings. The lecture theatre, laboratories and research rooms provide more than adequate space for the study of Biology and Comparative Anatomy.

Anatomy Department.—This contains a large, well-lighted dissecting room in conjunction with a lecture theatre and demonstration room, an anatomical museum and modern preparation rooms. The Professor, the demonstrators and research workers have laboratories set aside for their private use. There is space for subsidiary subjects, Embryology, Histology, etc.

Physiology Department.—This has a large lecture theatre, a Professor's room, a departmental library, and large laboratories set aside for Experimental Physiology, Histology and Physiological Chemistry, respectively. To each are annexed private laboratories for the demonstrators and research workers ; and there are many preparation rooms. Connected with this department is a modern animal house and operation equipment.

Pharmacology Department.—In addition to the lecturer's private room this contains a practical laboratory and demonstration room. The Department shares with Physiology facilities for keeping animals under most satisfactory conditions.

FEES.—Entrance fee, 15 guineas. Annual tuition fee payable in advance, 50 guineas.

TERMS, 1949-50.—1st Term : 3 October to 21 December ; 2nd Term : 2 January to 25 March ; 3rd Term : 17 April to 22 July.

The total value of Scholarships and Prizes awarded annually is over £1,900.

RECREATION.—On payment of a single subscription of 30 guineas by Full students, or of 17 guineas by University students who have passed the 2nd Examination, a student becomes a Life Member of the Students' Union including all the Hospital Clubs, and receives each month whilst a student a copy of the Students' Journal. The Club Ground, seventeen acres in area, is situated on the Foxbury Estate at Chislehurst, and is easy of access by frequent trains from London Bridge or Charing Cross. Facilities for recreation are also provided at the new site in Charterhouse Square.

A JOURNAL, which is the property and organ of the Students' Union, is issued monthly, and has a circulation of over 2,000 copies.

ST. GEORGE'S HOSPITAL MEDICAL SCHOOL

A School of the University in the Faculty of Medicine

A Register of Surgeon's pupils admitted to St. George's Hospital exists from the year 1756, the year in which John Hunter became House Surgeon. The organisation of the instruction into a formal School of Medicine dates from a somewhat later period, when John Hunter was a Surgeon to the Hospital. The first lectures to be given in the Hospital were given by Sir Everard Home, about the year 1800, a short course of Lectures on Surgery. Before this time the pupils were Surgeon's pupils and Physician's pupils of the Hospital. The School has been carried on continuously since his time, and has been distinguished by the names of Matthew Baillie, Edward Jenner, Thomas Young, the physicist, Benjamin Brodie, Caesar Hawkins, Bence Jones, and Prescott Hewett. The objects of the School are to give medical education suited to the purposes of students, to encourage advanced study, and to promote research. For the past forty years all the teaching in the School has been concerned with the clinical part of the curriculum. Students joining for the full course do their pre-clinical work at King's College, Strand.

LIBRARY.—The Library, which is well-stocked with current text books and journals, is in the charge of a full-time Librarian. A member of the Medical Staff acts as Hon. Librarian and keeps the Library Committee informed of the needs of the students using the Library.

LABORATORIES.—The Department of Pathology is subdivided into sections of Morbid Anatomy, Bacteriology, Haematology and Chemical Pathology. They are equipped for teaching and research and derive valuable material from their close association with the hospital wards. There is a large Museum, designed for undergraduate and postgraduate teaching and here practical classes are also held.

RESEARCH.—The Allingham Scholarship, the Laking-Dakin Fellowship and the Slater and Smith Fellowships are available for the encouragement of research.

ENTRANCE SCHOLARSHIPS AND PRIZES.—Six Entrance Scholarships in Anatomy and Physiology and General Pathology, ranging in value from £180 to £120, are offered for competition each year. They are intended for students about to begin the clinical part of the curriculum. There are also several prizes, varying in value from £33 to £5, for which students can compete.

TERMS.—1st Term : 5 October to 14 December ; 2nd Term : 11 January to 22 March ; 3rd Term : 19 April to 28 June.

FEES.—Course for the First Examination for Medical Degrees, University of London, £40 per annum ; Course for the Second Examination for Medical Degrees, £44 per annum. For Clinical Students, Annual Composition Fee, 55 guineas. This fee covers all courses in the School and the subscription to the Students' Club.

The CLUBS and SOCIETIES of the School are : the Hunterian Society for the discussion of professional topics, and the St. George's Hospital Club, which has Luncheon and Smoking Rooms on the Hospital premises, and an athletic ground of 13½ acres at Wimbledon, and includes the Gazette and the Rugby Football, Cricket, Lawn Tennis, Boxing, Rifle and Golf Clubs.

ST. MARY'S HOSPITAL MEDICAL SCHOOL

A School of the University in the Faculty of Medicine

St. Mary's Hospital Medical School provides complete courses of study, Preliminary, Intermediate, and Final, for the Medical and Surgical Degrees of the University, and for instruction and research in the various Departments of Medicine, Surgery, and Pathology, and in Anatomy, Physiology, Biology, Chemistry and Physics.

The Medical School was completely rebuilt and opened shortly before the War. The building contains six floors with a basement, and great attention has been paid to the provision of ample space for research work in addition to the teaching laboratories.

The Library and Speech Hall is on the ground floor, and has a balcony running round it upon the first-floor level. It is panelled throughout in oak, 14 recesses being formed by book-cases upon the ground floor for the purposes of private study.

The Library is open from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. daily and contains over 5,000 reference books and textbooks for the use of students in addition to current Medical and Scientific Periodicals.

THE LABORATORIES.—The Anatomy Department contains a Lecture Theatre, Demonstration Room, Museum and several Research Rooms in addition to a large and well-lighted Dissecting Room.

The Physiology Department has a large Lecture Theatre (for 130 students) ; a laboratory for Experimental Physiology, and several Research Rooms.

The Biochemistry Department has a large laboratory, a special lecture theatre, and an excellent research laboratory. There are good laboratories and preparation rooms for Physics and Biology, and special laboratories for Pharmacology and Practical Pharmacy.

The Pathological Laboratories are adjacent to the Museum, and are under the personal direction of the Pathologist. Classes in Pathological Histology, Bacteriology, and Pathological Chemistry are held in a large laboratory which has been provided in the new buildings of the Wright-Fleming Institute in the same block as the Medical School. A large Lecture Theatre for advanced courses is also provided in this wing of the building.

The animal room in this department is constructed upon the most up-to-date principles, all fittings being suspended to facilitate the perfect cleaning of the floor.

Two clinical laboratories are provided in the Hospital for investigations in connection with cases in the wards, and for research in Clinical Pathology, and a large clinical theatre is available for demonstration purposes. During recent years alterations to the Hospital have included two new Operating Theatres and 74 additional beds, thus bringing the total of beds in use up to 476.

Clinical Units in Medicine and Surgery have been established for many years, the Directors being Professors in the respective subjects at the University of London. For the purposes of increasing the number of beds available for teaching, the Paddington Hospital is affiliated to St. Mary's Hospital and classes are held there. Students of St. Mary's act as Maternity Interns at St. Mary's Hospital and Paddington L.C.C. Hospital.

The Medical School provides adequate equipment and direction for the prosecution of original research. Individual work on the part of the students is encouraged, more especially in Anatomy, Physiology, Pathology, Bacteriology, and Pathological Chemistry. Several Research Laboratories have been added in the new buildings for work in Anatomy, Physiology and Biochemistry.

SCHOLARSHIPS.—Application should be made in January for a nomination form for the following Scholarships which are eligible for supplementation by the Ministry of Education :—

- (i) Six Entrance Scholarships of £40 a year for 4 or 5 years.
- (ii) Three University Scholarships of £50 a year for 3 years for clinical students only.

These Scholarships are awarded by competitive interview in March.

Many other Research Scholarships, minor Scholarships and Prizes are also awarded.

FEES.—The Annual Fee of 55 guineas has now been adjusted so as to include the following : Amalgamated Club Fees, Practical Anatomy, Laboratory Fees, Locker rent, and fees for courses of Fevers, Vaccination and Practical Pharmacy.

TERMS, 1949-50.—1st Term : 7 October to 17 December ; 2nd Term : 13 January to 25 March ; 3rd Term : 14 April to 24 June.

AMALGAMATED CLUBS.—Membership, fee for which is included in the annual fee, includes the use of the Students' Union and Restaurant, and all Amalgamated Clubs.

The Students' Restaurant opens on to a courtyard under which is a garage for 50 cars. The swimming-bath is situated on the other side of the courtyard and is provided with a heating system for winter use.

A squash racquets court and gymnasium, with a boxing ring, have been provided on a site adjacent to the Students' Common Room.

The Athletic Ground at Teddington is reputed to be one of the finest grounds near London. It is 13 acres in extent and provides for Football, Hockey and Cricket Clubs. It also has six Hard Tennis Courts and a good pavilion.

ST. THOMAS'S HOSPITAL MEDICAL SCHOOL

A School of the University in the Faculty of Medicine

St. Thomas's Hospital Medical School was founded for the instruction of students in all the subjects of the medical curriculum.

The School Buildings, isolated by a large quadrangle from the Hospital, stand at its southern extremity between the river and the gardens of Lambeth Palace.

Teaching covers all subjects of the medical curriculum, including a course for the 1st M.B. Examination. Students may also read for a Special Honours B.Sc. Degree in particular subjects.

The Library is in charge of a whole-time Librarian. A wide selection of periodicals is purchased and relevant textbooks made available on publication.

The Biological, Chemical, Physical, and Anatomical Departments comprise large Laboratories for Class teaching, Private Laboratories for Research and Lecture Theatres. In addition to the Museum (which contains more than 4,000 specimens) and the Post-Mortem rooms, the Pathological Department includes modern Clinical, Bacteriological, Histological, and Chemical Laboratories and a spacious Laboratory for Class Teaching.

The Department of Physiology is housed in the Sherrington School of Physiology and contains large laboratories for teaching purposes as well as ample accommodation for research work.

Opportunities for advanced study and research are given in the various departments of the School under the superintendence of the Professors and Lecturers, and in the Laboratories attached to the Medical and Surgical Professorial Units.

FEES.—The fees are £52 10s. for each twelve months of study; pre-medical and pre-clinical students pay a registration fee of 15 guineas and clinical students one of 10 guineas; these fees include such incidental expenses as the charge made for Physiology and Anatomy materials and the fee for the Fever Course payable to the L.C.C.

TERMS, 1949–50.—(i) Pre-medical and pre-clinical, 3 terms: 4 October to 16 December; 10 January to 31 March; 25 April to 30 June. Entry—October only. (ii) Clinical, 4 quarterly terms. Entry—April or October.

STUDENTS' CLUBS.—In July 1888 all Student Clubs were amalgamated; every student joins the Amalgamated Clubs on entering the Medical School. They comprise the Students' Club, the Medical and Physical Society, the St. Thomas's Hospital Gazette, and the following clubs: Athletics, Photographic, Chess, Cricket, Cross Country, Football (Rugby and Association), Lawn Tennis, Rifle, Rowing, Swimming, Boxing, Sailing, Squash Racquets, Golf and Fencing.

Opposite the Hospital is the Students' Club, erected in 1927, which provides good club amenities, including meals. There is also a hard tennis court, and two squash racquet courts. Students are permitted to use the swimming-bath in the Nurses' Hostel next door to the Club. There is no residential accommodation available at present, as nurses are occupying the students' rooms owing to bomb damage to their own quarters.

A new 24-acre Sports Ground by Cobham Station, Surrey, has recently been purchased and is now in full use.

The St. Thomas's Hospital Medical and Physical Society has for its object the reading and discussion of papers on Medicine, Surgery, and subjects of general interest, the narration of cases, and the exhibition of specimens of Physiological and Pathological interest. Meetings are held at least once monthly during the Winter Session.

The HOSPITAL.—Sufficient reconstruction from war damage has now taken place to enable all clinical teaching to be centralised in London where there are 500 beds open. In St. Thomas's itself there is, in addition to general medical, surgical and children's beds, accommodation for midwifery, gynaecological, ophthalmic, ear, nose and throat, orthopaedic and dermatological cases.

The Out-patient Department attendance is one of the heaviest in London; there are large Tuberculosis and Venereal Diseases Departments, a Department of Physical Medicine with a training school, and well-equipped Radiological and Radiotherapy Departments. The Pathological Department is an extensive one, with its branches of Clinical Pathology, Bacteriology and Chemical Pathology all with adequate accommodation for research.

SCHOLARSHIPS.—Examinations are held in July for the following scholarships :—

- (i) Two Open Science Scholarships of £60 and £40 per annum respectively, each for a period of 5 years.
- (ii) Two Home Counties Scholarships of £50 and £40 per annum respectively, each for a period of 5 years.
- (iii) Borland Scholarship of £500.

Two University Scholarships for students from Oxford and Cambridge of the value of £50 and £40 per annum respectively, each for a period of 3 years, are awarded by nomination.

There are in addition many other minor scholarships, research scholarships and prizes.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE HOSPITAL MEDICAL SCHOOL

A School of the University in the Faculty of Medicine

The history of University College Hospital Medical School is closely bound up with the history of University College. From the time of the opening of the College in October 1828 until its incorporation in the University of London (1 January 1907), the Faculty of Medicine was governed by the Corporation and Council of University College. Under the conditions of incorporation, the University continues to teach in University College buildings the Preliminary and Intermediate Medical Studies. Thus, for the purposes of government and organisation the Preliminary and Intermediate Medical Studies are controlled by the University, and the Final Medical Studies by the University College Hospital Medical School, which was admitted as a School of the University in the Faculty of Medicine on 1 January 1907, by resolution of the Senate on 28 July 1906.

One of the conditions of the scheme of incorporation agreed upon between University College and the University of London was the provision of an adequate site and adequate funds for the erection of a building for the School of Final Medical Studies. Part of a suitable site in University Street had already been purchased, and the remainder of the rectangular plot bounded on the east by Gower Street, on the west by Huntley Street, and on the north by University Street was purchased with the funds subscribed by a former student of the College. Shortly after this the late Sir Donald Currie, G.C.M.G., made the generous gift of £100,000 for the purpose of erecting the buildings necessary to carry out the scheme.¹ These buildings include accommodation for the Departments of the Medical School, and a Home for Nurses. The name of Sir Donald Currie is thus as closely identified with the Medical School as that of Sir Blundell Maple is with the Hospital.

In 1920 the Corporation of the Hospital received a gift of £835,000 from the Rockefeller Foundation, with the object of increasing the facilities offered by the Medical School for teaching and research, and especially to forward the work of the Clinical Units in Medicine, Surgery, and Obstetrics. Of this sum £400,000 has been used for increasing the accommodation of the Hospital so as to bring the number of beds up to 500, which includes a special extension for Obstetrical and Gynæcological cases, and also to increase the laboratory accommodation in the Medical School. The remainder has been invested for the endowment of certain teaching and research departments.

Through the generosity of Sir Geoffrey Duveen, an Ear, Nose, and Throat Hospital containing 41 beds has been erected in Huntley Street, adjoining the Obstetric Hospital, providing an up-to-date Clinic for the teaching of students in these diseases.

The Medical School BUILDINGS, which communicate with the Hospital, have been designed to meet the modern requirements of instruction in Final Medical Studies, i.e., those studies which are pursued by students engaged in Hospital work and preparing for the final examinations for the medical degrees of the University or for the final examinations of the Colleges of Physicians and Surgeons. These subjects are Medicine, Surgery, Midwifery, Gynæcology, Bacteriology, Morbid Anatomy, Pathological Chemistry, Forensic Medicine, and Practical and Operative Surgery, and Surgical Anatomy. In addition there is ample accommodation for research work.

Special rooms are set apart for the use of students of the Hospital, including the Medical Society's Rooms, Reading and Writing Rooms, a Games Room, two Squash Racquet Courts, a Refectory and Students' Hostel.

The Hospital, built as the gift of the late Sir J. Blundell Maple, was opened by H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught in November 1906, and contains 414 beds. The main entrance faces Gower Street, directly opposite the gates of University College. The Hospital has been built on modern principles, and each Ward is so constructed that, according to a plan devised by the late Dr. Poore, it is completely isolated, and the system of ventilation is most thorough. There are four Operating Theatres ; the Out-patient Department offers exceptional advantages for Clinical Study ; and the dressing-rooms and rooms for the examination of the patients are sufficiently numerous to permit the students to study individual cases without difficulty. The Casualty Department is capacious and thoroughly equipped with all essentials for dealing with emergencies, and there are side rooms containing beds for cases which require special supervision. In the half basement is situated a complete system of medicine-baths. An entire floor of the West Wing is devoted to the Department of Clinical Pathology, including post-mortem, microscopic and chemical investigations. There is also a Clinical Lecture-room for lectures, lantern demonstrations, and tutorial classes. A Tuberculosis Department deals with cases under the National Health Insurance Act.

St. Pancras Hospital and the London Hospital for Tropical Diseases have now been included in U.C.H. teaching group, thereby increasing the number of beds available for clinical teaching to 1,100 and otherwise considerably increasing the scope of clinical material.

THE MEDICAL LIBRARY is open daily for the purposes of study to students of the Medical School, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., except on Saturdays, when it is closed at 1 p.m. This Library contains about 30,000 works on Medical subjects, including all the current textbooks and works of reference required for study or research.

THE MUSEUM OF PATHOLOGICAL ANATOMY (Curator : Prof. G. R. Cameron) is open for study from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. The collection is divided into three sections : Medical, Surgical, Obstetrical and Gynæcological. The Catalogue is so arranged as to serve not only as a guide to the particular specimens but as an epitome of Pathology, a description of the various diseases being placed before each section, in which attention is called to the specimen which best illustrates the different features of the disease. Microscopic sections of most of the specimens in the Museum have been prepared and are available for the use of students on application to the Curator. The Museum contains admirable paintings, 1,100 in number, by Sir Robert Carswell and Sir Charles Bell, and also a collection of old surgical instruments, formerly belonging to Robert Liston.

The Anatomical Museum of University College is open to all students of University College Hospital Medical School on the recommendation of the School Committee.

FACILITIES FOR RESEARCH WORK.—The School is provided with large laboratories for instruction and investigation in Chemical Pathology, Bacteriology, Histology, and Experimental Pathology. In addition there are well-appointed rooms suitable for private research work, each room has been completely modernised since the last war. Application for research in these rooms must be made to the Director. Research workers can receive grants from the "Charles Graham Medical Research Fund," which is administered by the Senate of the University, for the purposes of the School.

DENTAL DEPARTMENT

The National Dental Hospital was established in Great Portland Street, and opened to the public on 11 November 1861. The School was opened at the commencement of the Summer Session on 8 May 1877. It became the Dental School of University College Hospital in 1914.

The School is accommodated in two parts, the conservation rooms, operating rooms and X-ray Department being located in Great Portland Street and the Mechanical and Bacteriological Laboratories, special Orthodontic and Prosthetic Departments and other teaching rooms being located in a new up-to-date building adjoining the Medical School.

The accommodation and fittings are in accordance with the latest requirements for efficient teaching in all branches of the Science and Art of Dental Surgery. The Conservation Room has space for fifty chairs and has been completely re-equipped during the past year. Other rooms are arranged as a Mechanical Laboratory, Bacteriological Laboratory, Orthodontics Department, Special Demonstration Room, Operating Rooms, etc. There is a thoroughly equipped X-ray Department.

Students are entered as students of University College Hospital, and as such attend the classes of Anatomy and Physiology in University College. All other lectures are held at University College Hospital Medical School. They thus enjoy the same educational and social advantages as the other students of University College Hospital.

Each student on entering the School passes through a preliminary course under the care of the Demonstrators, and members of the Staff take part in chair-side teaching. There is an ample supply of clinical material, and abundant opportunity to fulfil all the requirements of the curriculum.

FEES.—An annual fee of £63 (inclusive) to cover the four years' curriculum for the B.D.S. (Lond.) Degree. This fee includes the Life Subscription to the Medical Society or the Women's Medical Club.

The Federation awards a limited number of Travelling Fellowships annually to medically qualified men and women who are holding an appointment or engaged in postgraduate study at one of the undergraduate or postgraduate teaching hospitals or medical schools of the University of London.

The Federation administers, on behalf of the University, the Government Scheme for the Postgraduate Education of Medical Officers on release from the Forces, and organises short refresher courses for general practitioners at general hospitals which are not engaged in undergraduate teaching. The administration of the Federation is carried out by the Central Office, which maintains a bureau of information on postgraduate medical education in the United Kingdom.

POSTGRADUATE MEDICAL SCHOOL OF LONDON

A Federated Institute of the British Postgraduate Medical Federation

The Postgraduate Medical School of London was incorporated by Royal Charter in 1931 as a School of the University and reconstituted by Supplemental Charter in 1946 as an Institute of the British Postgraduate Medical Federation. It is associated with Hammersmith Hospital, which provides the clinical facilities.

The education provided in the clinical departments of general medicine, and general surgery is designed for the training of specialists and consists of clinical work in the wards and out-patient departments reinforced with lectures, clinical-pathological conferences, radiological and post-mortem demonstrations, and attendance at operations. The department of obstetrics and gynaecology is now associated with the Combined School of Queen Charlotte's and Chelsea Hospitals as the Institute of Obstetrics and Gynaecology (q.v.). The full programmes are carried out during the University terms; in the vacation the staff is engaged in research and in more advanced education of selected students. House appointments are usually made from the students at the School, and there is a small hostel attached to the hospital in which students, mostly of obstetrics, can be accommodated. The teaching in the Department of Pathology is based on the requirements of the Diploma in Clinical Pathology. The course starts in October each year, students being selected for the limited places available in the preceding June. Teaching in radiology is based on the requirements for the Diplomas in Medical Radiology. In all departments encouragement and facilities are given to students wishing to carry out original research. Long-term and short-term tuition in anaesthetics is provided for a small number of students.

MUSEUM.—There is a museum planned and organised entirely for teaching purposes.

LIBRARY.—The reference library and reading room contains a large number of current periodicals and journals in all languages.

LECTURE THEATRES.—There are two theatres equipped with epidiascope and cinematograph projector. Each theatre is designed to hold 100 students.

LABORATORIES.—There are suites of laboratories in each of the clinical departments. In the Department of Pathology, there are separate suites for Bacteriology, Histology, Biochemistry, Haematology and Experimental Pathology. Each includes a class laboratory and research rooms.

Dean—Charles Newman, M.D., F.R.C.P.

Secretary—Miss C. O'Driscoll.

Address—Ducane Road, Shepherd's Bush, London, W.12.

Telephone—Shepherd's Bush 1260.

Telegrams—Postgradmed Chisk, London.

INSTITUTE OF PSYCHIATRY

A Federated Institute of the British Postgraduate Medical Federation

The Maudsley Hospital was established by the London County Council at the instance of the late Dr. Henry Maudsley, who contributed £30,000 to the cost of the building and bequeathed at his death a further £10,000 towards the purposes of the Hospital, which are research and training in psychiatry. It was admitted as a School of the University on 27 May 1924, but has now been approved for recognition as a Federated Institute of the British Postgraduate Medical Federation with the title of Institute of Psychiatry. In July 1948 the hospital was amalgamated with the Bethlem Royal Hospital as a Joint Teaching Hospital under the National Health Service Act, 1946.

Besides the wards and clinical departments there are laboratories in psychology, neuro-anatomy, electro-physiology and biochemistry. Research is actively carried on in each of these departments, which are also engaged in teaching. Certain mental hospitals are associated with this Institute for the purpose of teaching particular aspects of psychiatry, and many other mental hospitals co-operate in research projects.

In the Joint Hospital there is accommodation for about 450 in-patients, including 30 children in a special unit, and provision for the treatment of adolescents and senile patients. There are also out-patient departments for children and adults. The illnesses treated comprise a wide range of conditions, including the neuroses.

Courses of instruction are held for psychiatrists, for psychologists and, in conjunction with the London School of Economics, for psychiatric social workers. Systematic clinical training is afforded both at certain associated hospitals, and by appointments to the junior staff of the Joint Hospital (including 22 posts as House Physician (provisionally Grade III Trainee Specialist), 22 posts as Junior Registrar (provisionally Grade II Trainee Specialist) and 12 posts as First Assistant (provisionally Grade I Trainee Specialist)).

Facilities are afforded for those wishing to proceed to a higher degree of the University, or to pursue research into a particular aspect of mental disorder, either as a clinical investigation or in one of the laboratories. A Unit of the Medical Research Council investigating occupational health, and a Research Unit (supported by the Nuffield Foundation) studying the selection of university students, are based on this Institute. The specialised medical library contains in addition to books, current periodicals in various languages relevant to psychiatry and cognate subjects.

Those desirous of opportunities for study and research in the Institute should apply to the Dean or the head of the appropriate department.

Dean of the Medical School—Professor Aubrey Lewis, M.D., F.R.C.P.

Sub-Dean—W. H. Gillespie, M.D., M.R.C.P.

Telephone—Rodney 2634.

INSTITUTE OF CHILD HEALTH

A Federated Institute of the British Postgraduate Medical Federation

The Institute of Child Health was founded in 1945. It was generously endowed by Lord Nuffield with a gift of £10,000 a year for ten years.

The Institute of Child Health is situated at The Hospital for Sick Children, Great Ormond Street, with which it is closely linked. It is intended, when building conditions permit, to erect a separate Institute adjacent to the hospital, in which the lecture rooms, research laboratories, museum, etc., will be housed.

The clinical facilities are mainly provided by The Hospital for Sick Children. Part of the postgraduate class attends in the morning for teaching at the Queen Elizabeth Hospital for Children. The Institute is also linked with the Obstetric Department at Hammersmith Hospital, Ducane Road, where instruction in the care, welfare and diseases of the newborn is carried out.

The Institute of Child Health provides general instruction in paediatrics in the wards and out-patient departments. Lectures and demonstrations in the pathology of children's diseases, including morbid anatomy, are also given. Tutorial classes are held several times a week. Regular visits to School Clinics, Welfare Centres and Day Nurseries are made. Emphasis throughout the course is placed on the preventative aspects of children's diseases. INSTITUTE OF OPHTHALMOLOGY

A Federated Institute of the British Postgraduate Medical Federation

The Institute of Ophthalmology is based upon the Moorfields Eye Hospital Medical School, which was founded by the Hospital in about 1810. Postgraduate teaching and research have been carried on continuously since that date. The School was an affiliated school of the University of London and has now been approved for recognition as a Federated Institute of the British Postgraduate Medical Federation. In 1947 the Royal London Ophthalmic Hospital (Moorfields Eye Hospital), the Royal Westminster Ophthalmic Hospital and the Central London Ophthalmic Hospital were amalgamated to form a joint teaching hospital, the medical schools of the two latter hospitals being joined with that of Moorfields to form the Institute of Ophthalmology.

The education provided in the Hospital and Institute is designed for the training of specialists in ophthalmology and consists of clinical work in the out-patient department, wards and operating theatres of the two branches of the hospital, reinforced with lectures, practical classes and tutorials at the Institute, formerly the building of the Central London Ophthalmic Hospital.

Systematic courses are arranged twice yearly, commencing in March and October, consisting of instruction in the basic subjects for the first part, proceeding to cover all branches of ophthalmology, and practical training is obtained by appointments to the junior staff of the Hospital (including Out-Patient Officers, Chief Clinical Assistants, House Surgeons and Registrars) and by appointments as clinical assistants.

LECTURE ROOM.—Equipped with epidiascope and cinematograph projectors. Seats 100.

MUSEUM.—The museum contains a large number of pathological specimens and drawings illustrating various conditions of the eye and is open daily for the use of students.

LIBRARY.—The Library contains a comprehensive collection of standard works on ophthalmology and periodicals in various languages. A librarian is in attendance all day, and books for reference and from the lending section are available to students and all other workers.

LABORATORIES.—In addition to the laboratories for Bacteriology and Pathology there are Research Laboratories for Physiology, Biochemistry and other associated aspects of ophthalmology.

Facilities are available for those wishing to carry out original research, and one laboratory equipped with epidiascope is retained for class teaching of students.

INSTITUTE OF LARYNGOLOGY AND OTOLOGY

A Federated Institute of the British Postgraduate Medical Federation

The Institute is organised to provide instruction in the Specialty for the whole of the period of training necessary to reach full consultant standard. Founded in 1945, it is closely linked with the Royal National Throat, Nose and Ear Hospital, having absorbed and replaced the post-graduate medical schools formerly associated with that Hospital's two amalgamated institutions (Golden Square and Central London Throat, Nose and Ear Hospitals). In 1949 it was approved by the Senate for recognition as a Federated Institute of the British Postgraduate Medical Federation.

The Hospital has a service of 225 beds, and an out-patient department which is open continuously throughout the week and deals with an annual average of over 20,000 new patients. The whole of the clinical material available in the Hospital has been placed at the disposal of the Institute, thus affording facilities for postgraduate study in oto-rhino-laryngology on a scale not hitherto available in this country.

Besides the clinical teaching which is carried on daily throughout the year in the out-patient department, wards and operating theatres, there are full-time comprehensive courses of lectures and demonstrations running from January to June and from July to December. These courses cover the whole field of the Specialty and of the basic sciences upon which it is founded, as well as the various ancillary and related subjects of medicine and surgery, and include a series of tutorial classes where the emphasis is on the practical side. The anatomy, physiology and pathology related to the subject are also fully dealt with, and there are facilities for dissection as well as a practical class in aural surgery. Students attending the courses are divided into small groups and attached to the different firms as Clinical Assistants.

An advanced revision course (half-time) lasting from 10 to 12 weeks is also held twice yearly. This course, which includes a considerable amount of clinical work, is designed for students preparing for the examinations in oto-laryngology for the M.S. (London) and the F.R.C.S. (England and Edinburgh).

A number of whole-time paid appointments gives selected students in the higher stages of training opportunities of obtaining further clinical experience and of participating in the research activities of the different departments. These posts include a number of Registrarships (of both senior and junior grades), several Research Assistantships, and 10 or 12 House Surgeoncies annually. In addition, there are a number of part-time posts as Out-Patient Assistants.

There is a fully staffed and equipped department of pathology with separate laboratories for research, whilst the ancillary departments of the Hospital include one for Physical Medicine, a Deafness Aid Clinic, two X-ray diagnostic departments and a Speech Therapy department.

MUSEUM.—The museum has been collected and specially organised for teaching purposes.

LECTURE HALL.—There is a lecture hall capable of seating 150 students ; this is equipped with epidiascope and cinematograph projector. There are also several classrooms.

LIBRARY.—A library and reading room is available which contains a large number of textbooks and most of the current periodicals and journals relevant to the study of diseases of the throat, nose and ear. .

Secretary—John H. Young, F.H.A.

INSTITUTE OF OBSTETRICS AND GYNÆCOLOGY

A Federated Institute of the British Postgraduate Medical Federation

The Institute of Obstetrics and Gynæcology was founded in 1948 by combining the Department of Obstetrics and Gynæcology of the Post-graduate Medical School and Hammersmith Hospital (q.v.) with the Combined Postgraduate Teaching School in Obstetrics and Gynæcology at Queen Charlotte's Maternity Hospital (founded 1739) and the Chelsea Hospital for Women (founded 1871). In 1949 it was approved for recognition as a Federated Institute of the British Postgraduate Medical Federation.

Clinical facilities are provided by the three hospitals, and there is a total of 250 beds for obstetrical cases and 155 for gynæcological cases and a premature-baby unit at Hammersmith Hospital of 16 beds and 20 cots ; in addition there are large out-patient departments.

The Instruction is designed for the training of specialists in obstetrics and gynæcology and is based on work in the wards, out-patient departments and operating theatres ; during the three ten-week terms, which commence in January, April and October, there are series of lectures and demonstrations. Twice a year a fortnight's revision course is held which is suitable for candidates for the higher examinations, and once a year there is a week's course for General Practitioners. Fifty students can be accepted for regular teaching. During the vacations a smaller number may attend the practice of the hospital. There is hostel accommodation for a small number of students at the Postgraduate Medical School and Queen Charlotte's Hospital.

LABORATORIES.—The Bernhard Baron Research Laboratories at Queen Charlotte's Hospital provide facilities for research and investigation into all matters related to maternity. There are further laboratories at the Postgraduate Medical School and the Chelsea Hospital for Women.

MUSEUM.—The museum of gynæcological specimens at the Chelsea Hospital for Women affords excellent facilities for the study of pathological material related to diseases peculiar to women. The museum at the Postgraduate Medical School has sections on obstetrics and gynæcology.

LIBRARY.—The library at the Postgraduate Medical School has a section containing the standard books and journals on obstetrics and gynæcology.

LECTURE ROOMS.—There are lecture rooms equipped with epidiascopes at each branch of the Institute.

RICHMOND COLLEGE

A School of the University in the Faculty of Theology

Richmond College, opened in 1848, was erected by means of funds raised in connection with the Centenary celebration which commemorated in 1839 the close of the first century of the existence of the Wesleyan Methodist Church. The College is the property of Trustees and held in trust for the Methodist Conference. For many years it was occupied solely by missionary students preparing for work abroad. Since the year 1885, however, it has ceased to be used exclusively for students designated for overseas work.

The College ACCOMMODATION provides for 60 resident students, each of whom has a separate study and bedroom. The ground-floor is occupied by a large Dining Hall and Lecture Hall with five smaller Class Rooms and Library. Two short wings contain studies. In the Entrance Hall stands a fine statue of John Wesley.

Within the College there is a private Chapel used for public worship. Sunday morning services are usually conducted by a member of the College Staff. For RECREATION there are tennis courts, a games room with two billiard tables and two common rooms. The grounds extend for about eleven acres.

The STAFF consists of a Principal, Professors of Church History and Pastoral Theology, of Psychology and the Philosophy of Religion and of New Testament Language and Literature, with an assistant tutor and visiting tutors in special subjects.

The COURSE OF STUDY extends over three years, and in special circumstances a fourth year of training is given. Lectures are regularly delivered on elocution and the management of the voice.

The STUDENTS of the College are, with a few exceptions, accepted candidates for the ministry of the Methodist Church, received and sent to College by the act of the Methodist Conference ; and in due course, after a post-collegiate probation, they pass into the ranks of the ordained ministry. Exchange studentships are sometimes made with foreign Universities.

The College possesses a large LIBRARY, open without restriction to all members of the College. The Library is well provided especially with Biblical, Theological, and Methodist literature. It is fairly rich in Philosophy, Psychology, History, ancient and modern, and English literature.

THE ROYAL CANCER HOSPITAL

A School of the University in the Faculty of Medicine

The establishment of the Hospital was inaugurated at a Meeting called together by Dr. William Marsden at his residence, 65 Lincoln's Inn Fields, on 10 February 1851, and an Out-patients' Department was founded at 1 Cannon Row, Westminster, in memory of his wife who had fallen a victim to the disease. The present site in Fulham Road was purchased in 1856 and the foundation stone of a building to accommodate sixty to seventy In-patients was laid by the Baroness Burdett-Coutts on 30 May 1859. The Hospital frontage now extends from Fulham Road and along Arthur Street (re-named Dovehouse Street in 1938) to St. Wilfred's Convent garden, adjacent to Cale Street.

The Royal Cancer Hospital is similar in general character to the Cancer and Oncologic Hospitals in America. Its purposes are the better treatment and research into the causes and cure of Cancer, Tumour and allied diseases, and the teaching of these subjects.

The Hospital, with its Research, Radiological and Pathological Departments, was admitted as a School of the University on 24 February 1927 for a period of three years from 1 March 1927, for the purpose of research in (i) Advanced Pathology, and (ii) Radiology in relation to malignant disease.

This approval was extended first for one year and then, in 1931, for another period of three years.

In 1934 the Hospital was made a permanent School of the University.

Postgraduate lectures and courses of instruction are held for students studying for the Academic Postgraduate Diplomas in Medical Radiology. Facilities are also afforded to those wishing to pursue research in the clinical and pathological aspects of Cancer. The following appointments at the Hospital are recognised by the University for the M.D. and M.S. Examinations, viz., Pathologist; Assistant Pathologist; Surgical Registrar; Medical Registrar; Medical Clinical Assistant; House Surgeon.

Facilities are available for research into the physical and biological foundations of Medical Radiology.

There are pathological and physical laboratories in the Hospital. Two Lecture Theatres are well equipped with lantern, epidiascope and cinematograph projectors.

The Library of the Physics and Radiological Departments containing many of the earliest books on radiology from the collection left to it by Dr. Thurstan Holland, as well as a good collection of modern books and periodicals is housed at 24 Onslow Gardens. A file of reprints of articles relating to cancer, radiology, physics, genetics and biology is available for students and research workers. An extensive collection of classified radiographs and lantern slides covering a wide range of abnormalities has been prepared for students studying for the Academic Post-graduate Diplomas in Medical Radiology.

The Research Institute was built in 1911 in the Hospital grounds, and in 1939 the work was transferred to an adjacent building, formerly the Freemasons' Hospital, which was bought for this purpose by Mr. Alfred Chester Beatty, who is now President of the Hospital. The Institute was then renamed the Chester Beatty Research Institute ; it includes a library and laboratories for chemical, biochemical, and histological investigations into Cancer and allied disease.

GOLDSMITHS' COLLEGE

(Opened as a University Institution in 1905)

The site, buildings and grounds of Goldsmiths' College were presented to the University in 1904 by the Worshipful Company of Goldsmiths, who had carried on in them, since 1891, an Institution known as "The Goldsmiths' Company's Technical and Recreative Institute." The Company promised at the same time an annual grant of £5,000 for five years, and this period was subsequently extended to eight years (ending in 1912). In addition to the above grant, the Company have contributed sums amounting to nearly £10,000 towards the cost of repair and extension of the buildings with a view to adapting them more completely to the purposes to which they are at present devoted ; and they have also placed certain houses fully equipped as Students' Hostels at the disposal of the College at a nominal rent.

The buildings of the College comprise a Great Hall capable of seating over 1,000 people, a small Hall seating about 250, a Dining Hall, a Library, a Gymnasium, and a Swimming-bath, as well as Lecture and Class-rooms, Laboratories, Workshops, Art Studios, etc. ; and there are playing fields on the site. The buildings suffered severe damage during the war. They have been largely reconstructed with the exception of the swimming bath, which was destroyed by fire in May, 1945. The buildings and playing fields together cover more than ten acres. An additional playing field of about 16 acres was acquired at North Cray, Kent, in September 1939.

On 23 November 1904 the Senate approved (and on the 25 March 1908 they amended) a Scheme for the management of the institution, which was to be known in future as "University of London, Goldsmiths' College." A revised Scheme of management was approved by the Senate in 1935. Under this Scheme the management of the College is entrusted to a Delegacy, termed "The Goldsmiths' College Delegacy," appointed annually by the Senate and consisting of the three ex-officio members under Standing Order 90 (viz. : the Vice-Chancellor, the Chairman of Convocation and the Principal), 5 other members of the Senate, 2 representatives of the London County Council, 1 representative of each of the following bodies :—Kent County Council, Surrey County Council, Middlesex County Council, 2 representatives of the Goldsmiths' Company, one or more University Professors of Education and the Warden of the College.

The Scheme provides that one of the representatives of the Senate shall be Chairman of the Delegacy ; that reference must, in certain circumstances, be made to the Senate before action is taken on a Resolution of the Delegacy ; that the Delegacy shall appoint an Academic Board which shall be consulted on matters of educational policy ; and that the Senate may from time to time alter the scheme and make regulations which shall be binding on the Delegacy.

The London County Council having undertaken to contribute an annual sum to the support of the School of Art, and the Evening Department of Adult Education, a clause was inserted into the Scheme providing that on matters relating exclusively to the Evening Classes and School of Art supported by the London County Council the Members appointed upon the nomination of County Councils other than the London County Council be not permitted to vote.

The names of the members of the Delegacy are given on p. 199.

The Departments of the College are as follows :—Training Department (day only) ; School of Art (day and evening) ; Department of Adult Education (evening only).

Further particulars of the principal Departments of the College are subjoined :—

I. Training Department.—Principal.—The Warden of the College.

Vice-Principals.—Miss D. M. E. Dymes, M.A. ; E. A. Wheeler, O.B.E., M.Sc.

This Department opened in September, 1905. It is a Training College recognised by the Ministry of Education, and provides accommodation for over 500 students (men and women). Residence is provided in Hostels for most of the women students, and for some of the men students.

The Course taken by most of the students extends over two years, but some remain for a Third Year to specialise in particular subjects. The Examination for which students are, as a rule, prepared is one conducted by the University of London, but not constituting a recognised stage in the course for a Degree.

The Senate have sanctioned the preparation of specially qualified students in this Department for the B.A. (General) and B.Sc. (General) Degrees of the University instead of the Examination described in the preceding paragraph. The Course for the Degree normally extends over four years. For graduates a course for the Teacher's Diploma of the University is provided.

The Ministry of Education pays the tuition fee for "recognised" students who sign a Declaration of their intention to teach in approved schools. "Recognised" students contribute towards the cost of maintenance during term-time in accordance with the income of the parents, the Ministry paying the balance. "Private" students (in respect of whom no grant is received from the Ministry of Education) pay the full cost of tuition and maintenance.

II. School of Art.—Head of Department, Clive Gardiner.

In this Department classes are held on six mornings, five afternoons, and five evenings of the week; but the rooms are open for the use of students at all reasonable hours.

Instruction is given in Anatomy; Drawing and Painting from Life, Still Life, and from Casts; Portrait Painting; Modelling from Life, Still Life, and from Casts; Carving (wood and stone); Book Illustration and Commercial Art; Design, both generally and with special reference to different materials and Arts; Etching, Mezzotint, and Aquatint; Wood Engraving; Architectural Drawing. Instruction in certain Crafts is also provided. Students are prepared for the Ministry of Education Art examinations and for the Art Teacher's Diploma.

The Class fees for the session vary from £5 to £15 in the Day Classes, and 13s. for one evening's instruction per week or 20s. for instruction on three evenings per week; a reduction being made for shorter periods in respect of Day attendances.

III. Evening Department of Adult Education.—Head of Department, J. A. Gulland, M.A.

The instruction in this Adult Education Department is non-vocational in character and is provided mainly by a part-time visiting staff. The principal branches are:—Languages and Literature, Philosophy and Psychology, Social and Political Science, Economic Problems, History, Art and Architecture, Music (Orchestral, Choral and Theory), Appreciation of Art and Music, Dramatic Art, Physical Training and Dancing, Educational Techniques. Courses are arranged for the University Diplomas in the Humanities, together with University Extension and Tutorial Classes in a wide range of subjects.

The sessional fees are 10s. for one evening's instruction per week or 20s. for an inclusive course on any number of evenings.

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON INSTITUTE OF EDUCATION, AREA TRAINING SCHEME.

[S.M. 2361 of Feb. 1948 and S.M. 2268 of Jan. 1949]

Purposes and Constitution

1. The Institute of Education shall consist of such public educational institutions, and such Departments of the University, its Schools and Institutions having Recognised Teachers, as may be willing to co-operate in forming the Institute of Education within the University and as may be admitted by the Senate as Constituent Colleges or Constituent Departments of the Institute of Education.
2. The purposes of the Institute of Education shall be to advance the knowledge and practice of education by research, to encourage the university study of education, and to improve, co-ordinate, and extend the provision for the training of teachers within the Area as defined in the Schedule appended hereto.

Constituent Colleges and Departments

3. The Senate may from time to time admit, either temporarily or permanently :
 - (a) As a Constituent College of the Institute, any public educational institution devoted in whole or in part to studies and research in education or to the training of teachers and, unless for special reasons approved by the Senate, situate within the Area ; or
 - (b) As a Constituent Department of the Institute, any Department of the University or of any of its Incorporated Colleges, Schools, and Institutions having Recognised Teachers, which the Senate may deem suitable for association with the Institute of Education. The Institute of Education, as constituted prior to the coming into force of this scheme, shall not be a Constituent College or a Constituent Department.

4. Before any institution is admitted by the Senate as a Constituent College :
 - (i) The Senate shall be satisfied that it is qualified for admission in the following respects :
 - (a) The constitution of its Governing Body ;
 - (b) The Statutes or other Instruments in accordance with which it is governed ;
 - (c) The suitability of its buildings and equipment ;
 - (d) The number, qualifications, remuneration, and conditions of service of its staff ;
 - (e) The arrangements to enable the academic staff to formulate and express a corporate policy on academic matters and to take part in the management of the institution ;
 - (f) The standard of instruction and research, and the conditions as to the age and attainments qualifying students for admission into it ;
 - (g) The number of its students who are pursuing, or are likely to pursue, courses of study for a certificate of proficiency within the purview of the Council of the Institute, or for a degree, diploma, or certificate of proficiency of the University ;

Nevertheless, if the Senate is not satisfied in all of these respects, it may admit the institution as a Constituent College for a limited period ;

(ii) The Governing Body of the institution shall give to the Senate a written assurance that, as far as the circumstances of the institution allow, it will permit and encourage members of its staff to take part in the central activity of the Institute and to give assistance when desired in the teaching work of other Constituent Colleges and Departments.

5. A Constituent College shall be open to the visitation of the University at any time, and the Senate shall make arrangements for inspecting and obtaining reports at regular intervals upon each Constituent College as regards its efficiency and especially as regards the matters specified in clause 4 (i). The Senate shall communicate any such report to the Governing Body of the institution, and before taking action thereon, shall take into consideration any observations which the Governing Body shall make on it.

6. Admission as a Constituent College or Department shall confer upon the Senate no power to interfere with the courses of study in the institution of any students other than Students of the Institute, or with courses which in the opinion of the Governing Body are necessary to maintain the purposes and traditions of the College or Department.

7. If a Constituent College or Department is a department within an institution the Governing Body of that institution shall nominate a person who shall have the powers and duties of the Principal of the Constituent College or Department for the purpose of this scheme.

8. If a Constituent College or Department is maintained by a local education authority, the Governing Body shall be such body as the local education authority may designate for the purposes of this scheme.

9. It shall be a matter for agreement between the University and the Governing Body of a Constituent College or Department as to which of the members of the staff of the College or Department shall be considered by the University for the conferment of the status and title of Lecturer in the Institute of Education.

10. The appointment of the Principal or other Head of a Constituent College or Department shall be made by the Governing Body, or otherwise in accordance with the constitution of the institution, and the approval of the University shall not be necessary unless it is desired by the Governing Body that the Principal should have the status and title of Lecturer in the Institute of Education, in which case the appointment shall not be made until the Senate has approved, as to academic and professional qualifications, the person whom it is proposed to appoint.

11. At the request made at any time by the Governing Body of a Constituent College or Department, the Senate shall withdraw the status of a Constituent College or Department from that institution. The Senate may for reasons which it deems sufficient withdraw the status of a Constituent College or Department from an institution but shall not do so without first considering any representations made by the Governing Body of the institution.

The Central Activity of the Institute

12. In addition to the activity of the Institute through its Constituent Colleges and Departments, the Institute shall make provision for the following objects among others :

(i) The development of the work formerly undertaken by the Institute of Education as constituted prior to the coming into force of this scheme, and the extension of such work in a centre for higher studies and research in education, more especially in relation to educational problems arising within the British Commonwealth ;

- (vi) To promote an Educational Centre which should serve as a centre of interest and activity for practising teachers, members and officers of local education authorities, and others concerned with education, more especially within the Area ;
- (vii) Any work for which, in the opinion of the Council, provision may more conveniently or appropriately be made centrally than in one or more of the Constituent Colleges and Departments.

13. The Council shall consist of the Vice-Chancellor, the Chairman of Convocation, the Principal, the Director of the Institute, and fifty-two members annually appointed by the Senate in the manner following :

- (vii) Twelve other persons, of whom four shall be nominated by the Academic Council, and three shall be nominated by the Collegiate Council.

14. It shall be the duty of the Council to advise the Senate, and to exercise such executive powers as the Senate may delegate to it in respect of :

(xi) The establishment of relations with bodies and persons engaged in educational activities in this country and abroad and more especially within the British Commonwealth ; provided that any decision of the Council that involves expenditure from the funds of the Institute shall be subject to the concurrence of the Committee of Management in respect of its financial implications.

15. The Council shall have power to convene conferences, on a regional or other basis, of bodies and persons concerned with the training of teachers and youth leaders for discussion of any matter relating to the objects of the Scheme.

If the College provides both for men and women students, the Principal or other Head may nominate an additional member of the Committee. The Director shall not be the Chairman of this Committee.

19. With a view to the co-ordination of the work of the Institute, and the most convenient, effective and economical use of all the resources in the Area for the training of teachers, it shall be the duty of the Committee of Principals to confer on the policy governing the admission of students and on other matters of common interest affecting the work of Constituent Colleges and Departments and to advise the Council as to the arrangements for :

The Conference shall elect its own chairman and determine its own procedure and the frequency of its meetings. It shall nominate the persons to be appointed as members of the Council in category (iii) of Clause 13. It may discuss any matter relating to the Institute and make recommendations thereon to the Council.

The Academic Board

The Academic Board shall consist of the Director of the Institute, the Chairman of the Committee of Principals, the Chairman of the Conference of Local Education Authorities, all Teachers of the Institute who are Professors or Readers, thirty Teachers of the Institute elected by the Teachers of the Institute in accordance with regulations made by the Senate, and not more than six persons co-opted by the other members of the Board. In selecting these six persons, the Board shall have regard, among other things, to educational activities in the Area in fields related to that of the Institute. The Director of the Institute shall be the Chairman of the Academic Board.

22. (i) It shall be the duty of the Academic Board to advise the Council on all matters falling within the purview of the Council which relate to conditions of admission of students, the regulation of courses of study, the provision for research, the establishment of diplomas and certificates of proficiency, the regulation, conduct, and superintendence of examinations, the appointment of examiners, and such other matters as the Council may determine.

(ii) The Academic Board shall exercise such executive powers in relation to any of the foregoing matters as the Council, under the authority of the Senate, may delegate to it.

23. The Academic Board may appoint Standing Sub-Committees to advise it in relation to any special field of work or on any matter affecting the academic welfare of the Institute and more particularly on syllabuses, schemes of examination and assessment and the appointment of Examiners. The Academic Board may appoint as members of such Standing Sub-Committees persons who are not members of the Academic Board and whenever practicable University Teachers in the relevant field shall be included.

28. The Teachers of the Institute shall be :

- (i) Professors and Readers of the University who are attached to the staff of the Institute or a Constituent College or Department ;
- (ii) Persons upon whom the status and title of Lecturer in the Institute of Education has been conferred by the Senate.

29. The Senate may confer the status and title of Lecturer in the Institute of Education, either for a limited period or without time limit, on any member of the staff of the Institute or of its Constituent Colleges and Departments, but the Senate shall not confer such title and status upon a person in respect of an appointment held by him on the staff of a Constituent College or Department, except at the request of the Governing Body of the institution.

30. (i) When an appointment of a member of the staff of a Constituent College or Department, other than the Principal or other Head, is in contemplation and the Governing Body desires that the person to be appointed should have the status and title of Lecturer in the Institute of Education, the Governing Body may apply to the University for a Selection Committee to be constituted in accordance with Regulations to be made for this purpose by the Senate. The Selection Committee shall include persons appointed by the Governing Body of the Constituent College or Department concerned, of whom the Principal shall be one. The recommendation of the Selection Committee shall be transmitted to the Council in respect of the status and title of Lecturer in the Institute, and to the Governing Body in respect of the appointment on the staff of the Constituent College or Department.

The Director may at any time convene a general meeting of Teachers of the Institute for the purpose of considering any matter within the purview of the Academic Board, and he shall do so at the request of the Academic Board, or at the written request of any twenty-five Teachers of the Institute, provided that such a request states the purpose, within the purview of the Academic Board, for which the meeting is requested. 42. As far as practicable, the salary of a particular Teacher of the Institute shall be paid either by one Constituent College or Department or by the Institute on behalf of the University and likewise the tuition fees of a particular student shall be paid either to one College or Department or to the Institute, any necessary financial adjustments being made between the Governing Bodies of the College and the University.

UNIVERSITY LIBRARY

THE UNIVERSITY OF LONDON LIBRARY W.C.1 contains about 500,000 books on all subjects studied in the University. It is equipped with Reading Rooms accommodating over 270 readers at a time, and these rooms are open in term time from 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. from Mondays to Fridays inclusive, and from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. on Saturdays. In vacation periods the Library is closed at 6 p.m. every evening. The Library also lends books and most of the volumes are available for home reading.

Membership.—Every member of the University, internal or external, including all students, staff, and members of Convocation, may apply for readers' or borrowers' tickets, either through the Librarian of a College or other institute of the University, or directly to the Goldsmiths' Librarian. In special circumstances permission to use the Library may also be given to readers who are not members of the University.

The Library may be divided into two parts : (1) The General Library ; (2) The Travelling Libraries. The General Library is that which is used by all readers and borrowers : it contains about 460,000 volumes. The Travelling Libraries form a special department, of about 40,000 volumes, which sends out collections of books to University Extension and Tutorial Class Centres.

The General Library

Outline

Reading Rooms.—There are four main Reading Rooms. The Middlesex South, seating 73 readers, is equipped with reference books on all the main subjects, together with editions of standard authors. The Middlesex North, also seating 73 readers, contains a large collection of bibliographies. These include catalogues of the British Museum, the Bibliothèque Nationale and other great libraries ; national catalogues, i.e. lists of books published in different countries, and classified bibliographies which enable readers to find what has been written on a subject. The Goldsmiths' Library, seating 56 readers, contains a part of the Goldsmiths' Library of Economic Literature of which a fuller description is given below ; and the Map and Palæography Room, specially designed to give good lighting, and furnished with large reading tables for 20 readers, is equipped with maps and atlases and an extensive collection of books on manuscripts and palæography.

Periodicals Room.—Current numbers of about 600 periodicals and sets of back numbers of certain periodicals which are in considerable demand are kept in the Periodicals Room, which seats about 25 readers. This room is also equipped with a microfilm reader.

Music Library.—The Music Library—of which a fuller description is given below—will seat about 25 readers in addition to the accommodation in its audition rooms. It is a library of books on music, of music scores, gramophone records and pianola rolls.

Catalogues.—The catalogue is on cards and the entries are arranged by authors. The Library also publishes annually a "Classified Catalogue of Selected Accessions" and has issued some other printed catalogues of special material, e.g. :—

Catalogue of the MSS. and autograph letters, 1921, and supplement, 1931.

Catalogue of the collection of Proclamations, 1928.

Catalogue of the collection of Broadsides, 1930.

Catalogue of books on Archæology and Art, 1937, and supplement, 1937.

Historical and armorial book-bindings exhibited in the University Library, 1937.

Hand-list of Current Periodicals, 1940, with Supplement, 1949.

List of books belonging to the Sir Edwin Deller Memorial Library, 1944.

Lending.—Books may be borrowed by readers in person or by post. No charge is made except the refund of postage. Not more than four volumes may normally be borrowed at a time by one reader and the period of loan is one month.

Miscellaneous.—The Library has many special collections of which some details are given below, and some of these, notably the Goldsmiths' Library and the Durning-Lawrence Library, are housed in special rooms. The Library also keeps a copy of all theses accepted by the University for higher degrees and these are specially catalogued.

Books are added at the rate of about 15,000 a year and every endeavour is made to keep the Library as up to date as possible.

History

The General Library dates from 1838, when a gift of books was first made to the University. It was opened to readers in 1877, and a further development took place in 1879, when rules were drawn up and brought into force, under which members of the Senate, members of Convocation, and other persons duly recommended by them, were permitted to borrow six volumes, retainable for three months. The Library was transferred at the reconstitution of the University in 1900 from Burlington Gardens to South Kensington, and on October 26th 1906, the late Earl of Rosebery, as Chancellor of the University, performed the ceremony of opening the University Library after its reorganisation and re-arrangement. It was removed to the new building on the Bloomsbury Site in 1937–38. During the War of 1939–45 the Goldsmiths' Library of Economic Literature was sent for safety to the Bodleian Library, Oxford, and other valuable books to the University Museum of Archæology and Ethnology at Cambridge. About 80,000 volumes were preserved by these two institutions throughout the war. In 1940 the building suffered damage from enemy action including the partial destruction of three stack rooms, but only about 200 volumes were lost and most of these have been replaced.

Special Libraries and Collections

During its history the Library has received, as it continues to receive, many important gifts. Some of these have been large and valuable libraries of which details are given in the following paragraphs :—

Goldsmiths' Company's Library of Economic Literature

The Goldsmiths' Company's Library of Economic Literature (about 56,000 books and pamphlets) is intended to serve as a basis for the study of the industrial, commercial, monetary, and financial history of the United Kingdom, as well as the gradual development of economic science generally. The history of economic thought is represented by a collection of books which is almost complete in so far as England is concerned, and fairly comprehensive in respect of the French economists before and during the Revolution. There is also a good collection of the works of American economists, and a fair representation of economic thought in Italy, Spain, Germany, and Holland.

The following subjects, among others, will be found fully illustrated : the early history of English trade, companies, and colonies ; mercantilism and colonial policy ; the navigation laws ; guilds and the towns ; fairs and markets ; the history of agriculture, enclosures, commons, allotments ; the rise of foreign trade, especially of the East Indian, and the French and American trades ; the Agrarian Revolution of the eighteenth century ; the growth of English industries ; machine industry ; the Industrial Revolution ; the large towns and their problems ; municipal and political reform ; factory legislation ; trade unionism ; friendly societies and savings banks ; the co-operative movement ; education ; the condition of the people generally ; socialism in all its forms—Owenism, chartism, the English socialistic movements, indigenous or imported, French, German and American socialism ; emigration and population movements ; the history of the poor law, and especially of the Poor Law of 1834 ; the question of land tenure in England, Scotland, and Ireland ; tariff policy in various countries, especially the Anti-Corn Law agitation, the German Zollverein, and the protectionist reaction in Europe and America after the Peace of 1815 ; financial policy and tax systems ; the development of communication, roads, posts, canals, railways, and telegraphs ; the growth and changes of foreign trade ; competition, its modern developments, abuses, and regulation ; the rise of great industrial and commercial combinations ; interest and usury ; early banking ; the modern developments of banking ; the history of currency and various currency systems ; the history of prices and wages ; index numbers ; international monetary policy ; the great markets for securities and produce ; the history and theory of statistics ; the mathematical theory of economics ; public control and the economic functions of the State generally ; economic criticism and social philosophy. In numerous instances the Library possesses the author's own copy of his publication, and in some cases his corrected proofs for a second edition. It also contains several valuable sets of economic periodicals and academic publications. It may be added that those interested in local history will find in the Library books or tracts printed in many parts of the British dominions at home or abroad.

As far as possible all sides in a controversy find due representation in the Library, and the object of the University has been to make the collection truly representative and historical. It includes a large amount of obscure literature which is important in that it gives a clue to the opinions of the almost unrepresented masses of the people—literature which will probably have for future ages a very special interest. The object has been to mirror opinions, not to judge them.

Special Collections.—Where book rarities are so numerous it is manifestly impossible within the limits of this notice to pass in review even those of more general interest. The Goldsmiths' Library includes Richard Oastler's own collection of tracts on factories, and a valuable set of Factory Commission and similar reports, now very scarce, which were exhibited at the International Health Exhibition of 1884. It also contains portraits and autograph letters of economists and statesmen, views of institutions, bank notes, original Acts of Parliament of special economic interest, and a number of political publications. In 1906 the Sabatier Collection was acquired, containing about 1,000 pieces on French monetary history, particularly upon the Revolutionary period. The collections of Proclamations and Broadsides illustrate in a remarkable way the political, economic and social history of our country, especially during the last sixty years of the seventeenth century and throughout the eighteenth century.

Railway Section.—The Library possesses a railway section, which covers the most interesting period in the history of English railways. It comprises a collection which formerly belonged to John Urpeth Rastrick (1780–1856), who played an important part in introducing railways in England, and includes Rastrick's manuscript note-books, plans and estimates, embracing the period from 1829 to 1854, as well as a large number of early pamphlets on English, American and Indian railways. The note-books contain several references to Stephenson, Rennie, and other well-known engineers, and particulars of locomotives invented by Rastrick himself. A locomotive shown in a sketch in one of these volumes has been identified by Mr. J. G. H. Warren¹ as the "Experiment," one of the most remarkable engines built by Robert Stephenson & Co., and the first recorded rail locomotive with two horizontal cylinders, as well as the first which is known to have had the drives from the two cylinders combined on one axle. There are also sketches in the note-book of the "Royal George" and of the stationary engines for the Brusselton incline. A particularly interesting item is Rastrick's specification for the Kenyon and Leigh Junction Railway, with his autograph on the fly-leaf, and a note by his son Henry stating that this is "the first specification for a railway that was ever made." The collection of maps is comprehensive and includes about seventy working maps and sections of the London and Brighton Railway.

James Turner Temperance Collection.—The temperance collection (about 1,250 items) made by James Turner of Manchester, an early advocate of the movement, consists of histories of temperance societies, books on the progress of the movement in different districts, biographies of temperance reformers, and treatises and sermons on the social and economic aspects of the temperance question. It includes a number of early periodicals, magazines and journals, many of which are printed in the provinces for small societies, and are consequently very rare.

The nucleus of the Goldsmiths' Library was purchased by the Worshipful Company of Goldsmiths from Professor H. S. Foxwell in 1901, and presented by them to the University of London in 1903. The Company has since made considerable gifts to the Library in the form of books, binding, bookcases and furniture, and has contributed £50,000 towards the cost of the new Library building at Bloomsbury. On the historical side, the Goldsmiths' Library is now admittedly one of the finest economic libraries in the world.

Other Special Collections

De Morgan Library.—The first special collection received is the library of mathematical and astronomical books formerly belonging to the late Professor Augustus De Morgan, which was purchased in its entirety by the first Baron Overstone and presented by him to the University in 1871 "as a testimony of his appreciation of the service which that body has rendered to the extension and improvement of education in all its branches throughout the United Kingdom, and in the hope that it may prove the first fruits of a library which shall ere long become in all respects such as the University of London ought to possess." It consists of about 4,000 volumes and pamphlets, and includes a considerable number of rare and valuable books.

Grote Library.—The second special collection is the library of the late George Grote, who played so large a part in the early history and politics of the University of London. It was bequeathed to the University by a codicil to his will dated May 9th 1871. The bequest was subject to any selection or disposition of the books which might be made by Mrs. Grote during her life, but the greater number of them was at once transferred by her to the University. They consist mainly of Greek and Latin classics and books on Greek and Roman history and on archæology and number in all about 5,000 volumes and 2,500 pamphlets. The classical side of the Library was augmented about the same time by the donation from

Sir Julian Goldsmid of £1,000 for the special purpose of purchasing Greek and Latin books.

Library of the British Association.—The Library of the British Association was presented to the University in 1879. It consists chiefly of long sets of journals which the Association had received before that date by exchange of their publications with other Societies.

Shaw-Lefevre Russian Library.—In 1880 a library of Russian books, collected by Sir John George Shaw-Lefevre, was presented by Lady Shaw-Lefevre. It contains among other rarities a copy of the first Russian translation of the Vicar of Wakefield, printed at Moscow in 1786.

Lady Welby Library.—The Lady Welby Library (1,500 vols. and about 1,000 pamphlets) consists chiefly of works on theology, philosophy, economics, education, science and philology, which were collected and annotated by the late Hon. Victoria Lady Welby. It was presented by Sir Charles Welby to the University Library in 1912, conditionally on its being kept intact and housed at the Central Building of the University.

Eram Collection.—In 1912 Mrs. R. V. Eram presented a collection of Italian books (300 vols.) which now forms part of the Italian literature section in the Library of over 1,500 volumes.

Preedy Memorial Library.—This Memorial Library of books on archæology and art was founded by Mrs. Preedy in 1922 in memory of her son, Lieut. John Benjamin Knowlton Preedy, M.A., who was formerly Secretary in the University Extension Department of the University of London, and who lost his life in 1917 in the Great War. An endowment fund provides a sum of money annually, which is expended on books on archæology and art, the subjects in which Lieutenant Preedy was particularly interested. The collections in the University Library on these and cognate subjects are now very large.

Dr. A. D. Waller Memorial Library.—A library of reference books and periodicals on physiology and psychology was established in connection with the University Library in 1923 as a memorial to the late Dr. Augustus Désiré Waller, formerly Senator and Director of the Physiological Laboratory in the University of London. It contains about 2,000 volumes.

Hitchcock Library.—In 1925 the library of the late Rev. George Stewart Hitchcock (about 2,000 vols.), consisting chiefly of books on philosophy, theology and church history, was presented in his memory by Mrs. Hitchcock.

Durning-Lawrence Library.—This library, which contains about 5,750 volumes, many of the greatest rarity and value, was bequeathed to the University by Lady Durning-Lawrence in 1929. A part of the collection is housed in a room in which has been reproduced the library of Sir Edwin Durning-Lawrence as it was in his lifetime at No. 13 Carlton House Terrace. In addition to many other first editions and bibliographical treasures and an extensive collection of works on the Bacon-Shakespeare controversy, it contains a number of books printed before 1500, making a notable addition to the collection of incunabula in other sections of the University Library; a fine set of the first four folio editions of Shakespeare's works; an exceptionally large Bacon collection; a collection of original and early editions of Elizabethan, Jacobean and Caroline authors and dramatists and of Restoration plays; a collection of Defoe's works, mostly in original or early editions; a small but valuable Cervantes collection; a collection of Rosicrucian literature; some books on secret societies; and several rare works on emblems. The Durning-Lawrence Library is also remarkable for some early Bibles and a number of fine armorial bindings.

Education Department and Quick Memorial Library.—The Education Department of the University Library consists of an extensive collection of books on the theory, practice and history of education, and the methodology of individual subjects ; also a selection of the more important educational periodicals and a collection of school text books. Some handsomely bound books in this department were presented by the Collège de France on the occasion of their visit to the University of London in 1906. The Quick Memorial Library was collected by the Rev. Robert Hebert Quick and presented by his widow in 1900 to the Teachers' Guild (afterwards known as the Education Guild) of Great Britain and Ireland. The Quick Library was transferred to the University Library by the Education Guild in 1929, together with a number of volumes from the library of William Henry Widgery, and other collections formerly belonging to the library of the Guild. It contains about 1,000 books, including 90 bound volumes of collected pamphlets, and is especially rich in old text books for the schoolroom and for the study of the different leading and subsidiary subjects. The Quick Memorial Library is restricted to purposes of research and reference within the University Library, and is available, under the safeguards provided in the Rules, for use by accredited students of any nation.

Mrs. Humphry Ward Collection.—This collection of books and pamphlets on the Great War (1914–18) was formed by Mrs. Humphry Ward, the novelist, and used by her when she undertook, at the request of Theodore Roosevelt and with the encouragement of the British Government, to write her Letters to an American Friend, later republished as England's Effort (1916), Towards the Goal (1917) and Fields of Victory (1919). Mrs. Humphry Ward was at the same time allowed special facilities for seeing the Army in the field, the Navy, and the work in munitions factories. On the death of his wife the collection was given by Mr. Humphry Ward to General Sir Neville Lyttelton and was presented to the University Library by Lady Lyttelton in 1931.

Crofton Collection.—This collection consists of about 550 volumes of small format, chiefly reprints of English and French literary works. The collection was presented to the Library in 1932 by the late Mr. Cecil Frederick Crofton, the actor.

Harry Price Library of Magical Literature.—This Library was collected by the late Mr. Harry Price and placed in the University Library on permanent loan in 1937. It contains over 14,000 volumes and pamphlets on psychic phenomena and pseudo-phenomena, and has been developed along lines useful to the research student in several branches of study. The collection covers four centuries, and is conspicuously strong in occult works of the sixteenth and seventeenth centuries, including many book rarities. Books relating to psychic and other impostors are well represented.

Sir Edwin Deller Memorial Library.—Since 1941 gifts of money have been received from an anonymous donor for the purchase of books to form a special collection as a memorial to the late Sir Edwin Deller, Principal of the University from 1929 to 1936. The books bought under the gift are to be "of a type which would not otherwise be acquired". A special catalogue of the books purchased for the Sir Edwin Deller Memorial Library was issued in 1944.

F. Stroud Read Collection.—Mrs. Stroud Read presented in 1941 a collection of books, mainly on the Balkans and Byzantine history, from the library of her husband, the late F. Stroud Read. Mrs. Read has since made two further additions to this gift, which now numbers about 3,500 volumes.

Austin Dobson Collection.—In 1945 Mr. Alban T. A. Dobson presented to the Library his unique and valuable collection of the works of his father, the poet Austin Dobson. The Collection consists of about 500 volumes and contains every edition of the books, all in their original bindings, many privately printed items, excerpts from magazines bound in 50 volumes and the original manuscripts of Austin Dobson's Poems.

Reginald Arthur Rye Memorial Library.—Mrs. R. A. Rye presented to the Library in 1948, as a memorial to her husband, the late Reginald Arthur Rye, Goldsmiths' Librarian of the University from 1906 to 1944, a special collection of books and pamphlets on Ancient Egypt from his private library.

Memorial to Lord Snell.—In 1948 the Council of the Ethical Union made a gift of a sum of money which had been subscribed to form a memorial fund to the late Lord Snell. The interest from this fund is to be applied to the purchase of books on Natural Religion and Philosophy (including Ethics) for the University Library.

Parliamentary Papers and Debates.—In 1923 and 1925 the Reform Club presented to the University Library a collection of Parliamentary Papers ("Blue Books"), which is arranged by subject from 1816 to 1835, and in sequence of publication from 1835 to 1903. It contains about 67,500 items, bound in 5,587 volumes. A selection of the more important publications before 1816 and from 1903 to 1939, and a complete run from 1940 to date, are also in the Library, and a complete set of Parliamentary Debates ("Hansard") will be found in the Goldsmiths' Library.

Miscellaneous.—Many sections of the Library which have been built up by purchase and by smaller gifts of books are as strong or stronger than some of the special collections mentioned above. The Library is particularly rich in the humanities, especially in western literature and languages and in history, geography, philosophy, archaeology and art. Its section on archaeology contains a particularly good collection on Egyptology, and within the history section is a representative collection of books on London, including the City Livery Companies. It has also very strong sections on bibliography and palaeography.

Other Donations

Besides the special collections presented to the Library which are mentioned above, the University has received valuable donations from Her Majesty Queen Mary; the Right Hon. the Earl of Athlone, Chancellor of the University, and H.R.H. Princess Alice; the Air Ministry; the first Baron Avebury; Sir George Barstow, K.C.B., LL.D.; the late Earl Beauchamp; H.E. the Belgian Ambassador; Professor H. In addition, a large collection of valuable books and important sets of periodical publications have been taken over from the London Institution Library and the Educational Library formerly at South Kensington.

Other gifts are frequently received from authors, readers, universities, libraries, institutions, societies, public departments, and others interested in the welfare of the University Library.

Manuscripts

The Library of the University of London, being of comparatively recent foundation, has not received from the past any rich legacy of mediæval manuscripts such as are to be found in the libraries of the older Universities and their Colleges. Nevertheless, besides several manuscripts of considerable interest and importance which were acquired with the Goldsmiths' Library, it contains one item of outstanding value. This is the manuscript life of the Black Prince which was presented to His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, afterwards King Edward VIII, by members of the University of London on the occasion of the conferment on him of the honorary degrees of Master of Commerce and Doctor of Science of the University of London in May 1921, and placed by him on permanent loan in the University Library. This manuscript was written at the end of the fourteenth century, and contains a metrical chronicle in French verse by Chandos, the domestic Herald of Sir John Chandos, commemorating the life and feats of arms of Edward the Black Prince. The poem was composed about 1385, some nine years after the Black Prince's death, and is known only in one other manuscript, which is in the Library of Worcester College, Oxford. It is one of the most valuable authorities on certain episodes in the Hundred Years' War, and is in all probability the source of almost all our information respecting the years 1366 and 1367. The Library also possesses the original agreement made in Calais in 1413 between the envoys of Henry V and the Duke of Burgundy, redressing infringements of the truce with Flanders. An historical document of tragic interest is a signed dispatch in Arabic sent by General Gordon from Khartum on 22 June, 1884, and received on 23 August.

Music Library

In 1925 the Senate, on the recommendation of a special Music Committee charged with the duty of making suggestions as to the place of music in the curriculum and social life of the University, decided to establish a Music Library in connection with the University Library. It was opened on 7 December, 1926, and includes music scores and books on music, a reading room and three audition rooms. The Music Library contains an autoradiogram ("His Master's Voice") presented by the Gramophone Company, an "E.M.G." hand-made gramophone with electrical reproducer, a "Steck" pianola pianoforte, and collections of records and pianola rolls. The Rev. G. F. Handel Elvey has placed on permanent loan in the library the collection of music formed by his father, the late Sir George Elvey, and valuable donations of books and scores have been made by the Royal College of Music, Mrs. L. H. Bennett, Dr. Paul Haas, the late Sir Percy C. Buck, and Sir Stanley Marchant. An important gift was received in 1932 from the Carnegie United Kingdom Trust which consists of a number of rare and valuable works on music which the Trustees acquired at the sale of the Alfred Henry Littleton Library. This collection includes examples of early compositions, mostly English, and some important theoretical works of the 15th, 16th and 17th centuries. In addition, the Trustees have presented a unique collection of some 20,000 photostat reproductions of Tudor church music. The Music Library is indebted to Dr. R. Winstanley Lunt for the gift of some 500 pianola rolls; and the Walter Yeomans Bequest, received in 1941, added to the Library a number of music scores, books on music, and gramophone records. In 1944 Brigadier-General R. N. Smyth presented copies of the operas of his sister, the late Dame Ethel M. Smyth.

The Music Library is open to accredited persons whose applications are considered satisfactory by the Librarian.

UNIVERSITY UNION

The University of London Union Society was established in February 1921, and received the official recognition of the Senate later in that year. In 1929 it was reorganised on a federal basis as the University of London Union. Most of the Colleges in the University have been affiliated to the Union, and many of them pay an additional capitation fee entitling all their members to the club facilities of the Union premises.

The premises of the University Union when first established were in an army hut on a waste piece of land forming part of what, some years later, became the "Bloomsbury Site." When the hut was demolished to allow for building, the Union was accommodated in houses at the south end of Torrington Square. As the new buildings spread north, the Union has had to be moved more than once, and is at present housed in Woburn Square.

The Union premises include a refectory, lounges, library, games rooms, bathroom, and headquarters for most of the student institutions of the University.

A permanent home for the Union is being planned and will be erected as soon as possible.

The site chosen is at the north-west end of the square and the Union has once again—but for the last time—moved into temporary premises, to allow for the clearance of the site and the erection of the new permanent home, which is planned to provide a gymnasium, swimming bath, squash and badminton courts, common-rooms, meeting-hall, etc.

Information concerning the Union may be obtained on application to the Secretary, the University Union, 30-31 Woburn Square, W.C.1. (Telephone : Museum 5175.)

UNIVERSITY OF LONDON COMMERCE DEGREE BUREAU

The Commerce Degree Bureau was constituted under a Declaration of Trust approved by the Senate of the University of London in July 1920, in connection with the Institution of Degrees in Commerce, and amended in March 1947. It is under the control and management of the Commerce Degree Bureau Committee, consisting of the three official members and not less than eight members appointed annually by the Senate, of whom four are nominated by the Council for External Students.

The function of the Commerce Degree Bureau is to advise and assist external students preparing for the B.Com. Examinations, and postal courses of study are provided for those students who are unable to obtain adequate class instruction in their own locality.

It should be noted that the pursuance of a course of study under the direction of the Commerce Degree Bureau does not entitle a student to be regarded as an "Internal Student" of the University, and the Bureau's courses of study are not deemed to be "Courses of Study approved by the University" for the purpose of internal registration.

The courses of study provided by the Bureau cover all the subjects normally taken by external students in the Intermediate and Final B.Com. Examinations. They are under the direct supervision of the leading teachers in the University responsible for the internal courses for the B.Com. Degree, assisted by a staff of highly-qualified Tutors, most of whom are also teachers in the Schools and Colleges of the University.

Details of the facilities for part-time study available are given in the Prospectus, obtainable from the Secretary, University of London Commerce Degree Bureau, Senate House, W.C.I.

UNIVERSITY APPOINTMENTS BOARD

The Appointments Board was constituted by the Senate in 1909 to assist Graduates and Students of the University in obtaining appointments, and to co-ordinate and supplement the work done by the Colleges and Institutions of the University in this direction.

The following are eligible to register with the Board :—

- (b) Holders of University of London Diplomas.

DEPARTMENT OF EXTRA-MURAL STUDIES

By statute, the primary function of this Department is to provide, "for persons who are unable to pursue courses of study in the University, facilities for instruction and study of University standard (other than courses leading to a degree)."

By agreement with the other Universities, the Extra-Mural Department of the University of London arranges lectures and classes in the administrative County of London, the Counties of Middlesex and Surrey, and the southern parts of Hertfordshire and Essex. Any group of citizens resident in that area may apply to the Department for advice and assistance in formulating proposals for carrying out University studies in the sense prescribed by the Statutes.

The work of the Department is financed mainly by grants from central University funds together with contributions from the Ministry of Education and from Local Education Authorities : a small part of the cost is borne by students' fees.

The Department is at present organised in three sections :—

- I. University Extension, first formally undertaken by the University in 1901 ;
- II. University Tutorial Classes, first undertaken in 1909 ;
- III. Vocational Diplomas, the first of which was established in 1909.

Director—Allan McPhee, Ph.D., M.A., B.Com.

I. UNIVERSITY EXTENSION

This work which was carried on for some years by the University Extension Society before it was entrusted to the University has developed five main "branches" :—

(a) LOCAL LECTURE COURSES, where groups of citizens or public institutions are assisted by the University in providing courses of lectures and discussions by lecturers approved by the University ;

(b) DIPLOMA COURSES, normally consisting of four series of 24 lectures, and extending over four years, with examinations at the end of each of the four years ;

(c) SESSIONAL COURSES, intended for smaller groups of students desiring to undertake sustained study of a limited topic, more intensive than the lecture courses.

(d) RESIDENTIAL COURSES (some providing opportunities for field studies) and Week-end Schools.

(e) COURSES, usually on topics of international concern, in which each lecture is given by a different speaker who is a specialist in the particular subject under consideration. These courses are designed to appeal not only to British students but also to students from other countries, and often the speakers as well as the audiences are drawn from several different nationalities.

In all this work, which may relate to any subject that can be described as a "liberal study," discussions, reading, and the writing of essays are encouraged ; but are voluntary on the part of individual students and not obligatory.

Specially selected books from the University's Travelling Library are put at the disposal of any class or course.

The Diploma courses are restricted to the following subjects :—History ; Literature ; Economics ; Social Studies ; History of Art ; Biblical and Religious Studies ; International Affairs.

Officer to whom communications should be addressed—C. P. Thomas, B.A.

II. UNIVERSITY TUTORIAL CLASSES

The aim of the University Tutorial Classes is to bring a liberal education of a University standard within the reach of working men and women. They do not provide vocational instruction.

The work is based upon the following principles :—

(a) The body entrusted with the management of the classes consists of an equal number of University representatives and representatives of bodies interested in the promotion of adult education of a University standard, the latter being chosen so as to secure the representation of the interests of working men and women ;

(b) The classes are limited in size (twenty-four students) to give all members an opportunity of contributing to the work of the group ;

(c) The study is continuous and the classes are of two types : (i) Tutorial or Three-Year Courses of twenty-four meetings each year in one subject or group of cognate subjects, and (ii) Sessional Courses of twenty-four meetings. The students undertake to attend weekly, and to do the written work and reading set by the Tutor ;

(d) The subjects studied are those in which working people have a special interest, and for which there is an express demand. The wishes of the students are taken into account in the formation of syllabuses.

The classes work under Regulations of the Ministry of Education. No examinations are held, no certificates are awarded, and the fees are low. Books are provided by the University. Residential Summer Schools are arranged annually in August for selected students. Week-end and Saturday Schools are held earlier in the year.

EXAMINATION OF SCHOOLS

OUTLINE OF THE SCHEME AND REGULATIONS FOR 1949-50

The following brief summary may be found useful. Detailed Regulations may be obtained on application to the Secretary to the Matriculation and School Examinations Council.

The University is prepared to hold in schools the General and Higher School Examinations under the following conditions—

(a) that the School is under inspection approved by the University, and (b) that the course of instruction given in the School and the curriculum pursued by the pupils have been approved by the University.

A visit to the school by an Inspector appointed by the University for the purpose of holding an Oral Examination in Modern Languages is essential.

The School Certificate of the General School Examination is awarded to pupils who—

(a) have pursued a course of study at a School or Schools under inspection by the University or the Ministry of Education, and

(b) have passed the General School Examination at one and the same examination in accordance with the scheme set out in the Regulations.

The standard of the General School Examination is one which a well-educated boy or girl of the age of sixteen to seventeen may reasonably be expected to reach. A candidate who reaches in the necessary subjects and at one and the same examination the standard required for Matriculation is eligible, if and when he has attained the prescribed age, to apply for registration as a Matriculated Student of the University. A candidate who obtains a General School Certificate and a Higher School Certificate can also qualify for Matriculation.

The name of the candidate and of his School, his date of birth, and the subjects in which he has satisfied the Examiners with the grade of success in each, are stated on the School Certificate.

The General School Examination is recognised by the Ministry of Education as a First Examination, and the School Certificates awarded to candidates are attested by the Ministry of Education.

The Higher School Certificate is awarded to pupils on leaving school provided that they—

(i) have pursued a course of study for a period of at least two years at a School or Schools under inspection by the University or the Ministry of Education.

(ii) have passed the Higher School Examination at one and the same examination in accordance with the scheme set out in the Regulations.

The Higher School Examination is intended for pupils who, after passing the General School Examination, remain at school and specialise in certain subjects. The Examination should normally be taken two years after passing the General School Examination, and the standard is intended to be such as might reasonably be expected as the result of two years' school work on the syllabus provided.

Under certain conditions it is possible for candidates at this Examination to qualify for exemption from Intermediate Examinations in Arts or Science or Commerce or Economics or Engineering, or from the First Examination for Medical Degrees.

The Higher School Examination is recognised by the Ministry of Education as a Second Examination, and the Certificates awarded to candidates are attested by the Ministry of Education.

The General and Higher School Examinations are held at Midsummer each year. The General School Examination is also held in December.

The School Examinations of the University are accepted under certain conditions as exempting from other examinations. Inquiries as to the conditions of exemption should be addressed to the Bodies from whom such privileges are sought.

The University does not enter into communication with individual pupils regarding the School Examinations or Certificates.

CO-OPERATION OF TEACHERS.—The Matriculation and School Examinations Council includes amongst the twenty members appointed by the Senate eight persons selected to represent the views of Secondary Schools. A conference is held once a year with representatives of the Joint Committee of the Four Secondary Associations for the purpose of discussing questions arising out of the School Examinations ; and special conferences are held from time to time with Teachers of particular subjects. Head Masters and Head Mistresses of Schools examined by the University are invited and advised to forward to the University classified lists for each subject of the Examination taken at their several Schools, dividing the pupils into groups in each subject according to the relative merit of their work in School ; such estimates to be communicable to the Examiners, for consideration in doubtful cases only, after they have marked the candidates' scripts.

At Midsummer, 1948, 436 schools presented 6,636 candidates for the Higher School Examination, and 418 schools presented 27,858 candidates for the General School Examination.

Statistics

Explanatory Note

The classification "Internal Student" in the University includes students following degree courses at Institutions with Recognised Teachers as well as students at Schools of the University and Senate Institutions.

The statistics of the University Grants Committee relate only to students at Schools of the University and Senate Institutions. They cover, however, all full-time students taking courses of a university standard, whether they are reading for degrees of the University of London or not. They include, for example, clinical students at London Medical Schools who are registered for degrees at Oxford or Cambridge, and who are therefore not "internal students."

In the Shadow of St. Paul's

SINCE 1710, when Sir Christopher Wren completed his greatest work, St. Paul's Cathedral has cast its shadow beyond the bustle of Ludgate Hill to the comparative calm of Warwick Square. In this quiet corner of the City of London stands Little Paul's House, the home of the University of London Press, adjacent to the site of its previous premises in Warwick Lane, destroyed by fire during the early part of the war.

Visitors to London are cordially invited to our showroom, where all our publications can be inspected. If you have any particular problems concerning supplies please write to us and we will do our best to help you.

an old print*

A Fifteenth Century Fire Extinguisher

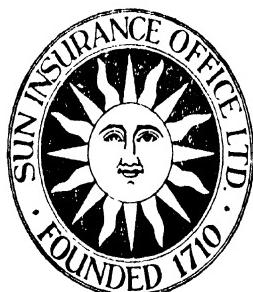

Few probably realise that the French word "Couver-feu," from which "The Curfew Bell" is derived, refers not to the signal but the appliance for extinguishing a fire.

These Couvres-feu were made of pieces of copper riveted together and shaped somewhat like a Dutch Oven. At sundown the fire was raked to the back of the hearth and the cover or Curfew placed over it with the open part against the chimney so that air was excluded and the fire soon died away.

The hardship of being deprived of a fire in the evening led to a discontinuance of the Curfew, but as all citizens were not careful, from time to time disastrous fires occurred.

When in 1710 the Sun Fire Office came into being it gave valuable service in the limitation of fire damage as well as providing insurance cover for which it is famous to-day.
